Last Saturday afternoon Mrs. J. C. Hodson while at home with the children, was startled by a rifle ball crashing through the window, shattering the glass and striking the table in the room. Some boys were shooting down in the canyon and evidently became reckless in handling their rifles. Too much care cannot be exercised in such cases.

The little flurry of snow which came the first of the week was a faint reminder to newcomers of what they had left behind them. It was hailed with delight by the small boy who had not had the chance to snowball for a couple of years, but was viewed askance by the old timers who much prefer the gently falling rain. The hills surrounding town had a coat of several inches.

Mrs. Hannah Smith, widow of Elisha Smith, died of heart trouble Saturday, the funeral services being conducted by Rev. The county clerk complains because there seems to be something the matter with the marriage license market. Last year's record in that line—175—meant an average of more than one for every two working days. After eight long years the gentler sex again holds sway, and this year should knock the record into smithereens. But it is not keeping up with the average.—Reporter.

Hollingsworth & Cooper, the furniture dealers and undertakers, have given evidence of their enterprise by purchasing a new funeral car or hearse, which arrived last week and was used for the first time Monday. It is a fine vehicle, finished in good taste and makes a good appearance. Though few of us are anxious to ride in it, nevertheless it comes to fill one of the "long-felt wants."

The fire department of Newberg held its annual meeting Wednesday evening and elected as its officers for the coming year, C. F. Butler, chief, N. J. Sykes, secretary and L. B. Ferguson, treasurer. An effort will be made to fill the ranks of both companies as soon as possible and when that is accomplished, in all probability the department will be reorganized and a third company organized. As it is now the city has two hose carts and a hook and ladder wagon, with but two companies to handle them.

Mrs. Eleanor Williams died at the home of her mother Mrs. Terry, Tuesday, January 19th, the funeral exercises to be conducted by Elder Geo. C. Carl at the Brethren church, Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Mrs. Williams had been a sufferer for over a year with lung and heart trouble, and had tried the climate of both Arizona and Southern Oregon. She was a Christian woman held in high esteem by all that knew her. She leaves her mother, husband, two brothers and three sisters to mourn her loss. The deceased was in her fortieth year.

It begins to look and sound very much like business down at the new furniture factory. Thirteen different machines have been installed and there is one more on the way. F. C. Horton, the efficient foreman, has most of them lined up and in good running order, and when the power is turned on, such a roar and a bur-r-r result as is sweet music to the ear of a man who likes to see the wheels of industry turning. The plant has a fine engine, and it is a pleasure to watch it working so smoothly and easily. The factory will start up for business as soon as dry lumber is procurable. There is twenty thousand feet of timber now in the dry house. The plant will be started with as few men as possible, as they will have to learn as they go, under the supervision of Mr. Horton. There is machinery enough, with the added-room which the company expects to have later on, to use from fifteen to twenty men. The concern will make a specialty of turning out kitchen treasures, for which there is a steady demand and in the manufacture of which there is good profit.
