OREGON-IDAHO Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION.

Newberg the Scene of Lively and Enthusiastic Meetings—Large Delegations in Attendance—National and State Workers Present.

The big Y. M. C. A. convention has come and gone but its impress upon the people of this place remains. The virile, courageous spirit of such a gathering serves as a potent spiritual tonic in the lives of those who have come under its influence. The very presence of such strong men as E. Y. Colton, E. W. Peck and A. S. Allen strengthens and fortifies the nobler impulses of young men. From all quarters of the convention was a great word of encouragement and inspiration. The attendance was large, over one hundred and twenty-five men being present, who represent the best type of the college man. The arrangements and details of the convention had been carefully looked after by the local association, headed by its efficient president, Calvin Blair, and State Secretary Stone complimented highly the Pacific College boys for the business like manner in which they had prepared for the meeting.

The convention was called to order Friday evening in the Friends church by President J. Thorburn Bond. A song service followed, led by the veteran Y. M. C. A. singer E. W. Peck, state secretary of Minnesota, and such congregational singing was never before heard in Newberg. It is hoped that an inspiration in this respect was received which will result in better singing here on the part of audiences. Throughout the convention a choir of male voices led in the song services. At different seasons sacred selections were rendered by a local male quartet composed of Professors Albertson, Jones and Kirk and W. C. Woodward.

The address Friday evening was delivered by Dr. E. L. House, pastor of the Portland First Congregational Church, and was unusually fine. Its influence was felt throughout the sessions. The occupation of the weaver furnished the theme of the evening. "The loom is the world; the warp, our endeavors. All have a wonderful warp—unknown possibilities are in our hands. There is a variety of shuttles, but all are important. Be all you can be, is a good motto. In our weaving there is but one pattern—Jesus Christ. With the illustration of Hawthorne's beautiful legend, Christ is the 'great stone face,' which we may come to resemble by close association. We should weave for quality, not quantity. Too much stress is put upon statistics. The thread sometimes breaks but the weaver must not give up in despair. Jenny Lind never sang as she did after she was crushed with grief; Milton wrote best after he was blind; Bunyan saw the vision in the dungeon. In the night is the time to see the stars. God doesn't forsake. Be sure and look on the right side of the weaving—not from the world's side but from God's. Look upon God more as a loving father than as a Judge. Let it be time we are weaving in more of the light and less of the dark?"

F. W. Witham, the energetic secretary of Boise, Idaho, led the Saturday morning devotions, after which informal introductions of delegates took place. The convention was then organized, and reports of the associations taken up which showed the work to be progressing hopefully.

The question of bible study was the first subject discussed and was in charge of Reno Hutchinson of Portland. Phases of the subject were handled by G. A. Forbes of Monmouth and K. S. Latourette of McMinnville.

A paper upon "The Christian Young Man in Athletics" was read by Prof. C. J. Bushnell of Albany College. He traced the growth and expansion of athletics and said: "Now what is the attitude of the professedly Christian man toward all this development? Is he to hold entirely aloof from it as a sordid and unlovely? Is he to plunge into it recklessly, regardless of where it may lead him? Or is he to enter it with temperance and enthusiasm, as worthy and useful and even important? Is this last attitude of the Christian man possible? I know that in athletics, as now frequently conducted, there is much that is brutal, unclean and degrading. Is it possible or profitable to exercise the ideal Christian manhood in connection with such? A Christian young man should love soap and hate all uncleanliness. What, then, should he do about the mad of field and track? He should be gentle, sociable and considerate. What, then, should be his attitude toward the fierce strife of athletic encounters? He should hate stealing and disposition as he does the devil. Can he, then, engage in occupations which are now frequently attended by such orgies of gambling, betting and uncleanliness of speech and life? There are serious questions, but to all of them I answer emphatically, yes. He should enter athletics not as a mere professional athlete, but as a man."

In the afternoon a college conference was conducted by E. T. Colton, international college secretary, papers upon different phases of college Y. M. C. A. work being read by delegates.

retary, Chas. Clark of Oregon Agricultural College.

When pledges for the state work were called for, a little interesting rivalry took place between the institutions for the honor of making the largest subscription. After a little lively bidding, Newberg came out first with a pledge of $38 and the State University second with $35. About $1000 in all was subscribed for the coming year, which was an unusually liberal contribution.

