The Last Call.

A number of our subscribers who were behind with their subscription accounts have called at the office and paid up, but there are still a number of others who have overlooked the matter. April 1 is not very far away and we hope that by that date all delinquent accounts will be made good.

All will admit that we have waited patiently for the money due on back subscriptions and since the postoffice department has ruled that a year is as long as the subscriber should ask the publisher of a weekly paper to send him the paper without pay, we once more earnestly ask all who are in this class to call and settle.

Like having a tooth pulled you will feel better when it is over. No charge for writing receipts.

The Statesman asserts that Salem has the best hello girls in the country but a few young fellows around Newberg will take exceptions to the statement.

John Bones, of Sheridan, has announced himself as a candidate for the legislature and since Newberg has a member of the Jones family out for the same position it will make it easy for the jingle writers. Bones rhymes so easily with Jones.

George Washington Dixon, editor and proprietor of the Canby Tribune, is a candidate for the legislature. He will have an advantage over the other fellow for he can print his own cards and do his speling through the columns of his own paper.

The past winter has been a very mild one but uncertain weather seems to linger long in in the lap'o spring, and consequently the ground hog and the fruit buds are very shy about showing themselves. If there is anything to be gained by the latter coming out late we ought to have a bumper fruit crop this season.

Timothy Brownhill, who recently sold the Gresham Herald, has bought property at McMinnville where he will open a law office. If, in the course of human events, it should become expedient to begin divorce proceedings at this office we know of no one we would rather trust than Timothy, and in these days of uncertainty—well you can't tell what is going to take place.

A travelling man for a Portland house who was in town this week said to the writer, "I tell you, I like this town. I find the most pleasant class of people here that I have met anywhere." Well why isn't it just as easy to give the stranger within the gates the glad hand, a pleasant smile and a cheering word as it is to be grouchy and indifferent. Last season a stranger came here from some point east looking for a location and he remarked after having been here a few days, "I find the people here speak to a man whether they know him or not and I like it. I am going to buy." And the man bought and is spending considerable money near town in improving his property. These two instances are given as pointers. If you have any troubles don't bore strangers with them but smile and look sweet. It pays every time. The homely old truth will bear repeating right here—"Vinegar never catches flies."

Senator Fulton is said to have shown marked antipathy to newspapers in the past, which may account for the lack of support he is receiving at the hands of many of the newspaper men throughout the state.

In the use of soft soap Chamberlain has few equals in the country. His latest move is to run for senator as a non-partisan, which is enough to make a horse laugh, but he will catch a lot of political Rubes on that plea. Why not organize a non-partisan party?

The grass is starting to grow rapidly and a day ought not to be lost in organizing for a general clean up all around town. It is just as easy to be neat and tidy as it is to be slovenly when you get the habit. The city fathers ought to take the lead and command the forces. What do you say, Mayor Harrold?

The result of state elections held in Oregon has quite often demonstrated that a lot of voters who pretend to be republicans have preferred to have a democrat for governor rather than a republican, although the republican party has had at the head of the ticket men who were equally as good and in some instances much better men than the democratic candidates, and it is little wonder that Chamberlain, who has been elevated to the governor's chair by republican votes, has concluded that the same fellows will give him a boost into the United States Senate. We can really see no reason why he should deem it necessary to assume the hypocritical role of the so called non-partisan.

What is County Work?

A Young Men's Christian Association is a group of young men engaged in cooperative Christian service with young men. Two factors enter and determine its effectiveness, the quality of its volunteer leadership and close supervision by a trained secretary is an absolute necessity in the successful conduct of any association, large or small. The quality of volunteer service is determined by the character and the accessibility of strong secretarial direction.

The smaller the community the more difficult it becomes to secure adequate supervision. Under ordinary conditions the amount of money available for the employment of trained supervision is far from sufficient.

Place off against this difficulty the significant fact that the larger half of young men and boys in North America reside in small towns, villages and rural communities, i. e. in places under 4000 population.

Add to this fact that the conditions of isolation, monotony, stagnation and idleness which maintain in many of these communities intensify the need for a definite, organized work among boys and young men who reside there.

