OUR STOCK IN TRADE.

The newspaperman's stock in trade is his advertising columns, though many people apparently fail to realize that this is the case and seem to think that notices that serve to bring them returns should not be paid for since it helps to "fill up."

When a barbecue is to be given in town the main thing needed is something to "fill up." Then why don't the committee in charge back a wagon up at the meat market and ask the proprietors to load in a good fat ox, and then drive around to the bakery and demand a thousand loaves of bread. The butcher and the baker have no doubt been solicited for liberal cash subscriptions to help defray the expenses of the festivities, but since they are in the business of furnishing stuff to "fill up," why should they not donate the ox and the bread?

If any solicitor for funds for the poor and needy or for the "good of the cause" has ever passed the Graphic office without entering, it must have been when the door was securely bolted, and it is not in any boasting way that we say that we believe that this shop, financial ability considered, makes as liberal donations for church and benevolent work and for boosting purposes for Newberg as any man in the community, and when we have done our part in this way, along with other people, we are not aware that we are under obligations to double up by giving away advertising space in the Graphic, to boost public entertainments that are gotten up for the purpose of making money, no difference how worthy the cause may be.

Without the returns that come from the advertising columns of a newspaper, the proprietor would not only be put in a position that he could not make cash donations that are called for, but his plant would soon be "on the county." And it might be further stated that in a number of the country newspaper offices in the valley, the job department is called on to make up deficiencies that are made in running the newspaper.

Donation work is all very well if properly distributed, but newspaper advertising is perfectly legitimate and it is worth something, else the people would not ask for it, and no newspaper man can give space away and hold his self respect.

MANUFACTURING TOWNS.

In an editorial on the advantages of a manufacturing town the Eugene Guard says: "To become a manufacturing centre is a most laudable ambition on the part of any community. You may take the dullest and most prosaic town and erect within its borders a busy, thriving manufacturing institutions, where large numbers of workmen are employed, and a new life is at once imparted to the place. The dull monotony of the past gives way to the sound of the steam whistle and the clangor of the shop. The streets no longer look deserted. People move with active restlessness in strange contrast to the times when no manufacturing was carried on in their midst. The liveliest towns that we have in this country are those wholly devoted to manufacturing. The dreariest towns, where dry-rot is visible on every hand, are those wherein no workshops are to be found. Manufacturing towns are not only more active, but as a rule they are prosperous, as well as being far more enterprising and affording better social and commercial advantages."

We quite agree with the Guard in what is stated above regarding the many advantages that come to a town that has shown enough vim and vigor to reach out and gather into its borders a number of manufacturing plants, and we are glad to be able to say that with the opening of the milk condensing plant this spring by the Lopp-Peters company and the big canning plant a little later by the Webber-Bussell people, Newberg will be fixed with a greater number of industrial plants than any other town of the same size in Oregon.

It is also the good fortune of Newberg to be surrounded by producers who own small holdings and who are engaged in growing fruits and berries, raising poultry and garden stuff for market and in this way they have something to sell at all seasons of the year. Now we are to have a milk condensing plant which will furnish a good market for the dairy and this most profitable industry will take on new life. The coming of the big canner that will open for business this season has already caused the fruit and berry growers to take a quicker step and the future for everybody about Newberg has a golden hue.

Newberg is moving in the right direction and all we need to do is to lend a hand to the oars—all hands with a will.

The people over at McMinnville continue to make heavy demands on Newberg. We furnished them a heavy weight for mayor, who now seems to have a life lease on the office, we voted the saloons out of their town, we furnished work for a large force of their mechanics through the whole of the past season and now they have drawn on us for men to manage their electric light plant. One of these days they will be wanting to take Newberg into the corporation in order to make some sort of a showing for the next census report.

If business had kept up at all other points on the Southern Pacific as well as it has at Newberg there would be no occasion for the company to retrench. Station Agent James informs the Graphic that the increase in sales of passenger tickets for the month of December over the same month last year amounted to $297.48 while the increase on incoming freight amounted to $887.15, making a total increase of $1184.63. Pass this up to Harriman.

Hammerly still insists that one of the McMinnville boys stubbed his toe and fell on the floor while playing that basketball game in Newberg and that another actually showed some scratches on his face. Horrors! Has basketball come to such carryings on as that?

Convention Cities.

Denver will accommodate a national convention of one of the great political parties for the first time, when the democratic delegates gather there on July 7th to nominate a candidate for the presidency.

The republican convention in Chicago, on June 16th, will be the eleventh national party convention held in that city since 1856. Chicago in the last fifty years has taken the place which Baltimore filled in the first half of the nineteenth century, for every democratic convention from 1832 to 1852 inclusive was held in Baltimore.

The first republican convention met in Philadelphia in 1856. The democrats met that year in Cincinnati. The popularity of Chicago began with the republican convention of 1860, which nominated Lincoln. Four years later the republicans went to Baltimore. No national convention of either party has been held there since 1872, when the democrats nominated Greeley.

St. Louis has had three conventions, one republican and two democratic. The republicans have met in Minneapolis once, and the democrats have once made their nomination in Kansas City. Grover Cleveland, who was named three times, twice in Chicago and once in St. Louis, was elected the years the convention met in Chicago. McKinley, who was nominated in St. Louis and in Philadelphia, defeated Bryan, who was named in Chicago and Kansas City.

New York has had but one convention in the period under consideration—that of the democrats in 1868, when Horatio Seymour, a resident of the state, was named.

The conditions which determine the selection of the city are varied. The hotels must be numerous enough to accommodate the delegates. The city must have a hall big enough to seat several thousand spectators, as well as the men who will make the nomination. Some consideration is given to the accessibility of the place by rail. This does not carry much weight, however, as all the large cities can be readily reached from any part of the country. Even if Denver is six hundred miles farther west than a convention has hitherto been held, the delegates will have no difficulty in reaching it.

The Goat Show.

The Angora goat raisers are making active preparations for their annual show, to be held in Dallas on January 15, 16 and 17. Including sheep and hogs in its exhibits, this Dallas show has perhaps done more than all other agencies combined to advertise Polk county as the home of blooded livestock, and Dallas as the center of the Angora industry in the United States. The show is open to all Oregon breeders, and recognition by the American Angora Goat Breeders' Association has given it national standing and prominence.