The ladies of the town served a banquet to the delegates at six o'clock in the evening in the basement of the church. Good fellowship reigned supreme, and the after dinner talks were a marvel of spice and humor. Mutual compliments of all kinds were handed out freely in unsualled packages in a way that kept all in an uproar.

The first address of the evening was delivered by A. S. Allen, the Seattle general secretary, upon the subject, "An Institution for the Times." After referring to the world wide movement of population to the cities, and the resulting change in social conditions, the speaker said: "The Y. M. C. A. is peculiarly a modern, a city institution. Religious life must adapt itself to change of environment or suffer loss. The phenomenal success of the Y. M. C. A. during the past half century is due to the fact that as an institution it has consciously or unconsciously adjusted itself to changed and ever changing social environment. The fierce fight going on between good and evil centers about the young man, who is the dominating factor in social life. The agency that touches the young man touches the most vital part of the social organism. Upon him focus the methods employed by agencies which make for shipwreck of character. This is the bearing upon the subject. The Y. M. C. A. almost alone is bidding against the forces of hell for the young man by methods which have commended themselves to the judgment of the best critics in the world. It adapts its methods to the needs of the day. It reaches the young man in his three-fold development. It meets the needs of his body, mind and spirit."

"The Most Effective Method" was the subject handled by E. W. Peck of Minnesota. The theme of his address was "Personal Work." "The method of work in every department is individual effort to win men to Christ," said he. "This is the very heart of all Christian activity. For this attitude we have the authority of Christ and his disciples, and the Scriptures in general. The spirit of the gospel is that of activity, and personal work plays a large part in the extension of work for Christ among men. Every Christian is under obligation for personal work. It is a debt he owes to humanity, to God and to himself. Personal work is practical. This is an age of intense commercialism. In the midst of business competition the element of personal effort brings larger results than any other one force. Its difficulties are, first, lack of faith in ourselves, because of impure lives and lack of power, and second, lack of faith in God."

Quiet hour services were held at the college Sunday morning both by the young men, led by Mr. Peck, and by the young ladies led by their state secretary, Miss Louise Shields. In the morning church services the several pulpits in town were occupied by visiting delegates. In the afternoon three important meetings were held: a men's mass meeting in the Friends church, attendance 500, addressed by E. T. Colton; a meeting in the Methodist church for the young men, led by Miss Shields; and a boys' meeting in the Baptist church conducted by the Boys' Secretary, R. H. Campbell.

The big meeting of the convention was the last one, Sunday evening, addressed by Mr. Colton, his subject being "Statesmanship in the Kingdom of God." His theme was foreign missions and the hearts of his hearers burned within them as they listened to his searching words. In power and originality of presentation, such an address is rarely heard. He placed the investment of lives upon a business basis and maintained that they should be invested where they will bring the greatest returns—in the foreign field. At the close of the discourse several young men declared their purpose of becoming student volunteers.

An open platform meeting followed, in which many short farewell talks were given, after which the delegates joined hands in a circle around the whole assembly room and galleries, and sang "Blest be the tie that binds." Vice President Edwards gave the closing benediction and President Fay declared the successful convention adjourned sine die.

Hon. Thomas Brackett Reed died in Washington City, Sunday, Dec. 7th. For twenty-two years he represented the State of Maine in the House of Representatives and for six years he was Speaker. Few men have left such a deep impress upon our national halls of legislation as Mr. Reed.

County Treasurer Foster last week made his second payment in full of Yamhill county's 1901 taxes, in amount $17,996. The balance of the state's taxes was $17,497.35, and the agricultural college tax was $485.75. The county court has decided that from recent supreme court decisions the county clerk is entitled to deputy hire, and has allowed the salary for this month. A deputy is to be appointed this term. It is understood, and Harry Gust of North Yamhill is said to be the man who bears the strawberry mark. Miss Osa Roberts ceased her labors last week in this capacity.—Reporter.

Eugene Field's Views on Ambition and Dye-papain.

"Dyspepsia," wrote Eugene Field, "often incapacitates a man for endeavor and sometimes extinguishes the fire of ambition." Though great despite his complaint Field suffered from indigestion all his life. A week's trial of stomach can't digest your food. It needs rest. You can only rest it by the use of a preparation like Kodol, which relieves it of work by digesting your food. Rest soon restores it to its normal tone. Strengthening.
