Henry is good in 'figers. He has a hundred counts piled up against Abe Ruef and still a countin'.

"Honest Abe" lives in history. So will Abe Ruef if Henry has his way about it, and it looks like he would.

The season for the annual house cleaning is at hand and this reminds us that the streets about town should not be forgotten in the roundup and the burning of rubbish.

A good spanking with the bare hand will often bring results, when all other efforts in the way of admonition have failed to correct wrong tendencies in the makeup of a boy, and it is interesting to note that the same course seems to be working well with the railroad magnates. They are already indicating to father Roosevelt that they are willing to be good.

The Eugene Register recently issued a large, special edition, filled from "kiver to kiver" with descriptive matter, both illustrated and written, showing the most excellent resources of Lane county. It is a splendid edition and speaks volumes for the grit and enterprise of the publishers. It will be a great factor in advertising Oregon and especially Eugene and Lane county.

John D. is writing his will and immense blocks of his big fortune are to be left for the betterment of mankind, so the story goes. If he wants to rest easy in his grave, he will do well to make restitution to the numbers of his competitors in the oil business, who he has crushed to the wall by means of rebates forced from the railroads on oil shipments, and lest he forgets some of his victims he will do well to consult Ida M. Tarbell.

A good housewife always prefers to have a little forewarning of the coming of "company," in order to give time for the proper adjustment of the little odds and ends about the home. Newberg has been warned of the coming of homeseekers in large numbers by the press reports, and if we are to be classed as good housekeepers, no more time should be lost in making a general cleaning up about the streets and vacant lots. Smoke should be ascending heavenward from trash piles in all parts of town and without further delay, if our reputation for maintaining a clean, sightly municipality is to be kept at par. And it must be.

It is believed in educational circles that President E. D. Ressler, of the Oregon State Normal School at Monmouth, will be chosen to succeed President Gatch, of the Oregon Agricultural College, whose resignation will take effect in June. Mr. Ressler is a strong man and is in every way qualified to manage the big school at Corvallis. His appointment would be generally satisfactory to the people of Oregon.—Dallas Observer.

If Mr. Ressler is to receive the appointment it is to be hoped that the Observer is correct in the statement that he is "in every way qualified to manage the big school." Possibly he may be. The Graphic does not pretend to know. But we do know that the board of regents in making a selection for a man to take the place as president, should choose a man who has the qualifications necessary to fit the name of the institution. Above everything else he ought to be a man trained in agricultural pursuits, and one who will make the teaching of horticultural and agricultural science the main feature of the Oregon Agricultural College. There are plenty of opportunities offered for the training of pharmacists and electrical engineers, but if we are going to tax ourselves to maintain an institution called an "Agricultural College," let's be consistent and put the farmer boys who attend the school to the front, instead of pushing the other fellows forward, and dubbing the farmer boys "hayseds." However, as the Oregon Agriculturist suggested a year or two ago in discussing this question, it is hardly worth while to look for a change in conditions as long as one lone farmer sits on the board of regents, along with a long list of lawyers and other professional men who make up the board.

TOO BIG FOR CLOTHES.

There comes a time in the making of a live, progressive municipality when the actual, pressing demands that are made by the expanding conditions make a very knotty question for the people to handle. This critical period comes when the ordinary town clothes of the knee breeches order fail to meet the demands and a suit more in keeping with city notions must be had. These conditions don't come about by reason of any stuck up notions either. Manufacturing plants cause an influx of men with large families of children who must be educated, and larger school houses with an increased number of teachers must be provided. Improved streets are necessary to carry the increased travel, more street lights and a larger supply of water is demanded, and so the story goes until the men who manage the city's finances are made dizzy in their efforts to meet the conditions as they exist. The whole country however seems to be pretty much in the same position as will be seen from the following statement made by the Youth's Companion:

"This country is in the position of the mother of a family of growing boys and girls which she finds it difficult to keep clothed. Gowns, coats and trousers become too small because the wearers grow too big for them, and must be repeatedly let down and out.

Take the case of the railroads. A railroad-builder lately called attention to the fact that the amount of freight carried has doubled in ten years, although the track mileage has increased very little. He might have added that there are only about forty-five per cent more freight cars now than ten years ago to carry the hundred per cent increase in freight, and that the number of locomotives has increased less than forty per cent. The country has grown so much faster than the railroads that there are neither cars nor engines enough to carry the products of the farm and the factory to the consumers.

