No Longer Political Carryalls.

Neither what are termed the reactionaries on the one hand nor the Bourne contingent on the other will be able to manipulate the editors in the cow counties of the state in future elections. The Portland Telegram has a very "interesting story" on the forthcoming political outlook in Oregon. It says:

"Each newspaper in the state will be notified that it advocates the re-election of Senator Jonathan Bourne, or advocates any of the principles which he advocates, such as the direct primary, statement No. 1, the initiative and referendum, that paper will be accused of having been purchased by Bourne."

"The scheme has been thought out by the reactionary republicans, and is to be put into effect at the earliest convenience. It is only one of the cards which the machine politicians are preparing to play in the game to bump off the direct legislation of Oregon and return to the good old machine conditions. Of course, the paper friendly to Mr. Bourne can strike back by saying that the papers advocating any aspirant for the senate other than Bourne have "sold out" and are being paid out of a corruption fund now being accumulated in Portland."

We believe the press of Oregon is not of purchasable quantity along political or any other lines; furthermore, we put no credence in the above hot air story from the Portland paper. While it is a foregone conclusion that Bourne will slice off a chunk of his millions and scatter it broadcast with the expectation of securing re-election, while those opposed to him will use every possible effort to name some other man for the place, the country press, whose editors are not as green as they look, will not be swayed either way to any appreciable extent by overtures and "long green" offerings from either side.

Under our political reform methods in this state we see no material difference along the line of corruption funds in elections from that which prevailed under what was termed the "machine regime." The longest financial pole, coupled with the shrewdest manipulation knocks the persimmon anyway, without regard to fitness or qualification of the candidate.

Bourne's election was due, not so much to press support as to his personal campaign in which he flooded the state with literature calculated to hold the voters in line for him and having succeeded so well in his former campaign by this method he will, no doubt, employ the same tactics regardless of cost.

Neither Bourne nor his opponents will be able to alarm the country press by charges of being bought, for they are less liable to be purchasable than the men of either side who make the charges. The vast majority of the Oregon papers will support men for state and national offices whom they believe will best serve the public without regard to what either side would have them do or seek, by intimidation, to compel them to do.

Oregon politicians have yet to learn that the press of the state is anything else but a convenient vehicle upon which to carry their political aspirations to places of preferment and power, whether they be of the Bourne or the opposite contingent.

The Oregon press has ceased to be the beast of burden for scheming politicians. Its standard has been raised to the service of nobler purpose.—Eugene Register.

It has been suggested that every girl can learn twelve things before she is twelve. Not every one can learn to play or paint or sing well enough to give pleasure to her friends, but there are accomplishments that are within the reach of all. Shut the door and do it softly. Keep your own room in tasteful order. Have an hour for rising and rise at that time. Learn to make bread as well as cake. Never let a button stay off twenty-four hours. Always know where your things are. Never let a day pass without doing something to make somebody comfortable. Never come to breakfast without a collar. Never go about with your shoes unlaced. Speak clearly enough for everybody to understand. Always be kind. Never fuss or fret.

Chehalms Center.

Jack St Germain returned from his hunting trip out on his claim, Monday.

Mr. Kitlen, Mrs. Green's brother, left Thursday after making them a visit.

Miss Bertha Cox was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Kirk Sunday.

Charley Shires came home over Sunday from the Springbrook dryer but returned as there is work there yet in caring for the dried prunes.

Word comes from Willow Springs, Missouri that a son was recently born to Mr. and Mrs. J. Ellyson. The mother was Miss Harriet Atkinson.

Wednesday of last week the W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. K. L. Tangen. Eleven members were present and four visitors, Mrs. Tompson, Milestone, Paskshawen, Canada and Mrs. Powers and little son of La Moure, North Dakota. They were guests of Mrs. Tangen and are out to see the Seattle Fair.

Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Hendricks were visitors also. Prayer services followed, after reading the sixty-ninth Psalm. There was not much of a business meeting so the meeting adjourned and a very pleasant social time was spent while the hostess passed chocolate, coffee and cake to the ladies. Meeting adjourned to meet again October 10, with Mrs. J. C. Wills. The County President Miss Edith Minchin is expected to be present at the next meeting.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Suggestive Quotations on the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Lincoln for the International Newspaper Bible Study Club.

OCTOBER 31st, 1909.

Paul a Prisoner—The Voyage. Acts 27:1-26.

Golden Text.—Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass. Ps. 37:5.

Verses 1-3—The writer of this narrative appears to be a companion of Paul on this journey—who was he?

Who were the others that sailed with Paul?

What results are likely to follow, when a man of God is compelled to be in the company of criminals?

Who was this man Julius, and what probably induced him to treat the prisoner Paul with such leniency?

Is there any position in life, however undesirable, in which God does not give his children special comfort, even when in prison, and can you give some examples of this?

Julius gave Paul his freedom to visit his friends when the ship touched at Sidon; would it have been honorable of Paul to have made his escape and not to have returned to the ship, seeing he was an innocent man on parole?

Can you tell, or point out on the map, where Sidon, Cyprus, Pamphylia, Myra and the other places here mentioned are situated?

When the winds are against us, or we are becalmed on the voyage of life, and making but little headway, is it a hindrance or a help to the soul poised on God?

Did Paul give the advice for them not to proceed, but to winter at the "fair havens," from his human judgment or from God's direction?

Why may, or may not, a true Christian always depend that the judgments he forms in the great crises of life as well as in ordinary affairs, are really inspired of God and can therefore be depended upon? (See John 14:26, et seq.)

Verses 12-20—When we are faced with a great problem as to the way to take, or the thing to do, is there always in the mind of God the thing we ought to do, and is there a possibility for us to find out with certainty what it is?

Why is it that God sometimes leads us contrary to what the circumstances would suggest?

When we are irresistably driven by a

"euroclydon," and appear at the mercy of the wind and sea, is there reason to believe that we are just as safe, and as much in God's keeping, as when "the south wind blows softly?"

When in stress and strain, in wind and storm, and we appear to be driving into disaster and death, will the consciousness that God is with us, quicken or deaden our activities to save ourselves?

Verses 21-26.—Is there ever any use in "crying over spilt milk?"

What reason is there to believe from this narrative, that when we fall to rise, and it is too late to adopt God's best plan, he will still graciously provide a good one which we may adopt?

What did these people miss, and what did they suffer, for having failed to use God's first best plan for their safety?

Pacific College Notes.

Rev. A. J. Weaver attended chapel last Friday morning and spoke very helpfully to the students.

It has been decided to give the students a part in the administration of the college, and seven representatives have accordingly been appointed by the students to meet with the faculty.

Harvey Wright was elected by the Athletic Association as a delegate to the meeting of the State Basket Ball League, which was held in Portland last Saturday for the purpose of organizing a league for the season.

On Tuesday evening of last week the Literary Society met to adopt a constitution for the new society and to elect officers, which resulted in the election of the following: Pres. Roy Fitch; Vice-Pres. Claude Newlin; Sec. Katherine Bryan; Treas. Gladys Hannon; marshal Claude Lewis. The prospects for the society are very bright and we hope to make this a successful year.

PUTTING UP MEAT FOR WINTER.

Above is a picture of A. C. Martin on the left and Harlan Smith on the right, with eight deer hung up behind them. While crossing in a boat from Douglas, Alaska, to Kake they saw a band of deer on the shore and each of them shot four, making eight in all. They put them in the boat and took them to the mission at Kake where they were put up for winter's use.