Many efforts have been made to solve the problem. The church has recognized its importance and for many years the Young Men's Christian Association, as its special representative in men's work, has focussed its genius upon a practical adaptation of the spirit, purpose and method of its work to the county community.

The County work is the result of these years of study and experimentation. Robert Weidensall, the senior secretary of the International Committee, formulated this plan in 1889 and it has been ineffective operation since that time.

This plan of organization takes the county as an administrative unit. It groups the Associations, clubs and classes in the county. These organizations with the evangelical churches of the county send delegates to an annual convention which elects from ten to fifteen of the leading Christian laymen of the county as a county committee to administer the business interests of the work. The financial resources of the county are combined and about $1800 are raised to provide the general supervision of a trained secretary for the work of the various local organizations. Such cooperation guarantees the strongest possible type of expert administration for every organized field in the county.

It will be at once apparent that organizations under this type of

For Recorder.

Having been a republican voter of this county for 28 years and always taken an interest in public affairs and tried to do my full part toward the upbuilding of this country, I respectfully appeal to the Republican voters of Yamhill County for the nomination for the office of County Recorder at the primary election April 17, 1908.

Yours Truly,
J. H. REES.

For Sheriff.

I am a candidate for the nomination for the office of sheriff, subject to the will of the republican voters of the county at the primary election April 17. I have been a resident of Yamhill county for more than forty years and have a good knowledge of the duties of the sheriff's office. Your vote is solicited.

supervision, even in the larger villages cannot duplicate the city type for work even in miniature. This has been attempted and has always proved a failure. Associations under the county movement must be unique creations of their own environment. Whatever demands too close expert local supervision to make it effective must be eliminated. Material equipment in the shape of reading and game rooms, gymnastic apparatus, etc. almost invariably proves to be a curse rather than a blessing, a liability rather than an asset. Membership in each local organization must mean service given rather than privileges received.

This of course means that the membership will be much smaller than on the equipment basis. We must sacrifice quantity to quality. The vital factor in the organization is the size and character of the working force. The vital center thus becomes a personality, not a place. Values must be re-estimated and results re-defined with greater care and with a clearer study of facts. Superficial wants must be ignored, real needs must be reckoned with.

Such treatment of a local community recognizes the vital fact that the personal forces which makes possible the highest community development are resident and not imported forces. What is done for men weakens them and retards self expression.

What men do themselves strengthens them by calling into action the latent forces which unless thus forced into use would remain dormant and finally decay through neglect. For this reason the county secretary must not be a doer-of-things, he must find other men to do things.

This method of supervision and this type of local organization clearly indicates that the most important function of the county work is the discovery, enlistment, training and direction of volunteer leadership for the various avenues of service in the Kingdom of God. The county secretary must find men who have the ability to become leaders, awaken and enlist them, train them, and then direct their work so that the largest results shall be secured with the least expenditure of time, energy and money.

This type of county supervision has several other points of positive value: 1. It guarantees effective organized effort in the most remote village or hamlet and in the most scattered rural community of every county, localities where needy and responsive boyhood lives cannot be awakened and developed in any other way. Under the county work the larger town receives little more attention than the smaller community.

2. It uses an efficient man in every community center in the county to aid young men leaving that community to find board and employment under favorable conditions in their new place of residence. No home in a country boy's life is of greater importance than the one which finds him alone in a strange city without safe introduction to its life.

JOHN R. BOARDMAN, N. Y.

A Special Word.

Unless the delicate, exactly adjusted parts of a watch are kept clean and lubricated, they are certain to become worn to a greater or less extent and the movement will surely lose its accuracy. Tiny particles of grit are bound to work into the best protected movement; the oil will become gummed in time and these combined will serve to cut and grind the pivots and cause friction.

Every watch should be thoroughly cleaned and oiled at least once in eighteen months, and if yours has not been cleaned within that time, it should have immediate attention.

We will clean your watch precisely as it would be done in the best watch factories—take the movement entirely apart, clean each wheel, cog and pivot separately, assemble and regulate it—and when you get it back you may depend upon it being in "perfect shape."
