 E. H. WOODWARD, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.
 W. C. WOODWARD, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.
 Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.
 ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.
 FRIDAY, MAY 9, 1902.

In locking over the county republican ticket, voters in this vicinity will find that Newberg is well represented by men of unquestioned integrity, in the renomination of J. L. Hoskins for recorder, and the nominations of B. C. Miles and T. B. Cummings, the former for representative and the latter for coroner.

Farmers' wives will find something of special interest here. A self-reliant New York woman lately brought suit against her husband to prevent his appropriation of the "egg money" as his own. The court decided that as eggs are more a product of woman's care of hens than a direct farm product, the woman has a right to regard them and the proceeds derived from their sale as her special property. This decision doubtless marks one more far reaching step in the march toward the final and triumphant emancipation of woman.

At a public meeting in South Carolina a few days ago, Senator Tillman said: "The new constitution adopted in 1895 has eliminated for the present the negro majority, but the number eligible to vote is constantly increasing." A very significant admission from the most pronounced of negro haters that the colored race is rapidly advancing in educational qualifications of citizenship. As much could not be said for the "poor white" following of the pitch fork senator.

President Roosevelt, having silenced the loquacious and meddlesome General Miles, may have been justified in calling down the gallant Funston for talking too much. The fact remains however, that the latter, exasperated by the taunts and vilification on the part of criticizing congressmen, had cause for his plain talk, and the people sympathize with him generally. It may be all right to prohibit soldiers from criticizing dignified senators, but the American people like fair play, and as has been suggested, there ought to be some rule or regulation to prevent the latter from stabbing soldiers in the back. If a soldier's mouth is to be closed, representatives and senators should not be allowed to become wholesale calumniators of men at the front.

In the latter part of this month there will take place at Washington, an event of national and even international importance, in the unveiling of a monument in honor of the French Count Rochambeau, who with a French fleet greatly assisted General Washington in the capture of Cornwallis at Yorktown. Twelve distinguished representatives from France will be present on the occasion, who, it is said will constitute the most distinguished body of Frenchmen that has ever visited this country. The unveiling of the monument is a just and timely recognition of the valuable services of our friends beyond the sea, and will doubtless tend to cement the friendship of the two nations. A reception, equal in its enthusiasm, to that accorded Prince Henry, should be given the distinguished visitors. In fact there is much more sufficient ground for an ovation in the latter case.

It is said by Hon. Bellamy Storer, United States minister to Spain, now home on a visit that Admiral Cervera is living in obscurity and comparative want, and that Admiral Montojo, who fought Dewey is never heard of. A Nemesis seems to have pursued the leaders of both big naval engagements of the late war with Spain. Admiral Dewey, the popular idol for a few short months, was fated to make a couple of bad blunders, and enthusiastic eulogy was turned to scathing criticism. Admiral Schley, the hero of Santiago, found himself the target of censure and abuse, which resulted in a high court of inquiry and an adverse decision. The two old Spanish admirals, able and courageous, fought in a lost cause for a losing country, and in the evening of life are passing their days in obscurity, the objects of ingratitude on the part of the country they bravely served. Verily the pathway which leads to fame and honor is treacherous and uncertain.

Civic Improvement.

Editor Graphic:—A short time ago I noticed a contributed article in your paper in which the writer made some comparisons between the appearance of Southern California towns and those of the Willamette Valley, and offered some suggestions to the people of Newberg which appeared to be timely and his points well taken, but so far I have seen very little changes being made along the lines he suggested. Oregonians have a reputation for being a slow-going people and in many respects the appellation is well earned, for it comes without any effort, and we are all too much inclined to look for things that come easy.

It is a common remark of passengers who cross over the mountains from California into Oregon that the change in the appearance of farms and farm improvements is so marked that no one can fail to note the difference. As a rule houses and barns in California are up in good shape and well painted, while on our side of the line neglected fences and unpainted buildings, show a lack of thrift that is not at all commendable. Long years of unprofitable grain farming is no doubt largely responsible for this condition of affairs among our farmers, but this furnishes little excuse for the thriftless appearance of many of the towns throughout the valley. The rapid change that is being made from the old style grain farm to fruit growing and dairying will certainly bring Oregon's farming interests up and cause a rapid change for the better, and it behooves our townspeople to move up several pegs and join the procession, which being augmented by the flood of emigration that is coming our way is going to march forward with greater strides along all lines of progress.

