Nerve specialists say that a great many suicides are the direct result of exhausted brain cells. When you find yourself becoming morose and despondent, when you are conscious that the zest of life is evaporating, that you are losing the edge of your former keen interest in things generally and that your life is becoming a bore, says The Dalles Chronicle, you may be pretty sure that you need more sleep, that you need country or outdoor exercise. If you get these you will find that all the old enthusiasm will return. A few days of exercise in the country, rambling over hills and meadows, will erase the dark pictures which haunt you and restore buoyancy to your animal spirits. No man is in an absolutely normal condition until he enjoys bare living and feels that existence itself is a precious boon. No one is normal who does not feel thankful every day that he is alive, and that he can think and act with vigor and effectiveness.

THE STATE FAIR.

No time in the history of the Oregon state fair has there been such a good feeling among the agricultural classes towards the success of the fair as exists at the present time. Every section of the state seems to be taking an interest in the fair and promises to give it their hearty support. Eastern Oregon for the first time has promised one or two county exhibits, consisting of agricultural products, while the southern portion of the state will also be represented by a comprehensive exhibit of its agricultural products. Live stock from all over the state is being prepared for this year's fair.

There are reasons for all this awakening of the people to the support of the fair. One is, the management has worked hard and faithfully to make the fair as broad as the state itself. The transportation companies have come to their assistance and made very liberal rates on hauling exhibits of all kinds. Another is, the people are beginning to realize that it is time to let the outside world know of the wonderful resources of our state, and believe that the state fair is the proper place to meet the better class of homeseekers. This will make the fair doubly valuable. It will give those who are looking for homes on the Pacific coast an opportunity to see in a body what our state can produce, and where it is produced, without traveling all over the state at great expense. It will also give the exhibitor the best possible opportunity of showing his products, whether it be grains, grasses, fruits, vegetables or live stock.

How Tuskegee Helps The South.

From the car windows of the Southern Railway system in going south from Washington, one is impressed with marks of a general improvement. Fences are in a better state of repair than they were eight years ago when I last visited Tuskegee. Barns are painted. Factories have been built and they seem to be busy. Long freight trains on sidings with their variety of machinery and general merchandise confirm the impression. Nowhere else in the section, however, is there any sight more inspiring in its promise for the future of the South than this work at Tuskegee Institute. It is the object lesson for the section. It tells the people what they should do and shows them doing it. Every man and woman of the South, whatever his position in life or his complexion, must profit by contact with the burning intensity and the trained intelligence which marks the work of this little community. No statesman, whatever his prejudices, can leave the place after even a cursory examination of the work without feeling that the nation should be doing throughout the country what private philanthropy is doing at Tuskegee. No farmer can see the system and study the details in stock raising, dairying and general agriculture on most unresponsive soil without being a better man for the experience. Indeed the annual conferences of the negro farmers are continued all the year round, for they come in for advice and other assistance whenever they find themselves confronted with agricultural or financial problems.—From "Vacation Days at Tuskegee," by John S. Durham, in August National Magazine.

Boy Cured of Colic After Physician's Treatment Had Failed.

"My boy when four years old was taken with colic and cramps in his stomach. I sent for the doctor and he injected morphine, but the child kept getting worse. I then gave him half a teaspoonful of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and in half an hour he was sleeping and soon recovered."—F. L. Wilkins, Shell Lake, Wis.