Not only have the railroads been outgrown, but the currency system fails more seriously each year to meet the demands made upon it. The trouble lies not so much in the lack of money in the country to do its business, but in the slowness with which its circulation responds to the varying needs of different sections. It should be elastic, like the knitted underwear which fits equally well before and after a heavy dinner. There is no give to it now, through the fault of a system which answered very well a generation ago, but has since been outgrown.

The educational facilities, especially in the large cities, have long since become inadequate. In New York, where population is congested and increasing with great rapidity, ten or fifteen new school houses ought to be built every year to accommodate the new pupils; and if room is provided for those who have been crowded out in past years, the number would have to be doubled. Chicago, Philadelphia, St.

Louis and other cities have similar problems.

If the men find it difficult to understand why conditions are not as they ought to be, their wives can appreciate the problem of those who are trying to keep this, that, or the other institution from outgrowing its clothes."

California's Success.

One thing especially admirable about California is the persistency with which the people advertise the state's resources and keep its activities before the general public. They send their advertising to the east and south but do not hesitate to fire their literature into Oregon and other northwestern states with the modest request that the editors of papers give their stories the widest publicity. For instance, we are in weekly receipt of a nicely written article descriptive of California's resources and breathing of its progress. This letter is sent out by the California Promotion Co., and we are expected to publish the same, probably some Oregon papers do, but we have so far failed to find a check accompanying this literature which is advertising pure and simple.

We are willing to give old Oregon all the free advertising possible, but if California, or any other state wants advertising that is calculated to draw population from this state, or send the new arrivals on south, they will have to pay full rates for the same. However, we admire California for its nerve and enterprise. It has the methods that build up the state, the methods that win and their plan is worthy of emulation by Oregon.

Californians work every minute, firstly for California, secondly for themselves. Here in Oregon the order is reversed, self first, Oregon afterward.

So long as we keep the cart before the horse our progress will not be as swift as it should be and accounts for California and Washington leading us in the race for population and capital.

Let Oregon people do hustling along more modern lines and the result will be not only surprising but most gratifying. Time to wake up in earnest and keep awake.—Eugene Register.

Invaluable for Rheumatism.

I have been suffering for the past few years with a severe attack of rheumatism and found that Ballard's Snow Liniment was the only thing that gave me satisfaction and tended to alleviate my pains. March 24, '02: John C. Degnan, Kinsman, Illinois. 25c, 50c and $1. Sold by C. F. Moore.

A Hint to Travelers.

While in Suffolk, Virginia, Henry Croll, Jr., proprietor of the Beaverton, Michigan, Hardware Co., was taken very sick with bowel trouble. A traveling salesman from Saginaw, Michigan, advised him to get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which he did. "It soon cured me, and I take pleasure in recommending it," he says. "No one should leave home on a journey without a bottle of this remedy. It is almost sure to be needed and is not obtainable while on steamship or cars. Sold by C. F. Moore.

Good manners are no certificate of character, but they are corroborative evidence.

Saved her Son's Life.

The happiest mother in the little town of Ava, Missouri, is Mrs. S. Ruppe. She writes: "One year ago my son was down with such serious lung trouble that our physician was unable to help him; when by our druggist's advice I began giving him Dr. King's New Discovery, and I soon noticed improvement. I kept this treatment up for a few weeks when he was perfectly well. He has worked steadily since at carpenter work. Dr. King's New Discovery saved his life." Guaranteed best cough and cold cure by F. H. Caldwell & Co., druggist. 50c and $1. Trial bottle free.

A man may go a social pace that will carry him beyond the limits of his income, but not very far beyond.

Do Not Neglect a Bad Cold.

Never allow a cold to take its course. Too often at this season of the year its course is toward pneumonia. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will promptly cure your cold and counteract any tendency in this direction. There is nothing better for acute throat and lung troubles. For sale by C. F. Moore.

It makes WOMEN beautiful

Syracuse Chilled and Steel Plows

Anyone will admit that there is no better than the Syracuse.
People who use them say they have no equal.

They are the ones that know. The Syracuse Chilled Plow is the only improvement in the chilled plow line, in years. It is lighter, stronger, and easier on man and team, and will do better work in any soil, than any other chilled plow made. We are ready to prove this, and can give you the names of people who are using them.
