

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Serofina— as ugly as ever since time immemorial. It causes bunches in the neck, cures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

The Cultivated Taste. Monopole coffee was not intended for the use of those who prefer a 10- or 15-cent grade of coffee. These people, perhaps, won't see the value in it. But if your taste has been in any degree cultivated by the use of the higher grades, you'll think that Monopole pure Mocha and Java is the acme of perfection—presuming, of course, that the coffee is made right. This coffee is sold in one and one half pound cartons. If your grocer doesn't keep it, send us his name. Wadhams & Kerr Bros., Portland.

The Worm. She—Yes; I'm very sorry I married you, so there! He—Oh! You were glad to get anybody, I guess. You were no young bird when I married you. She—No? But considering what I got you must admit I was an early bird.—Philadelphia Press.

No External Symptoms. The blood may be in bad condition, yet with no external signs, no skin eruption or sores to indicate it. The symptoms in such cases being a variable appetite, poor digestion, an indescribable weakness and nervousness, loss of flesh and a general run-down condition of the system—clearly showing the blood has lost its nutritive qualities, has become thin and watery. It is in just such cases that S. S. S. has done some of its quickest and most effective work by building up the blood and supplying the elements lacking to make it strong and vigorous.

"My wife used several bottles of S. S. S. as a blood purifier and to tone up a weak and emaciated system, with very marked effect by way of improvement. We regard it a great tonic and blood purifier."—J. F. Durr, Princeton, Mo.

S. S. S. is the greatest of all tonics, and you will find the appetite improves at once, strength returns, and nervousness vanishes as new rich pure blood once more circulates through all parts of the system.

Science AND INVENTION

An English physiologist explains that a girl can never throw like a boy because her collar-bone is larger and sets lower.

Meteors which reach the earth almost invariably contain a large quantity of iron and a smaller amount of nickel.

The worst mosquito-infested neighborhood in the world is the coast of Buenos Aires. At certain seasons, it is said, the streams of that region are unnavigable because of the clouds of mosquitoes.

A peculiar snow observed on Mont Malet in the Alps has been reported by M. A. Brun. It is called "Caucasian snow," and is very porous, with grains reaching an eighth of an inch in size. The slight adhesion of these grains gives great liability to avalanches.

Attempts have been made to measure the light of the moonless night sky. Gavin J. Burns, an English astronomer, has roughly estimated that the total light of one hemisphere equals that of one thousand first-magnitude stars, and Professor Simon Newcomb has—perhaps more accurately—found this total light to be equal to that of six hundred to eight hundred first-magnitude stars. The brightness seems to be not entirely due to visible and invisible stars. The zodiacal light and the gegenschein, a midnight glow opposite the sun, have been seen to extend across the heavens, and it is suggested that these are but intensifications of a general luminosity of the entire sky, due to some unknown cause.

Wonderful stories are often told of the powers of vision possessed by savage races. During the recent Cambridge anthropological expedition to Torres Straits, the visual acuity of the natives was carefully tested, and Mr. Rivers, who made the tests, concluded that the excellence of vision shown by savages has a psychological origin; that is to say, it arises from knowing what to look for. When the European acquires familiarity with the environment to be not entirely due to his eyes, but to his mind. An Indian to tell the tale of a deer at such a distance that distinguished features like antlers were invisible was found to rest upon his knowledge of the peculiar gait of the male deer.

Professor A. E. Verrill of Yale regards the phenomena witnessed during the awful eruption of Mount Pelee in May as bearing out the theory that immense quantities of explosive gases were evolved through the dissociation of oxygen and hydrogen from the water on coming suddenly into contact with hot lava, and that these gases, when ejected into the atmosphere, exploded above the crater, producing the terrible effects that were noted. According to this view, the inhabitants of St. Pierre were killed by a sudden explosion of a volume of mingled oxygen and hydrogen, while the poisonous hydrochloric acid gas, formed by the chlorine liberated from the seawater that had leaked into the volcano and was combined with some of the hydrogen, quickly suffocated those who may have escaped death from the explosion.

THEFT OF LIBERTY BELL. Successful April Fool Joke Worked by New Orleans Paper.

"Did you ever hear about the time the Liberty Bell was stolen?" asked a New Orleans man at the Capitol the other day. "It was early in the spring of 1885. The exposition was being held at New Orleans and the bell had been loaned to the exposition. I remember well the excitement the theft occasioned. The Times-Democrat came out the next morning with startling headlines, 'A Dastardly Attempt,' 'The Emblem of American Independence, the Liberty Bell, Stolen.'"

