Hoard's Dairyman.

Among agricultural journals there is one that every farmer keeping cows should not neglect to subscribe for. We refer to Hoard's Dairyman. It is a journal that is broad in its scope, being unlike any other agricultural journal in the thorough and practical manner in which it deals with all farm problems that concern the farmer keeping cows.
This journal has a lively interest and practical knowledge of all things about the farm which plainly shows that its editors are daily in the farm atmosphere and confronted with the same questions to solve in the practical handling of a farm that are before every farmer handling cows.
From reading the paper we learn that it has its own dairy farm of 200 acres, that it is stocked with a herd of good dairy cows, and the whole management of this farm is directly under the editorial supervision. This keeps the editors in touch with farm conditions so that they know the subjects that the farmer wants discussed and they know what they are talking about when they discuss them. In dozens of ways Hoard's Dairyman will appeal to one as coming closer to farm life and farm business than any other journal we have seen. It gets right up close to you and talks good hard farm sense, about the soils and crops and how best to handle them; talks about the cows and their breeding, and gives special attention to feeds and feeding. It does not have a prejudice for some one breed, but talks for the dairy cow wherever she is found; talks about the barn and its arrangement, and in fact gives a fund of good sound practical information on questions of interest to the farmer who keeps cows, few or many. Hoard's Dairyman tells you the things you want to know in a way that will interest you. We notice it has no fashion plates, puzzles or cheap stories, it is all business.
It is published at Fort Atkinson, Wis., and has stood as the leading dairy authority of the country for many years.