Newberg has all the natural advantages for making a beautiful and up-to-date town and it only remains for our people to exhibit a commendable degree of pride in home making and nature will do her part, as she always does in this favored land. A good deal has been said from time to time in public print along these same lines but it seems difficult to get people to wake up and do the little things that cost but little except a moderate amount of local pride, as well as home pride. As the leaves of the trees are now showing good growth, take a walk about our streets and note the difference in the appearance of homes where beautiful shade trees are spreading their branches of bright green foliage, and those where the setting of trees has been neglected and the glare of old Sol has full sway at high noon. A stroll along a well shaded walk with twittering birds overhead is an inspiration, but note the shroud of the barefoot boy as he limps over the burning plank walks where no green spreading branches of the maple cast their inviting shadows. A tin can dangling at the end of the tail of a homeless dog, caused a runaway in town recently and a consequent stir among the excited populace, and yet a careless housekeeper into our streets will be passed time after time by our town marshal and every body else without a passing glance of disapproval, except by those who are considered "cranky" on the subject of well kept streets. Broken timbers from a cast off street crossing make pretty fair firewood when dry, but such a pile left on the street corners don't add anything to the beauty of the streets. Waste paper makes very convenient kindling if carried home instead of being tossed carelessly aside, but when lying here and there and every where about the streets, it gives the town the appearance of a small boy with a dirty face and his shirt tail sticking out of the seat of his trousers, a subject for an artist, as well as for the care of an indulgent mother.

The half has not been told in the way of hints that might be dropped regarding civic improvement, a subject that ought to claim the attention of all enterprising citizens, but enough of this has been given for this week. Who will lend a hand and keep up the agitation until a decided change for the better is shown on all sides?

Congressman Tongue at Charleston.
 Mr. S. A. Clark, Washington correspondent, sends a notice of Congressman Tongue's visit to the South Carolina Exposition, indicative of the good impression Mr. Tongue made among the Southern, by his splendid address, delivered on Oregon day. Mr. Clarke refers to the favorable editorial mention given by the Charleston News and Courier and says:
 "The editorial remarks of that paper show that his address was fully appreciated, as they quote his own allusion to the high character of our pioneers as a lesson for their own people to profit by, when he said 'It is not the man who is satisfied with his lot who goes to the front. Contentment is the enemy of achievement. Contentment never suffers, never sacrifices, betters no conditions, rights no wrongs. Contentment may bring happiness, it may be desirable for the individual, but it makes no progress and is not in the interest of humanity at large.' The editor quoted this as a lesson to South Carolina to be up and doing, to make sacrifices for the advancement of the state. The editor says: 'In his eloquent speech at the exposition, Congressman Tongue paid a fine tribute to the spirit of the pioneers who conquered that great commonwealth from the wilderness and made it one of the richest and most progressive in the Union.' In truth, Mr. Tongue gave a very eloquent picture in words, of the early time and the men and women who built our great state. I have never heard or read a more eloquent address than Mr. Tongue made there, that covered the national domain and the regard all sections should have for all parts of the Union. It was also a tribute to the high character and fine intelligence of the people of Oregon."

DUNDEE ITEMS.
 Nice weather? Yes!
 Thos. Prince spent Tuesday in the city.
 G. W. Byers Jr. made a flying trip to Portland Tuesday.
 The trees are all leafed out and everything points to a good crop.
 Mrs. Crosby's mother spent Sunday here and Mrs. Crosby returned to Portland with her Monday.
 The report is current that fifty more men will arrive here Friday to work on the railroad track. "Will they be Japs?"
 N. F. Byers and wife are making a short visit with the Byers family, N. F. is short out of work owing to the strike in Portland Lumber Co. mills.
 Jack Crosby had quite a runaway Sunday. The horse became frightened at a gasoline engine and ran through the fence, smashing the buggy up some, but not seriously.

BAPTISTS IN SESSION.
 The West Willamette Baptist Association holds its First Annual Meeting at Newberg.
 The first annual meeting of the West Willamette Baptist Association convened in this city Tuesday evening. Following a devotional service led by Rev. L. W. Riley of McMinnville, the annual sermon was preached by Rev. Mark Noble of Corvallis, a former pastor of the Baptist church of this place.

This association consists of eleven Baptist churches which formerly were members of either the Willamette or Central associations. It has been formed to conserve the ends of better and more compact organization. It is expected that other churches will affiliate with it in the near future.

