THURSDAY, MARCH 7, 1907.

The Dallas Observer has entered the field with a semi-weekly edition, which at this distance looks like giving good service on poor pay.

The sack of government seeds sent to this office for free distribution was disposed of in short order and calls continue to come for more. Let the farmers at Washington put in a larger crop for next season.

It is with regret that we note the resignation of Paul Rader as superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, who announces that he has an offer to engage in literary pursuits that he can't afford to refuse. It will be difficult to find a man with the ability and force of Mr. Rader to take the place.

You can't always judge from appearances, says an exchange. The man in the shabby suit may be an editor, while the fellow with the white vest and plug hat may be a delinquent subscriber who finds fault because the little home paper does not contain as much news as the big city papers.

James Cromwell, who is said to be the last survivor of the men who defended Elijah Lovejoy, the anti-slavery preacher-editor when he was assassinated at Alton, Illinois in 1837, is living at Xenia, Ohio. What hath time wrought in the way of changes in public sentiment in our country during the lifetime of this man, as a little turning of the pages of history will show.

Some of the so-called "Massage Parlors" have been raided by the officers in Portland lately, when the women in charge have been found to be using the sign on the door merely as a blind, while they were luring unsuspecting girls to ruin. Any woman who is so lost to all sense of common decency and respect for the young of her sex, ought to be "massaged" with a board in the hands of a competent officer.

There is the man who "takes sides" on everything, important or unimportant, and regardless of whether he knows many of the facts or not. And then there is the fellow who never "takes sides" on anything. The first one makes lots of enemies and he makes lots of friends. He gets into all sorts of trouble. He "gets off on the wrong foot" so often people come to pay little attention to his opinions. And yet he is often a positive force in the community and is not to be wholly condemned. He often renders good service. The other fellow never has enemies camping on his trail—he doesn't have any trail to camp on. He has few warm friends. He is sort of a cipher in men's clothes. He smiles pleasantly enough as he passes and remarks frequently on the state of the weather. He is beautifully harmless. A town composed of the first class would die by suicide; one composed of the second would be dead by instinct. Pray to be saved from belonging to either class.—Ex.

"Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway has an article in the Sunday Oregonian explaining how her constitutional amendment for woman suffrage was handled in the legislature and her manner of treating the subject will do the cause no good in Oregon. She displays too much bitterness toward the senators who opposed it and toward the good women of the state who believe that woman suffrage is neither advisable or desirable. This is a question upon which there is room for honest difference of opinion, but there is no room for abuse of the opposing forces, as each must be given credit for sincerity. Mrs. Duniway is a noble character and a brilliant woman, but she can never make the cause of equal suffrage successful by systematic abuse of those who do not or can not agree with her." The criticism given above by the Statesman is timely and very much in place, although it will be wasted, for Mrs. Duniway is not one of the sisters who is willing to be shown by a "man." The fact remains, however, that she often weakens her cause by pressing it in for attention when even her friends and the friends of the suffrage movement consider it entirely out of place and untimely.

AN UNFORTUNATE VETO.

It is with regret that we note the veto of the Johnson road bill by the governor and we believe that a large majority of the people who have studied the bill feel the same way about it. Some improvement has been made in the manner of road work in Oregon during the past few years, but we believe that had the Johnson bill been allowed to stand, a new era in road-making would have been ushered in that would have been fruitful of great results. Occasionally our governor assumes the roll of the mossa-back and he certainly struck this gait when he applied the ax to the Johnson bill. In an editorial on the veto the Oregonian says: "The Johnson bill provided that the property-owners within two miles on either side of a road and within one mile of the end may petition for permanent improvement thereof, and if the project be approved by a state road engineer and by the county court after remonstrances have been heard, the work shall be done in a systematic manner and the cost be borne equally by the state, the county and the property within the limits mentioned. Without attempting a detailed statement of all the provisions of the act, this is in substance the plan proposed. The bill carried an appropriation of $200,000, but limited the amount that may be secured by any one county to $20,000 until each county desiring state aid had secured it. By no construction could the act be said to favor any one section of the state.

Everyone who advocates good roads should agree that they must be paid for. The trouble in the past has been that we have been wishing for good roads without being willing to pay the price. We have continued in the old plan of letting every farmer "work out" his road taxes pretty much when and where he pleased. There have been some deviations from this, but wherever bad roads exist the same old policy is in force. To get good roads this unbusiness-like policy must be abandoned and the road work must be done systematically. The farmers must do the teaming, as they have in the past, but instead of "working out" taxes in a haphazard manner, those who do the work should be employed at reasonable wages under the directions of competent road-builders. Only in that manner can work be properly done.

But the expense of this systematic roadbuilding cannot and should not be borne entirely by owners of property adjoining the road improved. They are not the only ones who receive the benefit of the improvement. Moreover, the expense is too great for them to bear. The city merchant receives the benefit of the improvement of a county highway. The professional man and the man of leisure are also beneficiaries. Every owner of an automobile and every man who drives a horse for pleasure or profit is better off for the improvement of a county road.

The city should help pay for highway improvement, and this it will do under a plan of requiring the county and state to contribute to the fund for permanent work."

Springbrook.

Farmers are busy this fine weather spraying and trimming trees, seeding and planting some potatoes and garden truck.

Most people have got free from the grip of the la grippe.

A reception was given Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Newby for Rev. Elwood Knight and wife.

Mr. Knight preached his farewell sermon on Sunday to a full house.

Zimri Mills has returned from the mountains where he went to visit his brother, Dr. Mills, who was sick.

Paul Macy is building a new barn on his place near Springbrook.

The tyrant is dead, but not tyranny.

Invaluable for Rheumatism.

I have been suffering for the past few years with a severe attack of rheumatism and found that Ballard's Snow Liniment was the only thing that gave me satisfaction and tended to alleviate my pains. March 24, '02: John C. Degnan, Kinsman, Illinois. 25c, 50c and $1. Sold by C. F. Moore.

A Hint to Travelers.

While in Suffolk, Virginia, Henry Croll, Jr., proprietor of the Beaverton, Michigan, Hardware Co., was taken very sick with bowel trouble. A traveling salesman from Saginaw, Michigan, advised him to get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which he did. "It soon cured me, and I take pleasure in recommending it," he says. No one should leave home on a journey without a bottle of this remedy. It is almost sure to be needed and is not obtainable while on steamship or cars. Sold by C. F. Moore.

Getting busy with their neighbors' affairs is the way some people have of being industrious.

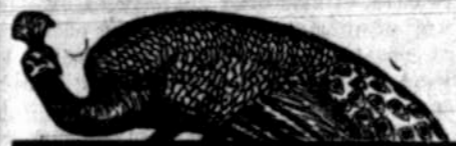

Saved her Son's Life.

The happiest mother in the little town of Ava, Missouri, is Mrs. S. Ruppee. She writes: "One year ago my son was down with such serious lung trouble that our physician was unable to help him; when by our druggist's advice I began giving him Dr. King's New Discovery, and I soon noticed improvement. I kept this treatment up for a few weeks when he was perfectly well. He has worked steadily since at carpenter work. Dr. King's New Discovery saved his life." Guaranteed best cough and cold cure by F. H. Caldwell & Co., druggist. 50c and $1. Trial bottle free.

Sympathy is the solace of the poor, but for the rich there is consolation.

Do Not Neglect a Bad Cold.

Never allow a cold to take its course. Too often at this season of the year its course is toward pneumonia. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will promptly cure your cold and counteract any tendency in this direction. There is nothing better for acute throat and lung troubles. For sale by C. F. Moore.