"Last night was a sorrowful one in the city," it said. "When Philadelphia sent to New Orleans the grand old Liberty Bell, treasured not alone by the famed city of the East, but by the whole nation, the people of the South generally, and of Louisiana particularly, responded warmly to this evidence of brotherly love offered by the second city of the republic."

"A long account of the reception of the bell and the care taken of it followed, and the Times-Democrat said: 'The spot on which it stood is a scene of havoc. The car that bore it is half consumed by fire and its ruined timbers tell a story of wanton destruction almost without parallel. The trees that stood over it are no longer graceful and grand; half devoured by fire, their charred branches seem to cry aloud for vengeance. Last night when the pale moon shed her radiance over the great park, bathing it in a flood of silver light, when the grounds were calm and still and deserted by all save the watchful guard, this deed of wantonness was done.'

"Then came an account of the mounting of the guard and the discovery of the fire. The account said: 'While the firemen and the two officers were discussing the mysterious disappearance of the two night watchmen an officer made his way close to the car to inspect the bell and ascertain whether or not it had sustained any damage. To his amazement the bell was gone. Not a vestige of it remained. It had been swung from its fastenings and carried off.'

"There was more detail about the search and clew. Naturally the citizens and the thousands of visitors at the exposition were indignant. The entire population discussed nothing else that morning and the cars were not sufficient to carry the crowd out to the grounds to see the ruin wrought and learn the latest clew. I could not get a car and walked a distance of four miles and was an hour getting through the gate."

The next issue of the Times-Democrat said: 'Everybody takes a joke good naturally on the first day of April, and there was occasion yesterday for the exercise of a good deal of good nature. Everybody tried to fool everybody else. The Times-Democrat Liberty Bell joke went down very well, and those who forgot the date of the paper and went into a state of agitation over the irreparable injury that they imagined had been done to the famous old relic so kindly loaned to New Orleans by the City of Brotherly Love were full of laughter and surprise when they found themselves the victims of a hoax. The bell was visited by a large number of visitors during the day and the officers on guard had no difficulty in convincing spectators that nothing was wrong with it."

STUDENT LIFE AT OXFORD. What Young Americans Who Go There Will Find.

In undergraduate life at Oxford the student from America will find many interesting features. He will, no doubt, be assigned to a college rather than be allowed to choose one, as the will of Cecil Rhodes expresses the desire "that the scholars holding the scholarships shall be distributed among the colleges of the University of Oxford, and not resort in undue numbers to one or more colleges only."

There are twenty-two colleges in the university, all of which, educationally considered, are equal. Reasons of rank in life, of parental or local associations, of wealth, of religious tendencies, rather than reasons of a purely academic nature, lead an English boy to choose one or another of these colleges. The colleges differ in externals. Some of them are rich, others poor; some of them are comparatively large—three or four hundred students—others very small; some are extensively carried on, others inexpensively; some are "pass," others are "reading" colleges; some have high residence fees, others low; some have no graduate students, and one, All Souls, no undergraduate students; some have superb buildings, others plain; and one, the Non-Collegiate, has no buildings at all, and hardly any faculty, being governed by the university through a committee called a "delegation for unattached students." But any one of these colleges will be a worthy foster mother to the undergraduate. The student will pay his fees to his college, and will be watched over by it throughout his whole course. He will not get all of his instruction in its lecture rooms, for the community of interest idea has penetrated modern Oxford, and for certain subjects the resident student will be apt to go to another college, but his student life will be mainly within the college walls.

He will, if fortunate enough to get one, have a room on one of the "stair-cases," will be served by the "society," who will bring him his breakfast, will dine in state in the hall every evening, will worship in the college chapel, and will shorten his walks abroad so that he can get within the college gates before they close for the night. He will row in the college boat or play on the college cricket team, and will have a special adviser, a college tutor, to whom he will look back with gratitude and respect all the days of his life.

He will find Oxford as expensive as Harvard or Yale. His strictly college expenses, for tuition, board and daily living, exclusive of books, clothing, society, sports and luxuries, will vary from a minimum of $500 a year to a maximum difficult to estimate. Of the colleges, Keble, Jesus, New College and Worcester make special effort to aid the student in economy. Christ Church, University, Magdalen and Balliol are the most expensive; Brasenose, St. John's, Exeter, Oriel and Trinity stand in an intermediate position.

The student will have to be fairly economical at the average college, says Francis Hovey Stoddard in the Review of Reviews, to keep his total expenses within the $1,500 yearly suggested in the will as the income for each scholarship.

