

Oregonian Reunion in California

Ting-a-ling-ling-rang the telephone bell at a home in Berkeley the other day, where some eight or ten have their board and keep. One of the number went to the phone and as usual all the rest pushed doors ajar in different parts of the house and proceeded to listen. For such a kindly interest in the affairs of all in general and of each other in particular is characteristic of such an establishment. "An invitation to dinner did you say, for the Newberg fellows?" was what was heard at the Berkeley end of the line. "Where? Where? How do you get there? Oh, yes, thank you, we'll come all right. I can speak for the other fellows on that kind of a layout."

One Kelsey was the spokesman for one Kirk and the writer. On general principles an invitation of that nature would be received with perfect equanimity, but the fact that the second party to the conversation was Mrs. F. C. Stanard in the suburbs of Oakland, but added zest to the acceptance.

On Friday evening the trio sallied forth in search of their former Newberg friends, Rev. F. C. Stanard and family, and how they found them will doubtless be of interest to the latter's host of Newberg friends.

They are living this summer about a half hour's ride from the business section of Oakland, and are practically in the country. It is a very pretty country too, and a pretty, home like place it is indeed, which they are occupying, more nearly an ideal rural home than a suburban one. Mr. Stanard is acting as pastor of a church not far distant and is called from time to time to occupy other pulpits as well.

The trio in question were met with just the kind of reception which Newberg people know would be given by Mr. and Mrs. Stanard—and the girls. A glance at the latter was evidence conclusive that they had not been the losers by a change of climate. The out-of-door life which they are living has made them pictures of health and comeliness, but that they are Oregon born and bred is a fact which must be taken into consideration. They have grown in their one year of absence to such a degree that Vera and Gwen will soon be in the grown up class, while it will not much longer be little Helen.

It soon became evident after dinner was announced, that the trio were to profit by the fact that the Stanards had not been imposed upon by many of their Newberg friends since moving to California. Either that, or that they had been and had come to the conclusion that there was just one way of defense—of foundering their guests, once and for all. If the latter, they chose an inopportune time of trying it on, for the visitors, though somewhat taken off their guard, quickly rallied to the attack on two or three fried chickens and accessories, strawberry short cake, ad infinitum.

Many were the questions asked of the home folks left behind, and indications point to the fact that the Stanards are loyal Oregonians still, though enjoying life in the Golden state. They have a vivid and interesting story to tell of their experiencing the earthquake, which did not tend to lessen their regard for "Oregon, Sweet Oregon."

On the first shock Mr. and Mrs. Stanard started for the room in which the girls were, but were jostled about in a manner which allowed them to make but very uncertain headway. Mr. Stanard says he really thought the house had been torn from its foundation and was bounding down hill across the yard.

When gathered in the parlor after dinner, a duet from the host and hostess was called for, and they responded in a manner which many a Newberg audience has had cause to appreciate. Kelsey, who is fast coming to be known in California as "the Riley man," delighted his audience with several of the Hoosier bard's best, his readings being interspersed with piano solos by Miss Minnie Stanard of Brownsville, who is visiting her brother and family. Kirk asked for fifteen minutes in which to give a brief outline of the many attractions of a certain baby girl which the Stanards had never been privileged to see, but the other two fellows who have had to listen to the same on an average of once a day, insisted on cutting his speech to ten minutes, without rebuttal.

A more enjoyable evening could not be imagined, and the trio departed reluctantly, glad that Rev. Stanard and family had moved to California. Hardly that either, but if they had to leave Newberg and Oregon, very well satisfied that they were in range on this occasion with such open handed hospitality extended to three Oregonians.

Parker-Elliott Marriage

The marriage ceremony of Walter S. Parker and Miss Martha Elliott was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Elliott on Wednesday evening, August 1st, at eight o'clock, Rev. James P. Price officiating.

About forty guests participated in the happy event. The bride was becomingly attired in white mull, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The beautiful rooms in the commodious new Elliott home, were charmingly decorated, the bride and groom standing under an arch of maiden hair ferns and cream sweet peas. "O, promise me," was softly sung by Miss Sibyl Woodward.

Following the ceremony delicious refreshments were served, after which the bride and groom left for their new home on Fourth street, amid the congratulations and good wishes of the guests.

The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Parker and a member of the Parker Mercantile Company, while the bride is the sister of our fellow townsmen F. A. and Orange Elliott.

Local Events.

Arthur Hall and Lester Moore, who are working in a sawmill at Linton spent Sunday at home.

Herbert Coffin was so far recovered that he returned to his work in Portland the first of the week.

Miss Mabel Knight has gone to Nebraska where she intends to remain for several months with her sister.

Mrs. M. Terrell and Master Glen Charles went to Portland Tuesday to visit for a few days with L. W. Charles.

W. H. Hubbard, who is taking the first vacation he has had in ten years, has gone to the beach, making the trip overland with his mother.

The Misses Sibyl and Bernice Woodward have been at Chemawa during the week attending the closing exercises of the school.

Mrs. W. E. Wight shipped some fruit to her sister at Heppner last week, the prices for fruit being so high up there that it is almost on the prohibited list for most people.

It is the next thing to a criminal offense to throw broken glass into the street where it is liable to cut horses feet as well as to do much damage in various other ways. Don't do it.

Delano Estle, who returned from Newport Monday says it was so cold on the beach that it took him a day to thaw out after he returned to the valley. He found real estate on the beach at Nye beach.

On Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock the members of the hose and hook and ladder companies will cross bats on the ball grounds east of town. Admission ten and fifteen cents. The proceeds go toward helping the boys out. Make arrangements to attend and help swell the crowd.

Traveling Passenger Agent John P. Jones of the Southern Pacific, who passed through town Tuesday morning stated that a special student rate for those coming west on the morning train would be arranged, provided a special effort was made to work up an attendance at college from that direction. It is a matter that should be taken up at once.

While Mrs. H. C. Paulson was driving home from town last Saturday morning the team ran away, turning the carriage over at the turn in the road near Ed Holt's place and making kindling of it. To the surprise of those who saw it, Mrs. Paulson, although thrown violently to the ground in the mix up, was not seriously hurt. The carriage was so badly wrecked that it was dumped into the junk pile at Evans blacksmith shop.

The J. D. Cook family living a mile and a half west of town had a case of poisoning last week that came very near being fatal. A lady relative of the family, who came down from east of the mountains brought a lunch with her in which was some fried chicken put up in a tin bucket. She ate some of the chicken on the way and felt some sickness afterward but thought it came from riding on the train. In the evening after her arrival the members of the family ate of the chicken and were so sick soon after that medical assistance was required to tide them over the danger point. The poison seems to have come from the tin bucket in which the chicken was carried.

It is generally supposed that springtime hits the amateur poet in the tender spots but the recent hot wave got the better of Nathan White and laid him up for repairs, and this is how he came out of it:

Oh I wished I was a camping on the side of old Mount Hood
When 'twas up into the nineties, oh that would have been too good.
Or with Gilbert & Stanley, a working in the ice.
When it danced around the eighties, that too would have been nice.
E'er since we came to Oregon it's been generally the rule
That our winters have been pleasant, and in summer nights been cool,
But this summer beat the record, we felt that we should wilt.
We kicked off sheet and blanket and threw away the quilt.
It's been very good for wheat though, and fine for making hay;
The corn just grows by jumps and melons too they say.
Still, when it gets to ninety it seems there's something wrong,
But I guess we Oregonians will somehow get along.
