WHAT IT REALLY MEANS.

When a candidate is elected as a representative by any political party he should, as soon as he takes the oath of office, cease to be a partisan and seek to represent the people as a mass and always cast his vote independent of any former prejudice, as he then represents the people as a whole and not any particular class. There should be no party measures in law making.—Forest Grove Times.

The above paragraph, and particularly the last sentence, is a fair sample of a lot of very superficial thinking on the subject of good government. It represents a very proper reaction from the old regime of extreme and corrupt partisanship, but at the same time well illustrates how easy it is to go to senseless extremes in the other direction.

Such sentiments as the above are catchy and have become popular with the unthinking masses but they will not stand close scrutiny. Our whole scheme of government is based upon the operation of political parties, which the people hold responsible for definite policies. Herein lies the genius of English speaking peoples for political organization and efficiency. The principle of party responsibility is much more fully developed in Great Britain than with us, with the result that the English methods of legislation are more efficient and less unwieldy than ours. While they are blissfully ignorant of the fact, those who cry against party measures and political organization, would usher in an irresponsible, hullabaloo, every-man-for-himself era of law making, similar to the political chaos which exists in such countries as France and Italy where political organization is notably weak and where every other man has a little party pretty much of his own.

Let's try to be sane in our attempts for political reform. Raise the ideals of citizenship, elect able, conscientious men to represent us, but don't try to do away with party government. That's fundamental in a representative government such as ours.

It is with sincere regret that we learn that J. C. Hayter, editor and owner of the Polk County Observer, has been compelled to give up newspaper work on account of the state of his health. By hard work and close application to business methods Mr. Hayter built up the Observer until it ranks with the best local papers in the state and it is one among the exchanges that comes regularly to our table that we always scan with interest, for each week there is evidence that some brain work has been spent in the material that appears on the editorial page. When warmed up to a subject he is a forceful writer and if occasion seems to demand it he is a hard hitter. In the change Mr. Hayter is making, Dallas and Polk county lose a progressive business man, at least temporarily, and the Oregon newspaper fraternity a valued member. The Observer has been leased to other parties and Mr. Hayter will take a change in climate, hoping for relief from causes that are producing deanness.

Says the Albany Democrat: "Taft is not considered a strong man. He has never done anything to make him strong, except to be a friend of the President. He represents nothing, has never done anything of enough moment to entitle him to this great distinction." All of which merely indicates how meaningless and silly may become the twaddle of a hopelessly partisan sheet. The Democrat man either knows better than the above or else he doesn't read enough to render him competent to pass judgment upon the work of any public man. There can be a difference of opinion when it comes to choosing between policies, parties and men, but to descend to such vicious or careless misrepresentation as is shown above is pretty bad, even for the Democrat. On the other hand, to quote a distinguished journal of its own kind, politically, the New York Times, democratic, says Taft is better equipped to perform the duties of president than any man who has ever been elected to that office, save Washington. It is to smile at the bray of the Democrat.

The Booster is the name of a very live infant which has come to join the ranks of Oregon newspapers, the birth taking place on July 1, at Vale, Malheur county. We would infer from the very first issue that Vale, in this case, doesn't mean farewell—not by any means.

Since that development league meeting at Dayton last week, our sister town has turned on the steam for progress and development. And we don't believe it's just hot air either.

There is one thing—not every town has factories to burn.
