

SIX YEAR OLD TREES IN THE THOMAS PRINCE WALNUT ORCHARD AT DUNDEE.

C. E. Hoskins Deceased.

After an illness of several weeks Cyrus E. Hoskins died at his home at Springbrook on Tuesday evening at the age of 66 years leaving a widow and two brothers, A. M., now living at Lents, and J. L. Hoskins of Newberg.

The deceased came to Oregon from Indiana in 1877 and bought the land at Springbrook which he owned at the time of his death. As soon as land could be cleared he began to set fruit trees and at once became an enthusiast in horticulture.

He was one of the first in the valley to engage in prune growing for commercial purposes and he made a good deal of money in the business from a small orchard in the early days when prices were high. Later on he engaged in growing cherries and propagated several new varieties among which is the Hoskins.

On account of the illness of the only child, a daughter, who died a few years ago, the parents spent considerable time in travel, making an extended trip to the Hawaiian Islands and to different points south. Some years ago they bought a farm near Gold Hill, Jackson county, where they lived until last year when they sold the farm and returned to Springbrook.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home on Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Those desiring to see the remains may call between the hours of ten and one o'clock.

New Company Organized.

Since the destruction of the Newberg Sash & Door Factory plant a short time ago, a good deal of uneasiness has been felt lest the plant would not be rebuilt as the loss fell quite heavily on the new firm that had only been in possession of it a few days, but steps have been taken to rebuild on a much better basis and the public will rejoice to know that work will begin on clearing up the unsightly pile of rubbish in a very few days.

The first of the week articles of incorporation were filed for the Architectural, Manufacturing & Construction Co., the incorporators being Thomas Herd, N. C. Christenson, S. E. Watkins, J. Carl Nelson and H. O. Hanson, with the capital stock placed at $10,000.

In addition to the manufacture of sash and doors the new company expects to make counters, show cases, columns, mouldings and ornaments as well as to make concrete blocks for building. Plans will be furnished and general contracting and building will be engaged in.

Work will be begun at an early day on a two story building 40x80 feet which will be constructed of concrete blocks, and when the machinery is installed Newberg will have reason to be proud of the new plant.

The company is made up entirely of Newberg people, all of whom are experienced business men, and they deserve the hearty support of the public, which they will no doubt receive.

Keeping Out of Debt.

Indebtedness is a financial cancer, which, if allowed to develop, will involve our entire business relations, and in the end eat up our substance and ruin our characters.

First—And this applies especially to young men, the tendency to spend money too freely for the gratification of imaginary wants, things which they believe they must have, but without which they would be better off.

Second—The tendency towards living just a little more expensively than present circumstances will permit, foolishly believing in good fortunes of the future.

Third—And we might say the most universal cause of indebtedness and national hard times is individual extravagance. In times of prosperity people rush blindly along, living each day the full extent of their income, forgetting that prosperity and adversity follow each other in alternate waves, and that obligations contracted in prosperous times come due in dull times, and are also augmented by the relative condition of the times.

Too many are using today what they expect to earn tomorrow. Credit prevents us from realizing the true value of money, and having the full control over our own affairs. We all have more or less love for the real dollars, and while we may see many things we would like very much, the rapidly lessening amount of cash on hand warns us to stop long before the page of a book account will be filled.

Of course there are some who are unfortunate and who have been brought into reduced circumstances by sickness or other outside influences over which they have no control, but in many instances it is their own fault that they are not better equipped, for to the most of us comes a chance sometime to prepare something for a rainy day.

Let every one live within his or her means, for if we do not manage to live honestly within our own means, we must live dishonestly upon the means of some one else. There was once a man who got rich because of the things he did not buy. Wear the old coat a little longer if necessary. You will feel more respectable in a shiny coat that is paid for, than dodging your tailor in a new $50 suit. Never purchase anything which you cannot pay for on the spot if necessary. You will be able to buy a home only with the dollars you do not spend. Longfellow says, "Trust no future, however pleasant." Deferred payments always come due. A debt is a good thing to pluck in the bud. In prosperity, prepare for adversity.

About the Face Handle.

The nose is the high sign for a man's nationality, a home for freckles and a thermometer for cold weather. It is the Jew's misfortune and the politician's headlight.

I don't nose I know a great deal about the nose anyway.

I have what has been frequently called an outgoing nose. It looks something like a potato and some like a peeled onion. I got the nose from my parents and they got it from their parents. And so on back into the more or less remote past. This nose of mine, I suppose, has been dodging around from generation to generation until it finally landed where it is at last contented.

But you can't blame me for my nose. I didn't choose it. If I had been choosing I would have taken a Roman nose, but I didn't have any choice. It is all I can do to pick my teeth.

I hope my nose stays where it is now instead of trying to butt into posterity. I can't say that it is such a howling success, but at the same time I would hate to lose it, now that I have become so well acquainted with it and have gotten used to its ways. It has become a little red and shiny in spots and has been mistaken a time or two for an arc light or a bicycle lamp. I remember once being warned by a policeman for not revealing my number while walking home one night after I had helped some politicians discuss the tariff and the evils of rum. The policeman thought I was an automobile in disguise.

A girl with three freckles on a slightly tilted nose is dangerous to the pocketbook. An elephant has more nose than anything, but it doesn't begin to spend money for ice cream soda like a girl with a pug nose.

I knew a man at Granger, Wyoming, who had no nose. His face looked very lonesome, indeed. —Tanglefoot Magazine.

Portland Notes.

Anticipation fell short of the actual attendance and success of the Oregon Good Roads Conference held at the Portland Commercial Club on the 12th. From every corner of the state came men having the vital interests of Oregon at heart. It was decided to immediately undertake the raising of $10,000 for an intensely active campaign. Judge Lionel R. Webster, of Multnomah County, and Judge John H. Scott, of Marion county will lead in this work, devoting their entire time to it.

Another convention of national scope for Oregon next year is the welcome news that comes back from Des Moines, Iowa, where the American Association of Mutual Insurance Companies has been assembled. This means between 500 and 600 delegates, the majority of whom have never visited the Coast, since the Association has never held a Western meeting.

Four hundred thousand feet of lumber were bought by Swift & Co. this week for use on their townsite near the plant now being built. Twenty-five dwellings will be started immediately, some quite pretentious for the officers of the company. Hundreds of smaller homes will go up as rapidly as practicable.

Poultry is to have its due recognition at the livestock show in September. Over $500 in prizes is offered and the interest may be judged from the fact that already over one thousand entries are booked. Poultry means almost $5,000,000 to Oregon annually.

Eagle Valley, in Baker County, is planning a "Harvest Home Picnic" for the 3rd and 4th of September. The whole county will join in the holiday—the very name of the event guarantees enjoyment.

Secretary W. L. Crissey, of the Oregon State Dairy Association, has been advised that Hon. Ed. H. Webster, Chief of Dairy Division, U. S. Department of Agriculture, is contemplating a trip to the Pacific Northwest to participate in the convention of the Oregon Association December 10th and 11th.
