Politics would present a field of all satisfying bliss—if only there were offices enough to go all round.

Chamberlain is a fine man but his politics is not the kind that makes Oregon governors in these days.

An ambitious New York lad has wrecked his mind from over practice on his violin. This is a new case on record.

From now on until June all the newspapers will be kept busy telling the people why it is especially desirable just at this critical time that their candidates for office be elected.

Editor Porter of the Oregon City Enterprise, a member of the last legislature and late active but disappointed candidate for the nomination for state printer, announces through his paper that he is now out of politics and says any man should not mix in politics if he is going to run a newspaper.

Western Kansas editors have a unique way of prodding up delinquent subscribers, as the following indicates.

The platform adopted by Oregon's democracy in state convention to attract the suffrages of the people has the same cheerful old democratic ring.

It looks very much like "Seattle" is to be the abode of the democrats in the next campaign. According to them, by our treatment of the Philippines we are "throttling liberty" and are making obsolete the Declaration of Independence.

If fame is estimated according to the number of postage stamps used, bearing likeness of our national heroes, we should reverence men of achievement in this order.

STRAWBERRY AGITATION. Hon. E. L. Smith of Hood River and Horticultural Commissioners Newell and Reynolds talk to Newberg Fruit Growers in behalf of industry.

In accordance with previous announcement a well attended meeting of the fruit growers of this vicinity was held in Crater's hall Monday evening.

Mr. Smith, after expressing satisfaction at again greeting a Newberg audience, proceeded to read an intensely practical and interesting paper on "Fruit Unions," extracts from which are here given.

"Of all the industrial classes, the farmer, the horticulturist is the least inclined to enter into, and profit by united effort."

"Over production has been followed by such demoralizing and ruinous competition that most of the industries of the country have been driven into companies for self preservation. On every side we are confronted with numberless combinations of men and money transacting the business affairs of the world.

"Our Horticulturist however with a rugged independence that we admire, but a judgement we cannot approve, hesitates to co-operate with his co-laborer and fights shy of organization no matter how simple."

Some of the weak points of unions were here mentioned, such as loose organization, possible incompetency of management, inconstancy and unfaithfulness of selfish stockholders who conclude they can do better independently.

"Let us consider briefly some of the more pleasing features of co-operation. Fruit Unions are undoubtedly trusts, but quite unlike those immense aggregations of brain and capital, that labor to enrich the few at the expense of both producer and consumer."

"The Union seeks to elevate labor and reward it with a living compensation. Its capital usually is nominal, merely sufficient to provide for current expenses for transacting its business and hence does not have to extort either from labor or consumption a profit for dividends on fictitious valuations."

"A co-operative union educates its members along the lines of their occupation; always aims to promote highest standard of excellence, secures uniformity in the grading of products and disposes of them at wholesale instead of each grower retailing what he has grown thereby saving to him both time and money."

"The Union makes liberal use of the wires and hoses is able to make a more intelligent distribution of fruits than growers acting independently possibly can do."

"The Union being a member of the Commercial Agency has a knowledge of the financial standing of its customers and consequently its losses from bad accounts are minimum."

"A Union searches out new markets and extends its business over the widest possible area of country. The Union attracts buyers and having much to sell gets the higher prices and better service from the transportation companies."

"The Union maintains brokers at important centers who sell and distribute shipments to retailers being pledged to maintain prices on their part."

"And not the least among the benefits of fruit co-operation, members acquire a better knowledge of business methods and learn to trust and appreciate each other as they never did before, and jealousies and suspicion are replaced by confidence and esteem."

"The directors should be men noted for their shrewd business judgement and successful in the conduct of their own affairs."

"There are many instances where these co-operative associations have brought order out of chaos in the market, doubled returns to shippers, enhanced a hundred fold the value of land, paid off mortgages, and put new life and courage into the community."

"I am a member of one of these small unions just entering upon the tenth year of its existence, which has done this work, established a reputation for our growers and a market for their products over an extended section of country."

The speaker gave some interesting history of the Hood River Union, telling how it had grown from a small association with little capital to its present complete organization. When it was organized Hood River real estate sold from $10 to $20 an acre where it now sells for $200. The union has at times met with discouragement but it has persevered and prospered. Success without it would have been impossible. It is absolutely futile at this time for a man to try to succeed in the fruit business on his own independent resources. A union, properly managed, will by careful packing etc., make a reputation for its locality which is half the success desired. Mr. Smith offered himself as a target for questions relative to the subject under discussion and gave much desirable information.

At this stage of the proceedings Mrs. Barrie, Mrs. Gould and Miss Cummins rendered a song very appropriate to the occasion, the burden of which was—Keep your strawberry bed if you want your friends to visit you.

