

THE NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

E. H. WOODWARD, EDITOR & PUBLISHER. W. G. WOODWARD, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1902.

To have been thoroughly consistent with their record for the past few years some of the senators of the opposition should have held their noses the other day when ex-secretary Ager was sworn in as a member of the Senate.

If some newspaper men should use the same freedom with their neighbors' wood pile they do with their exchanges, when they swipe editorials bodily without giving credit, they would be put down as thieves and sent to jail for thirty days.

The President's message admirably exhibits his knack of saying a thing hard and to the point. For instance: "Fashness or the impossible means delay in achieving the possible." Here is substance for more sober reflection than radical socialists and violent labor agitators are liable to give.

How to secure fair treatment alike for labor and capital, how to hold in check the unscrupulous man, whether employer or employe, without weakening individual initiative, without hampering and crippling the industrial development of the country, is a problem fraught with great difficulties, and one which it is the highest importance to solve on lines of sanity and far-sighted common sense as well as devotion to the right. -From President Roosevelt's message to Congress.

One last stand out prominently in the town elections which are being held all over Oregon and Washington, and that is that the main question at issue is the temperance, or prohibition question. In the majority of cases this has been more or less an issue and in a great many, it has been recognized as the only issue. This is greatly encouraging to advocates of good government and decent laws. Not that the temperance people have gained the greatest number of victories, for in many places they have been badly defeated. The significant fact is that public sentiment has grown until the issue has been forced all over the state. A few years ago such a thing would not have been possible. People are waking up to the fact that there are other things as important to their towns as saloons, and which they can not have while the saloons stay. The sign boards of the recent elections point unmistakably toward better citizenship.

In line with an editorial in last week's Graphic, the Woodmen Independent says, "Some of our new comers must be handled with loving care and exceptional hospitality. They arrive here cold and possibly, at this season, and especially during the winter, find it raining. Notwithstanding they have just left a land of rain, snow and cold, and are here greeted with gentle zephyrs and a comparatively mild climate, they have a sinking of spirits. Having parted from a community where they have lived all their lives to the present evolutionary period, knowing everybody, and coming to where they know nobody - strangers in a strange land - it is not surprising that they get downhearted and feel like going back unless they have the glad hand extended to them on every side. Time brings relief and eye-opening remedies, but in the interim their hearts must be cheered by treatment which the people of Oregon will know how to bestow. If they will only wisely make the effort. They should be made to feel that they are heartily welcome and are at once among neighbors and friends; that warm the wife's heart. Every homelike person returning to the East gives Oregon an undeserved black eye and, through ignorance, libels this State."

In a conversation with a man who will be a member of the legislature this winter, representing an adjoining county, a representative of the Graphic made the remark that the fate of the Lewis and Clark Fair appropriation bill ought to be settled within a very few days after the opening of the session. That the commissioners ought to know at an early day what they can depend on, and the bill ought to be gotten out of the way of other legislation. The gentleman said in answer, "Well I don't know about that," and then went on to say "These fellows" from Multnomah always want to press their pet measure and if the outside members should go ahead and help them pass the Charter bill and the Fair bill "We can whittle for anything we may want." Then he went on to indicate how the Fair bill should be held up until the Multnomah legislation was brought to terms. Right here is the rotten place in Oregon politics as it has found expression in the sessions of the legislature for the past twenty years. The system of "barter and trade" has fastened onto the state of Oregon, a state with a population less than 500,000, four normal schools that are smothered in the state treasury, when the state ought to have but one, and following in this train is a long list of appropriations that are made biennially, many of which never would be made if this system of "you tickle me and I'll tickle you," was not in vogue. The Graphic believes that a liberal appropriation should be made for the Lewis and Clark Fair, but the bill ought to be passed upon by the members on its merits and aside from any other matters that are to come before the legislative session. It is Oregon and the whole Northwest that is to commemorate the Lewis and Clark expedition and the question of an appropriation ought to be taken up and settled as broad minded men settle any question that is of vital interest to the people they represent.

Uncle Sam's Model Farm.

It is stated that the United States is to have a model farm run by the agricultural department and situated just across the Potomac river from Washington, the purpose of Secretary Wilson being to make it the Mecca for farmers, not only of the United States, but of the whole world. Farmers who have at some time been bogged into planting "shparagus" seeds liberally supplied by zealous congressmen, would like Mr. Wilson to try his hand on the model farm with a liberal assortment of the "model" seeds which his department deals out so generously all over the country every spring. In that case he might feel a good deal as did the man who said:

I nearly hate the thought of spring, With its delightful sun, For well I know the seed will bring A pack from Washington; A little package, duly franked, No postage stamps to show; And it contains those little seeds— The kind that never grow. Our good and zealous Congressman, Reminding of our vote, Upon his memorandum's page Puts down a little note, And when the proper time arrives For us to wish the hoe, He sends us the little seeds— The ones that never grow. There's squashes with enticing names; And cabbages, I wot, So large that you would think that one Would shade a garden spot; So with the pack from Washington You smile forth to sow, With many a drop of sweat, The seeds That never care to grow. How often have I piled the rakes, How oft I've lugged about With eyes alert to catch the first Signs of the coming sprout; In vain, in vain, my hopes have fled, My heart has filled with woe, Above the seeds from Washington— The seeds that never grow. But yet each year my hopes revive, As spring reddeneth the trees, And to my homestead surely comes The package marked "M. C.;" And, fool's like, again I wield The sprinkler and the hoe, And, like a ninny, plant the seeds— That never care to grow.

The Power of the People. It is of no real importance which party organization takes the next step for the people. The essential fact is that the step is to be taken soon. Since the war, the republican party has had a practical monopoly of administrative genius. Just now that party's organization finds it is gravely suspected of serving the few as against the many; but even in the moment that this is true, we see the administrative leader of the republican party taking notice of the popular suspicion and shaping its course to avoid its prospective disastrous results. The people can have anything they want in this country. All they need is to indicate their desires, and not all the money combines this side of hades can deny them for an hour. The people have only to indicate in their conventions and through their press that they desire public ownership of the outrageously mismanaged coal mines, for instance, and they will find the leaders of both parties jumping to do the work. But the demand must be unmistakably that of a majority, and it must be a temperate, intelligent demand. The politicians want the honors and the offices, and they will not haggle over terms in order to get them. -Frank Putnam in National Magazine.
