OREGON BIRDS.

A Plea by a Newberg Boy for More Notice and Appreciation of our Feathered Song Friends

When the subject of birds is mentioned, most people think of the thrushes, orioles and linnets of the Eastern states or of the nightingales and skylarks, made famous by English writers. These are, indeed, interesting to read about, but there are many birds in our own immediate neighborhood that should claim our admiration just as readily if we would only learn to know and appreciate them. It is necessary, only, to go to the nearest grove to hear numerous strains of exquisite music issuing from the throats of finches, thrushes, orioles and warblers that can not be excelled by their cousins beyond the Rockies.

We frequently hear Eastern people remark of the scarcity of birds in this state. It is not because the birds are not here that they are not observed, but because the would-be critic does not take the pains to seek them in their haunts, and forms his conclusion from the number he sees about town. In the East the birds have long been protected and have learned to love the associations of men, while here, in this newer country, they have not yet learned that man is their friend, and instead of living near our homes, still take up their abode farther away. The catalogue of the Birds of Oregon shows the recorded number of species occurring within the state to be four or five hundred. This compares very favorably with that of most Eastern states. When we consider that many places have never been visited by ornithologists and the new species recorded, we feel that the charge "that the birds are scarce" is unjust.

Among the bird fauna of the state are included many of the best songsters and most beautiful birds of the continent. These are not often seen by the careless observer. When they are met they are not recognized as tanagers or song sparrows, and are to him simply "birds." The birds are here and may be seen by all who will take the pains to look for them. If each person would cultivate the habit of looking and listening, he would see much more of the feathered creatures of the trees and would appreciate more the birds that are about him. "Learn to look and look to learn."

Worst of All Experiences.

Can anything be worse than to feel that every minute will be your last? Such was the experience of Mrs. S. H. Newson, Decatur, Ala. "For three years," she writes, "I endured insufferable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble. Death seemed inevitable when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters, and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered." For liver, kidney, stomach and bowel troubles, Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. It's guaranteed by F. H. Caldwell & Co., druggists.

THOUGHTS FOR THE DISCOURAGED

The summer wind is smiling round the bloom in locust trees:
And the clover in the pasture is a big day for the bees,
And they been a swiggin' honey, above board and on the sly,
As they stutter in their busin' and stagger as they fly,
The flicker on the fence fall' pears to just spit on his wings
And roll up his feathers, by the same way he sings:
And the house-fly is a whetthin' up his wings for his,
And the off-mare is a swishin' all of her tale they is.
You can hear the blackbirds jawin' as they foller up the plow—
Oh, they're bound to get some breakfast, and they're not a carin' how,
So they quarrel in the furrows, and they quarrel on the wing,
But they're peaceable in pot-pies than any other thing:
And it's when I get my shotgun drawn up in steady rest,
She's as full of tribulation as a yaller-jacket's nest;
And a few shots before dinner, when the sun's a-shinin' bright,
Seems to kind o' sorta' sharpen up a feller's appetite!
They've been a heap o' rain, but the sun's out today,
And the clouds of the wet spell is all cleared away,
And the woods is all the greener, and the grass is greener still;
It may rain again to-morrow, but I don't think it will.
Some says the crops is ruined, and the corn's drowned out,
And prophesy the wheat will be a failure without doubt;
But the kind Providence that has never failed us yet,
Will be on hands one't more at the 'leventh hour, I bet!
Does the meadow-lark complain, as he swims high and dry
Through the waves of the wind and the blue of the sky?
Does the quail set up and whissel in a disappointed way,
Er hang his head in slumps and sorrow all the day?
Is the chipmunk's health a-fallin'? Does he walk, or does he run?
Don't the buzzards come around up there just like they're allus down?
Is they anything the matter with the rooster's wings or voice?
Ort a mortal be complainin' when dumb animals rejoice?
Then let us, one and all, be contented with our lot:
The June is here, the month, and the sun is shining hot,
Oh! let us fill our hearts up with the glory of the day,
And banish ev'ry doubt and care and sorrow fur away!
Whatever be our station, with Providence for guide,
Sleeh fine circumstances ort to make us satisfied;
Fer the world is full of roses, and the roses full of dew,
And the dew is full of heavenly love that drips fer me and you.

Driven to Desperation.

Marriage Licenses.

Pansy M Hansford, 17, to Nels P Jensen, 32.
Amanda F Wilson, 17, to Adam Bauer, 33.
Etta Pier, 38, to R R Robinson, 35.

"I saw a woman on a street car," remarks an unknown reporter, open a satchel, take out a purse, close the satchel and open the purse, take out the dime and close the purse, open the satchel and put in the purse, close the satchel and lock both ends. Then she gave the conductor the dime and took a nickel in change. Then she opened the satchel and took out the purse, closed the satchel and opened the purse, put in the nickel and closed the purse, open the satchel and put in the purse, closed the satchel and locked both ends. Then she felt to see if her back hair was all right, and she was all right and just as sweet."

Good Chains

Are hard to get. A mite of gold will make a brass chain look poor, but it soon rubs off. A good chain that will wear well can't be bought for a dollar; but for $3.00, $3.50 and $4.50 you can get a good chain that can be depended upon for ten, fifteen and twenty years.

I buy only standard made chains, and you can feel assured that whatever you pay you can get nothing better elsewhere for the same money.