The session of Wednesday morning was occupied by the transaction of business and the hearing of the letters of the churches in which the work of the past year was summarized and the present condition, financial and spiritual defined. Most of the churches reported net gains in membership, increase of equipment and deepened spiritual life. In the afternoon the missionary activities of the denomination at large, received special attention. Of peculiar importance, because of local interest, was the discussion of the missionary work of the American Baptist Publication Society. This organization employs over one hundred and twenty-five missionaries. Some are equipped with chapel cars, which, entering into churchless communities, bring church, parsonage, pastor and wife, and a complete equipment for every phase of religious work. Again and again such visits result in a revival, a church organization, a church building and a settled pastor. In the course of a few weeks or months. Many others of these missionaries are equipped with colportage wagons, which are to the towns and hamlets remote from the railroads, what the chapel car is to the railroad town.

These wagons are so built as to carry an abundance of bibles, books, tracts and other religious literature, to afford the missionary a comfortable bed and the means of progress from place to place; being equipped with organ, blackboard and hymn books, they enable the missionary to do an unhampered and aggressive work. One of these wagons is now being built at Corvallis at a cost of $200, for service in this section of the valley, and following the discussion of the work, $50 was pledged by the delegates present toward paying for the wagon. Rev. L. W. Whirly of Stayton has been appointed as the missionary.

Following the adjournment of the afternoon session the young people met and organized an associated Baptist Young Peoples Union, with Rev. F. C. Starnard as president.

The evening session was one of great inspiration. President Boardman of McMinnville college in a masterful argument confuted the idea advanced by some that the small college is no longer needed in the completeness of our educational system and that its day is passing. Some of the arguments in support of his position are as follows:
 1. Some positive advantages are offered by the small college, such as more immediate and personal contact between student and instructor, and greater thoroughness and efficiency of work.
 2. The small college is entrenched in the loyalty and self-sacrificing support of its alumni, who are to be reckoned with when the interests of their alma mater are threatened.
 3. Wealth has territorial limitations. The man with the moderate amount of means for philanthropic purposes, prefers to use it for the support of local institutions. Let a college once prove that it deserves to exist, and it will receive support.
 4. The small college is the discoverer of the hidden intellectual wealth of the rural communities, otherwise inaccessible.
 5. Geographical limitations in attendance is an important factor of the question, as ninety per cent of the students of the average college come from within a radius of one hundred miles.
 6. All our educational tradition favors the small institution.
 7. The denominational school furnishes a positive moral and religious environment, lacking in state institutions.
 8. The small college is peculiarly an American institution and is the American ideal in our educational scheme. In educational system, Germany is imperialistic, England is aristocratic, but so long as democracy is permanent in America, her system will be democratic, and in that system the small college is the important factor.

Rev. W. E. Randal of Portland inspired many with a clarion call to fidelity in the supreme mission of life, character saving, and character building. The young men's quartet and the ladies' trio from McMinnville college added much to the enjoyment of all by their many well rendered selections. The singing of Miss Mollie Patty, McMinnville's talented young vocalist, was especially appreciated.
 Thursday morning the reading of church letters was continued, its conclusion being marked by an interesting discussion of the state of religion in the churches. The afternoon was occupied by a discussion of the problems that center in religious work in the rural villages and districts. Miss Millspeigh addressed the women of the convention on missionary work. A sermon by Rev. L. W. Riley of McMinnville in the evening brought to a close a most auspicious meeting, prophetic of larger conquests during the year to come.

 Of Perfume are you using—it is so nice?
 Why it is Extrait de Violette de Parme, manufactured by Roger & Gallet, Paris.
 And where did you get it? At F. H. CALDWELL & CO.'S Prescription Druggists.
 And the price—only 75 cents per ounce. Well I guess I will go and get an ounce.
 Well you will have to hurry as there is only a limited amount imported each year.
 Well if you do not get the Violette de Parme, they have lots of others at 25 to 50 cents per ounce, which are very nice.

Hold up a Congressman.
 "At the end of the campaign," writes Champ Clark, Missouri's brilliant congressman, "from overwork, nervous tension, loss of sleep and constant speaking I had about utterly collapsed. It seemed that all the organs in my body were out of order, but three bottles of Electric Bitters made me all right. It's the best all round medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter." Overworked run down men and weak, sickly women gain splendid health and vitality from Electric Bitters. Try them, only 50c. Guaranteed by F. H. Caldwell & Co.
