If milk condensers should be established in all the towns in the valley that are making pleas for them, cow expansion would necessarily need to be taken up in earnest.

The Junction City Times makes favorable comment on the organization of the Yamhill county Press Association, and takes the view that the newspaper men of other counties in the state would do well to form similar organizations.

It avails the republicans in Portland very little to bewail the fact that in a mayoralty contest members of the party will not vote the ticket. When they learn by a few more severe lessons, brought about by defeats, that a majority of the voters do not stand for an open town, and go to work and put up a candidate who stands for decency and good government the party will deserve to succeed. Of course a very large per cent of the democratic vote would be against such a man, but results have proven that there are a sufficient number of voters in both the old parties who stand for decency to make a majority in such a contest.

It was generally understood that in the mayoralty fight in Portland the saloon element, the gambling fraternity and the whole North End district was for Devlin, the republican candidate, and the result was that a large per cent of the party who are opposed to what these people stand for, voted for Lane, the democratic-independent candidate, and elected him by a majority of 600. The time was, in the memory of man, when the candidate for mayor in Portland who could command the vote of the bum element was as good as elected, but since the better class of voters have gotten wise enough to stand together, regardless of politics, results have been different. We are pleased to note the change for the better.

The Oregon Agriculturalist says: The fruit growers of Oregon feel decidedly hostile to the druggists of the state at the present time. A law was enacted by the last Legislature in the interest of druggists which, according to Attorney General Crawford, will make it unlawful for any person except a registered pharmacist to sell any drug or chemical of a poisonous nature. This gives the druggists a monopoly on the sale of Paris green, arsenate of lead and its essential ingredient, arsenate of soda and of all spraying compounds or ingredients which contain poison. The percentage of profit which druggists usually charge will make the cost of these sprays excessively high. Fruit growers are not the only class of farmers who will feel the effect of the law. Arsenic is the essential ingredient in many of the most effective dips used for sheep and goats and the sale of dips of this class will now be monopolized by the druggists.

Picks up Egg of Shark.

The egg of a man-eating shark is in the possession of Thomas Glaze, of Albany, and it forms one of the strangest curiosities ever seen in this part of the state. He found it last week on the beach near Waldport.

The egg is about one foot long and seven or eight inches wide. It is flat and dark in color, and very much resembles a dark rubber bag, both in appearance and texture. The egg is flexible and can be squeezed into various shapes. One end of it is covered with a moss-like substance, where the egg was fastened to the bottom of the ocean, in accordance with the custom of the sharks, which leave their eggs there to hatch. The end of the egg where it was attached to the earth is exactly like rubber.

Glaze was walking along the beach when he picked up this queer-looking object. He had no idea it was an egg, and did not know what it was, but believing it was a curiosity, he carried it to Newport, where an old sea captain informed him that it was the egg of a man-eater. This captain had seen many of them, but is authority for the statement that the eggs very seldom break loose from the bottom of the ocean, where the sharks leave them, and hence they are a notable curiosity.—Benton County Republican.

Acute Fevers and Osteopathy.

"Osteopathy may be all right for some things, but I wouldn't trust it in fevers" is almost a stock saying with some people. It has been repeated here a number of times in the past. These same people have expressed surprise that anyone would dare employ an osteopath in pneumonia (lung fever) or typhoid fever, and then still greater surprise at their success in those diseases. [The same has been true of puerperal fever (child-bed fever) tonsillitis and inflammatory rheumatism (rheumatic fever).]

One business man here said: "I wouldn't have believed it," when he saw the result of the treatment in the case of a boy, age eleven, who had been delirious with typhoid fever, on account of a temperature ranging from 102 4-5° (3 3-5° fever) to 104 4-5° (6 1-5° fever) for four days. Yet it was not difficult to control, and the nurse said, "The fever was reduced every time following treatment." There is nothing strange or unusual about those things to osteopaths; they are mere commonplace happenings. Osteopathy shines in acute disease.

All precautions were taken to prevent possible infection. Stools were disinfected and sterilized with Chlorid of lime (calcium chlorid, Ca Cl) as soon as voided, and then burned, preventing all chance of spreading through the agency of flies or insects. The bacillus coli communis is the germ of typhoid fever that causes infection unless precautions are taken. All soiled linen and bed clothes were put in a tub of boiling water containing a strong solution of calcium chlorid and cloths were saturated in carbolic acid and hung on the walls of the rooms. The greatest care was taken as to diet, nothing solid being allowed.

The "diplococcus pneumoniae of Frankel" is the micro-organism said to cause pneumonia. Lowered vitality permits these bacilli to find a nest and propagate in the lungs. They cannot live in a healthy lung or anywhere in a healthy body. Germicides may kill them, but they don't correct the nerve force and blood flow to and from the lung. An abnormality in the lung area of the spine is what weakens the lungs and lets the germs in. No better germicide can be conceived than pure blood. And pure blood can not exist when there is abnormality. At least the reduction of spinal abnormality cured these cases of lung and typhoid fever in two weeks. The pneumonia patient, a man twenty eight years old, was a consumptive, so the disease easily clutched him. His anterior condition between the scapulae (shoulder blades) weakened the lungs and laid them liable to attack.

To strengthen him after the fever broke required strong stimulation of the accelerators of the heart. Thus the circulation was improved and he was not liable to heart failure. Relaxing treatment to the lower limbs in each case was given to prevent thrombosis. As is customary in these diseases, under osteopathic treatment, their course was cut short, thus saving much unnecessary suffering and expense.

Wood, New Providence, Iowa; Mrs. Mattie Mc Daniel, Portland, Chas. F. and Alfred E. Moore, Newberg; Dr. J. B. Moore, Lents, and Rev. Frank L. Moore, Kelso, Washington.

Later on Alfred Moore removed to Newberg where he made his home, until two years ago when he went to live with his son, Dr. J. B. Moore at Lents, where he died.

The deceased was a birthright member of the Friends church, but later on united with the M. E. church. He was an active, energetic man, a great reader, and retained his faculties well to the end, which came without sickness or pain.

The funeral was held on last Friday at the home of his son, C. F. Moore, in Newberg, the services being conducted by Rev. Herbert T. Cash, pastor of Friends church.

He Fired the Stick.
