

U. S. National Bank

Capital and Surplus

Capital and Surplus
The U. S. National Bank has a capital and surplus of $1,000,000.00. It is a member of the Federal Reserve System and is authorized to do a full banking business. It has branches in New York, Chicago, and other cities. It is a safe and sound institution and is a member of the Federal Reserve System.

VOYAGERS

For information, please write to the U. S. National Bank, New York, N. Y.

U. S. National Bank
New York, N. Y.
Capital and Surplus
$1,000,000.00
Member of the Federal Reserve System
Authorized to do a full banking business
Branches in New York, Chicago, and other cities
A safe and sound institution
Member of the Federal Reserve System

The U. S. National Bank is a member of the Federal Reserve System and is authorized to do a full banking business. It has branches in New York, Chicago, and other cities. It is a safe and sound institution and is a member of the Federal Reserve System. The bank's capital and surplus are $1,000,000.00. It is a member of the Federal Reserve System and is authorized to do a full banking business. It has branches in New York, Chicago, and other cities. It is a safe and sound institution and is a member of the Federal Reserve System.