

REAL BRAVERY IN WOMEN.

Remarkable Courage Shown by Famous Heroines of History.

No one can doubt that moral courage is superior to physical. Men exceed in the latter, women in the former, and it is not desirable that this should be altered, even were it possible. Yet it would add to the dignity of both if men were stronger morally and women physically.

A modern historian says: "Moral and rational faculties may alike be dormant, and they will certainly be so if men are wholly immersed in the gratification of their senses. Man is like a plant, which requires a favorable soil for the full expansion of its natural or innate powers." If men had been shut out, as women have, from the exercise of their physical faculties, is it certain they would have developed excess of physical powers?

Notwithstanding her social disadvantages in this respect woman has made her mark in the annals of bravery. History affords numerous examples of great heroines, many of them, too, at a time when the general position of women was that of slaves, but we can only note a few.

Laena of Attica bore the severest torture without a word; Telesilla, the poetess, made the Argolic women fearless of death and discomfited the Spartans; Theodora saved the eastern empire; Artemisia drank the ashes of her consort; Camilla, queen of the Volscians, was slain fighting at the head of her troops; Boadicea encountered the veterans of Rome; the Maid of Orleans drove the English from France; Arria stabbed herself to encourage her husband to die. "See, it does not hurt, dear Paetus," she said.

The tales of martyrdom are fertile of heroic women. Young maidens met the most horrible deaths with placid contempt, if not with vehement joy. No fiendish tortures that devils could devise were able to shake the fortitude of numberless brave women. Whether under Nero or the bishops, under the inquisition or the French revolutionaries, it was noted with surprise and admiration that the women died more bravely than the men.—Mexican Herald.

The Child and the Word.

"Mamma, please give me the vigor. I want to drive a nail," little Charlie said as he came rushing into the kitchen from his playroom a morning or two ago.

"What is a vigor?" his mother asked.

"You know, mamma, it was you that read it to me out of the book."

"But I don't remember reading about it, and I don't think we have one if I did. What did the book say about it?"

"Yes, you remember it. It said the boys returned from their hunting trip very hungry and were glad to find the meat done and the cook mashing the potatoes with vigor."

And then the mother found out what the lad wanted. It was the wooden pestle with which she mashed potatoes.—Milwaukee Free Press.

The Foam on Soda Water.

Foam is a natural product, being caused by the escape of air or gas from a viscous liquid. In the case of soda water it is the escape of the carbonic acid gas from the sweetened beverage that causes the attractive sparkling appearance, but the sweetened water alone would give rise to but a small quantity of foam, as the gas would too easily escape. In order to prevent this some mucilaginous substance is usually added to the sirup, which renders the mass more viscous, so preventing the gas from escaping and producing the attractive head of foam so familiar to all.

The Stylish Fisherman.

One of the guests at a fashionable summer resort in West Virginia got himself up in his best "fishing" togs and started out to try his luck along a certain mountain stream.

Meeting a native, he asked: "Here, my good man. Kindly tell me whether it would be worth my while to try fishing in this vicinity."

The native regarded him scornfully. "The fishin' ain't good," he finally said, "but I ain't informed as to how you value your time."—Lippincott's.

How Sea Birds Quench Their Thirst.

The means by which sea birds quench their thirst when far out at sea is described by an old skipper, who tells how he has seen birds at sea, far from any land that could furnish them water, hovering ground and under a storm cloud, clattering like ducks on a hot day at a pond and drinking in the drops of rain as they fell. They will smell a rain squall a hundred miles distant or even farther off and scud for it with almost inconceivable swiftness.

Newberg, Oregon.

OFFICE—Second Floor Bank of Newberg Building.

"When can you spare the time for our marriage, Marion?" the betrothed man asked.

The woman consulted her engagement book. "Three o'clock next Friday afternoon," she replied.

"Oh, that will be out of the question!" he cried protestingly. "There's a special meeting of the Glitter Gold company that I must attend at that time."

"Well, it's the only time I have," she told him, with an air of easy resignation. "Every other hour for the next two years is filled up."

The man jerked his shoulders irritably. "I guess we'll have to call our little matter off, then," he said. "It seems to be inevitable," she agreed indifferently.

And so they parted.—Chicago News.

Careful Upbringing.

While having dinner at a friend's home one evening little George refused, with self conscious dignity, several unwholesome dishes which William, his tiny host, devoured with relish.

Finally, when William began to eat a huge slice of fruit cake, George eyed him wistfully for a long time. Then, leaning his head on his hand, with a sigh, he said:

"Oh, dear, I wish my stomach wasn't being brunged up c'rectly!"—Woman's Home Companion.

A Snake in His Hair.

The hair of the Indian yogi or religious mendicant owing to long years of neglect becomes matted together in a fashion more easy to imagine than to describe and certainly not be brushed out. It is of very great length and when allowed to hang down trails on the ground. One night one of these yogis was sleeping under a tree when a snake wormed its way into his tangled coiffure, and he had quite a difficult task to get rid of it in the morning. —World Wide Magazine.
