Hitchcock and Fulton are sassing back at each other. Sic'em.

While most of the old line democrats are coming out for Bryan, Grover has gone fishing.

If Mayor Lane really wants to do house cleaning in Portland why don't he appoint Tom Word chief of police.

Some revivalists of pretty fair, average common sense in other matters, allow the meetings they conduct to approach entirely too near the line of religious fanaticism. A lesson should be learned from the results of Holy Rollerism.

All the Holy Roller lunatics should be rounded up and landed in asylums for the insane where they belong. None of them should be allowed to remain at large to poison the minds, as well as to endanger the lives of others.

The Willamette is claiming about the usual number of victims from drowning this season. The term "Beautiful Willamette" is most worthily bestowed on this great waterway, but woe to the man who takes undue chances in its dark, deep pools.

The Louisville Herald says William Jennings Bryan has so far carried Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Nebraska, Ollie James and Henry Watterson. Just one vote plus half the electoral college is all that is now required for his election.

If officers of the law would make a practice of dealing out justice to law breakers with the same fearless hand that R. B. Linnville showed last Tuesday, in pronouncing sentence on Kinney, courts would be held in higher esteem by the people, and it is safe to say the day would be hastened when there would be fewer flagrant cases of law breaking.

The editor of the Dayton Optimist asked the business men to state their views "on the immediate needs of the city." Some said an ice plant was needed, others a reservoir, one man said he would have to go home and ask his wife, but the answer of S. W. Sigler was, "a progressive body of men could do more for Dayton than any other agency." A big lump of truth in a nutshell.

Along with a lot of other railroad talk that is floating through the air comes the report that Jim Hill has purchased the Corvallis & Eastern railroad and the Willamette Valley Traction company's line, with the intention of extending the former into Eastern Oregon and splitting the business in the Willamette valley with the latter. Good boy, Jim, if true. Oregon has been waiting for you for many years.

The Youths Companion says "A movement of great political significance has been started by the managers of both political parties in Indiana. In five counties of the state the party leaders have signed agreements not to spend one dollar for the purchase of votes in the coming election. Moreover, no man known to be purchasable, or who is not recognized as a party man, is to be employed about the party headquarters or in taking the party poll. For this necessary work both parties have agreed to pay the same wages, and neither is to employ any man to whom the other party objects on the score of his bad character. This is a sensible and simple way of purifying politics at its source.

"The way of the transgressor is hard." Some people will insist on taking chances on it but it stands out as a homely truth just the same.

The Graphic has a letter from F. Zimmermann & Co., wholesale liquor dealers of Portland, asking for rates on advertising. No, thank you we will continue to get along without that class of advertising.

A huge boulder swept down by the movements of the glacial age marks the grave of John J. Ingalls, Kansas' brilliant senator, and thereon is inscribed, below the one word Ingalls, this quotation from his famous essay on "Blue Grass." "When the fitful fever is ended and the foolish wrangle of the market and forum is closed, grass heals over the scar which our decent into the bosom of earth has made, and the carpet of the infant becomes the blanket of the dead."

It is often the case that men may be known by their "talk" about as well as by their works. For instance just let a man be arrested for violation of the liquor laws and if you will keep your ears open you can very soon ascertain where people stand on the whiskey question. And it is often a surprise to see the number of people in a decent community who will lineup with the violator of the law. It is worth the effort just to get fellows to show their colors occasionally.

Steam Print.

In the days gone by when a newspaper plant reached the stage where the business justified steam power and the new era was ushered in, the fact was heralded far and wide and the imprint on every job turned out carried the mark of "steam print." Since the coming of gasoline and electric motors most of the glory has departed from the use of the old time steam imprint, and since water power has been good enough for the Graphic, it was not from a matter of choice that Will Crater was asked to back his engine up alongside the shop last Thursday afternoon and furnish power to make the wheels go round and turn out the week's issue of the paper.

Any printer knows it requires some effort to keep a sweet temper on press day when things go wrong, and on that afternoon with the mercury sizzling around the hundred mark and some carpentering to be done on dry hard lumber with a dull saw, things began to look serious, but since the water pressure was insufficient nothing else could be done and at six o'clock the week's issue of the Graphic was printed and not a naughty word spoken.

Something might have been said if the city water committee had been present but since none of the committee were in sight, no words were wasted and a chance will be given them to mend their ways and the leaky reservoirs before it is everlastingly too late, which may not be long.