Mr. Reynolds, president of the Salem union, spoke of their organization and was followed by W. K. Newell who gave some very practical suggestions on careful preparation of the soil before setting the berries and a thorough cultivation of the plants. He said the people here can raise 6000 pounds of berries to the acre and make a handsome thing by selling them at three cents at the cannery.

The discussion gradually drifted from strawberries to apples. Mr. Smith's specialty, and he gave some earnest advice on the necessity of spraying. The question arose as to the best varieties, when the old argument as to the commercial value of the Ben Davis was suddenly precipitated. Mr. Smith taking the field radically against the red apple. His ready retorts were very characteristic and caused much merriment.

After tendering a vote of thanks to the visiting gentlemen for their presence and services, the association adjourned to meet Saturday evening, April 20, when complete organization will be effected.

NATIONAL CAPITAL CORRESPONDENCE.

It is probable that the inauguration day will be changed to April instead of March 4, as heretofore, as that date is approved by the National Committee appointed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to act on the question. March 4, is usually a day of storm and the effect is to make the occasion unpleasant, and much sickness results from exposure of the crowds who visit the Capital for the occasion. If this change can be made, inauguration day will be indeed a national holiday, as it will offer far more attraction than if held at any time in March. It is safe to say that much suffering and sickness results from exposure of the multitudes who come here for the great occasion. The Governors of all the states and territories were invited to be members of the committee, and forty three accepted, with also fifteen residents of the District of Columbia. All decided that such change was necessary and there was a unanimous voice for the third Tuesday in April as the most suitable date.

Much interest is felt in the Cuban reciprocity measure, as the sugar trust is up in arms against it, it looks as if the republicans were so divided that the bill cannot pass without democratic votes.

It is amusing to read the notices that the press of Europe are publishing as to the way Denmark had to bribe congressmen to make the purchase of the Danish Islands by the United States. The whole story was preposterous, and the rascally Dane who came out here with it could be lifted out of the country by the nose of somebody's boot. The sale was negotiated with Denmark by the State Department and no money was used nor was there occasion to use any. Congress is not made of the stuff that speculators can manage or that money can so easily purchase.

The House has passed the Chinese Exclusion Bill, without a dissenting vote, but the Senate seems to be less easily satisfied. It is supposed here that it will be impossible for the House Bill to pass the Senate, as leading Senators are said to be convinced that the restrictions imposed by it violate existing treaties with China. It may pass as it came from the House if democrats can furnish votes for it; but general opinion here is that it will not pass the Senate, and restrictions may be confined to the provisions of the existing Geary law, that may be reenacted.

On Monday a bill introduced by Senator Mitchell passed the Senate providing for a repayment of all sums paid for public lands over $1.25 per acre. While it is general in terms it is especially of interest to the people of Washington and Oregon who have bought land within railroad land grants and paid as high as $2.50 per acre at times. All such over payments will be refunded. The same bill is reported favorably in the House and will probably pass.

Senator Mitchell hopes to see the Chinese Exclusion bill pass the Senate very much as it did the House. The existing Geary law is but a part of such legislation on the statute books, as there were several acts that preceded it and it is confusing to look them up. It is thought that some features existing may be repealed by treaties made since.

The new act will repeal previous ones and re-enact all that is necessary, with such new provisions as may be needed. President Roosevelt is having a real good time down in Charleston; he is exactly like a boy having a holiday and bubbles over all the time with excitement all at him sees. I used to live there and recognize the scenes. The names of the officials he meets and of the old families I knew, sons of those I was acquainted with 55 years ago. I had fine Jesse Edwards very favorably spoken of for state senator and he would make a good one.

Politics are beginning to simmer considerable now and the prospective candidates are very friendly. We hear Jesse Edwards very favorably spoken of for state senator and he would make a good one.

LAFAYETTE ITEMS. Beautiful spring weather and garden making is in order. Mr. Beaulis of Oregon City is here looking after his property with a view of selling it. A gentleman from Tillamook is here looking for a residence location and will probably move here. A family from Kansas who are old neighbors of Mr. Green's folks have just arrived and are looking for a home. J. L. Vickrey has purchased the Dr. Littlefield residence property with three lots which is one of the best places in town. Mrs. Addison of Portland lectured in the Evangelical church Sunday morning and evening under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.

Quite a number of our people are attending Evangelical conference at Dallas. Clabe Bryan the victim of Joe Matty's shot gun is improving very slowly. They have moved him out to Johnson's mineral springs. Mrs. Dr. Coffeen formerly of Carlton was buried at this place on last Wednesday. They had recently moved to Ashwood, Oregon, at which place she died. She was aged 25 years. Was a member of LaFayette Assembly United Artisans and held a policy for one thousand dollars which is as good as a government bond.

Politics are beginning to simmer considerable now and the prospective candidates are very friendly. We hear Jesse Edwards very favorably spoken of for state senator and he would make a good one.