Last of the Indian Dances. The Omaha is the only dance now practiced among the Sioux. The war dance died with the accession of peace, the sun dance has long been frowned upon by the Great Father and the ghost dance has been peremptorily forbidden ever since the trouble springing from it in the unhappy fight at Wounded Knee in the early part of 1891. But the Omaha, danced frequently after the reservation, has not been actually forbidden, although the Indian agents in general disapprove of it, and so far as is possible discontinue its perpetuation. It is primarily a social function, with this unqualified advantage—that it tends toward the continuance of that state of society known to the Indians during their days of barbarity, that it emphasizes uncivilized delights and that it has nothing in common with the civilization toward which we are trying to lead the red man. Every time the Omaha is danced the dancers are drawn more closely to the old lives and the old ways, a reverence for the customs of their ancestors is enkindled within them, and whatever refining influences of civilization may have hitherto impressed them are, for the time, utterly forgotten and eventually most weakened. It is the great social reflection of barbarism, and its influence cannot be for good.—Chicago Chronicle.

Solitude Was Misdirected. In a London safe deposit vault recently the renter of a safe, anxious for the spiritual welfare of one of the janitors, said while they were in the vault together: "Are you prepared to die?" For answer the janitor instantly pinned the questioner to the wall by the throat. Assistance arrived and the unfortunate renter was carried out, half "throttled." Explanations ensued, and it was then discovered that an inquiry after his spiritual welfare had been construed by the janitor as the preliminary to a murderous attack.

Would Not Need It Then. An Arkansas man once wrote to inquire the price of a saw-mill that would saw all the various ways that he wanted to saw. When he learned by return mail that such a mill would cost him $1,000, he replied by postal card: "If a man had $1,000 what in thunder would he want of a saw-mill?"

When you see a girl riding a horse astride in the country, it is safe to guess that she is from town, and thinks one can do what one pleases in the country.

It is every man's opinion that he would have been a great man had he lived fifty years ago.

What He Wanted. "Your honor," said the prisoner, who had been brought in for a preliminary hearing, after six weeks in the county jail, "I want a change of menu."

"You mean," said the judge kindly, "that you want a change of venue. Now, the proper course—"

"No, I don't mean that. I want a change of menu. That sheriff seems to have tried to corner the corned beef market of the world."—Baltimore American.

Probably True. "Where did all these skeletons come from?" asked the visitor at the medical college.

"Can you keep a secret?" queried the medical student.

"Sure thing," replied the visitor.

"The 'I'll tell you,'" said the embryo M. D., and continued, in a loud whisper: "We raised 'em!"—Chicago News.

Mobbed. First College Girl—I hear you girls mobbed the umpire at the class game? Second College Girl—Yes; we called her a "mean old thing" and told her that she was "perfectly horrid."—Puck.

FRIEND TO THE FARMER. To the Editor—We have noticed in your paper from time to time, during the present season, some extremely instructive and interesting articles on Binding Twine.

Permit us to add a few words today with special reference to our own industry in this market. The "Farm Implement News," issue of July 17, gives the following prices of twine as the prevailing Eastern prices to the dealers:

Standard (500-ft.) 15 cents a pound
Standard (600-ft.) 11 cents a pound
Manilla (500-ft.) 10 cents a pound
Manilla (600-ft.) 17 cents a pound

While it is perfectly true and fair to say that we would be justified in charging one cent in advance of Eastern prices for our twine of Oregon manufacture, that is, the price of freight added to Eastern prices, as a matter of fact, Pure Manilla, Red Clover Leaf Brand, 650 feet, we are quoting to the dealers under date of July 15 at 16 cents per pound, or one cent below the price quoted for Eastern goods.

Taking everything into account, it seems reasonable and appropriate that we call attention to the fact that, although many people entertain the belief that we are grinding monopolists, demanding all we can possibly get for twine, here we are in the midst of an important and strenuous season, offering our goods at one cent below the prices Eastern dealers are obliged to pay. In other words, instead of being an oppressor of the farmer, we demonstrate in a very practical manner that we are his friend, and a good friend of the general public, because, if any Eastern twine is sold in this market, we force the Eastern manufacturer to take a less price for it than he does in his local market besides the freight to the coast on account of our low selling prices.

We cannot be too enthusiastic about some of the remarks that have been made in your paper concerning Binding Twine. You have urged the consumer repeatedly to disregard the representations of unscrupulous dealers, and to always make his decision concerning purchases of twine by asking the question, "How many bundles can you bind with a dollar's worth of twine?" If the consumer will always keep in mind this question when he makes a purchase, he will inevitably and invariably select Pure Manilla twine, for it is the most economical certainly, as it is 30 per cent longer than the other twine, dollar for dollar and pound for pound.
