Some men are so modest they are ashamed to ask the price of an article and hand out a bill sufficiently large to cover the cost. But none are so modest they will not ask their wives what they want with a dollar or two.

Heacock & Son have fitted up a very neat office at the Sash and Door-Factory which they find to be a great convenience. They are now turning out a new style of porch columns that is taking with the trade wherever shown. In fact they are unable to keep up with the orders. Instead of being turned solid it is made up from pieces glued together and being hollow reduces the weight, which is a factor in shipping well worth considering.

Born, March 24, to Mr. and Mrs. Vin Vincent a daughter, Eula Nell, weight eleven pounds.

Parties interested in the use of spray material may be able to get valuable information by interviewing the cashier of the First National Bank, relative to the efficiency of Frank Cummins' crew and the material they are using.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Smith arrived here from Ohio Tuesday evening happy and smiling at the thought of getting back to Oregon again. They report a very disagreeable winter in Ohio, not on account of the severe cold but occasioned by the many sudden changes.

Mrs. Helen D. Harford was called home from the lecture field recently on account of the illness of Mr. Harford and as he is still in feeble health they have rented their little farm at Chehalem Center to Charley Shires, and he will go to Portland to live for the present, while she goes east to take up her work as lecturer for the National W. C. T. U.

Miss Ida Woods has been appointed manager of the Bell telephone office and will assume the duties the first of the month. This is a good appointment and will meet with the approval of the public having business with the office. Miss Woods is thoroughly conversant with the duties of the office and her pleasant manner of dealing with the patrons will be appreciated.

J. S. B. McNay, who owns three pieces of property on North Meridian street, keeps the yards and lawns in condition fit for inspection any day in the week. If everybody in town would do as well there would be no necessity for urging the setting apart of a day for cleaning up, but they won't, and a lot of newspaper space seems to be required to get any sort of a movement on foot for concerted action.

There is more vigilance being shown by owners of fruit trees in this community this season in the way of cleaning them up and spraying for pests than ever before, but there are a few spots about town that have been passed by so far by the owners. Possibly the fruit inspector may be looking after them. They certainly need it. A small number of trees are no more immune from the ravages of pests than a large orchard and if they are not worth caring for, they are not worth retaining to breed pests to annoy those who take a pride in caring for their trees. They simply cumber the ground and are a public nuisance that should be abated.

Paul V. Maris came up from Portland Saturday morning and remained over until Monday morning, visiting with his former schoolmates and with relatives. He spent the winter in California as advertising and subscription solicitor for the Rural Spirit, and also visited many of the fine stock farms and wrote them up in an interesting way for the paper. He expects to leave in a few days for eastern Washington and Idaho on a similar mission and will probably continue the work until next Autumn, when he anticipates entering O. A. C. with a view of taking the stockmen's course. Mr. Maris already has a wider acquaintance among the fine stock breeders of the Northwest than any other man of his age in Oregon, without question.

Dr. E. A. Romig set the pace for all Oregon last Friday afternoon when he invited in the people of the town to assist in raising one of the prettiest flag poles that ever grew. This, so far as heard from, being the first pole raising for the campaign of 1908 in the whole Northwest. C. J. Edwards the electric light man, who is accustomed to raising tall poles, had charge of the raising, while W. H. Whitten was the handy man when a rope required splicing, as he has seen service with the life saving crew at Newport. When the pole was cut in the woods fifteen feet was broken at the top in the fall but ninety-seven feet still remains and it is as straight as an arrow. It is painted white and it is a beauty.

The revival services being conducted by Evangelist D. W. Potter increased in attendance last week until the M. E. church would not hold the people, and consequently the meeting place was changed to the Friends church. On Sunday afternoon a meeting was held for men only, when the speaker made an appeal to the large crowd in attendance, which for pulpit eloquence and heart searching has seldom been equaled in Newberg. At night not less than 1000 were in attendance, crowding the stairs leading to the galleries and a great meeting was held. The preaching of Rev. Potter has been effective and convincing and with the members of the different churches working in harmony, a great awakening has resulted and lasting good has been done.

On Tuesday afternoon a voting place was opened at the council rooms with J. L. Hoskins and J. H. Rees sitting as judges and W. W. Nelson as clerk, and republican voters who reside in town were invited to express their choice by ballot between R. B. Linville and J. H. Rees, both of whom having announced themselves as candidates for the nomination for county recorder. The contest was a friendly one, both having agreed to abide by the result of the vote. A light vote was cast, Mr. Linville receiving a good majority. Mr. Rees was badly handicapped by being laid up with a severe case of the mumps and not being able to come to town after the contest was decided upon. Mr. Linville is a G. A. R. veteran and has had sufficient experience in clerical work in county affairs to make him conversant with the duties of the the Recorder's office. He expects to start out at once to make a thorough canvass of the county.

A Newberg Invention.

George Stevens, who recently turned out of the shops at the Newberg Iron Works a traction engine of his own invention, was prevented from giving it a trial at practical farm work last Saturday by an accident. He started to the country with the engine for the purpose of harnessing some plows to it and giving it a trial in field work, when a chain flew off and dropped into the gearing, making a break in the latter that put it out of commission for the time being.

Mr. Stevens is a practical engineer and has had considerable experience in handling big traction engines on the large grain ranches in eastern Oregon and Washington. He says that since the expense of operating one of these big machines is something like $50 per day, an expense account too large to be considered on the smaller farms here in the valley, he conceived an idea some time ago of getting up a smaller and less expensive traction engine for use on the farms here and this engine is a product of his brain.

His engine weighs about 2500 pounds and is propelled by a gasoline motor of sixteen horse power. It has two large wheels in the rear but only one in front. It shows much ingenuity in its mechanism and it works well on the roads where it has been tried under adverse circumstances. The accident Saturday was unfortunate as the progress of the work on the machine has been watched with a great deal of interest and a trial in field work is very much desired, both by Mr. Stevens and the public. Mr. Stevens has since been called to Corvallis temporarily and the repairs on the machine will be delayed on that account.
