E. C. BAIRD, GENERAL MERCHANDISE

LICKING THE EDITOR.

The Way the Job Started and Style in Which It Ended.

On the second day of my stay in the town I hunted up the printing office to pay my respects to the editor of the only weekly in the village. I found him to be a small, stoop shouldered man, whose face hadn't a grain of "sand" in it. As I knew the situation to be rather rough, I wondered to myself how he managed when he had a caller who demanded attention. He hadn't a weapon of any sort lying around, nor had he provided a back door through which he might fly if there was any prospect of a fuss. We were talking in a general way when I heard a yell at the foot of the stairs and the noise of heavy feet ascending. The editor heard it, too, and he knocked on a door dividing his sanctum into two rooms and said:

"Hannah, get ready for business!"

Next moment a man entered with a copy of the paper in his hand and yelled out:

"Where in Texas is the bloody hyena who runs this infernal dish rag?"

"My friend, did you come to subscribe for the Banner?" softly inquired the editor.

"Subscribe nothing! I came here to give somebody an all fired licking for lying about me."

"Yes, I see. Don't want any job-work?"

"Job blazes! I tell you I'm going to pulverize the editor of this paper for lying about me! Whar is he?"

"Won't an apology in the next issue do?"

"Not much! No man can insult me and then crawl out of it! Trot out the editor and let me lam him!"

"Hannah!" called the editor. "Hannah, you'll have to step out! Sorry to interrupt you, but this gentleman is very aggressive."

The door of the next room opened and a woman six feet high and as broad shouldered as a man came out. She had on eyeglasses, but she removed them, spat on her hands and sailed for the caller without a word. She banged him against the wall, banged him against the stove, seized and whirled him about, and as he faced the stairs she gave him a kick which lifted his heels off the floor and jumped him down three steps. He went clattering down without a word, and when he had disappeared she nodded to me and re-entered her room.

"My sister and also the editor of the religious department!" explained the editor in his soft and gentle way, and the incident was not again referred to during my call.—Baltimore American.

Manx Laws.

Every woman, widow or spinster in the Isle of Man, whether she be owner, occupier or lodger, enjoys the parliamentary franchise. Every widow enjoys half of her husband's personal estate and has a life interest in his real estate, and she cannot be deprived of this by will. The sale of cigarettes and intoxicants to children was forbidden in the Isle of Man for years before such a prohibition was enforced in England. We have legislated mildly against money lenders. The highest interest that can be charged for a loan in the island is 6 per cent, and that has been the law for over 200 years.—London Chronicle.

He Told Him.

A browbeating professor had exasperated his class. He was catechizing the students, and one of them decided to be revenged. The question put to him was:

"Can you tell me anything at all about prussic acid?"

The "at all" was nasty and added to the student's ire, who replied shortly:

"A deadly poison. One drop on the end of your tongue would kill a dog."—London Tit-Bits.

Spoke Too Soon.

"You see," said the little man with the dyed beard as he munched an apple purchased from the train boy, "I am a vegetarian."

"You mean you try to be one," answered the stranger on the seat beside him pleasantly.

"Sir, what do you mean by that?"

"Simply that there was a worm in that apple, and you got it."—Metropolitan Magazine.

HOMESICKNESS.

A Real Disease That May Affect Every Organ In the Body.

If you doubt that homesickness is a real disease, to which the most sturdy and self sufficient mortal may be subject physically, it is evident you have not traveled widely.

Homesickness to the grown man seems like a disease for susceptible children, a mental trouble which if experienced must not be revealed for fear of ridicule. It seems like an ailment for the timid and shrinking. It is no such thing.

There was never an army recruited that did not suffer to a man with a more or less intense attack of the disease, though few soldiers will admit it, and physicians in the field have frequently found men mere physical wrecks, with no apparent organic trouble, who were simple victims of what is scientifically known as nostalgia.

There is a scientific explanation for it as well as a sentimental, and in scores of cases the least sentimental people have suffered vitally from a disease which no one could diagnose and which in fact was no more than common homesickness, such as children suffer when away from the parental abode.

There is no organ in the body which may not be affected as a direct result of nostalgia. Indigestion is the commonest symptom of all. Blood disturbances give place to apoplexy, and sudden death often ensues. The brain is at a tension and is swelled with blood. Sometimes it takes the form of a raving madness.

Soldiers who have acquired mysterious, incurable diseases in the service which seem to be killing them by inches frequently recover at once when taken into their home country or into an environment that is similar.

The worst feature is that the ailment feeds on itself. The sufferer finds nothing more painful and yet nothing sweeter than nursing his own heart pangs, recalling the scenes of his fondest associations and reveling in the tears and agonies of mind that come from such reflection.

The disease is a physical one in its manifestations, but there is only one physical cure—return to the spot of attachment.—Philadelphia North American.

Graves In China.

There are various kinds of graves in China. The graves are dug generally from twelve feet to thirteen feet below the ground, while, according to an old custom, the mounds of the graves of emperors were thirty feet in height, those of territorial lords fifteen feet and those of barons without territories and of lord stewards eight feet, while for inferior officials and common people mounds only four feet in height were erected. Pines were planted on the tombs of emperors, a species of oak on those of territorial lords and a species of willow on those of inferior officials. Although there are no territorial lords and lord stewards now in China, men of high rank still have their tombs constructed in accordance with this old custom.

"My Old Friend Tom Moore." On one occasion Disraeli turned his early acquaintance with Tom Moore to profitable account. For some years one of the members for Dublin was a Dr. Lyons, who was very proud of his personal resemblance to Ireland's poet. Once on the eve of a critical division, when every vote was wanted, Disraeli saw Dr. Lyons approaching and immediately gave a look of startled astonishment. "You gave me quite a shock. You looked so marvelously like my old friend Tom Moore." The dodge succeeded. The little Dublin doctor, flattered and delighted, voted in the same lobby with Disraeli.

Olive Oil.

The human body has been compared to a lamp, the life being the flame. If the lamp, or body, is kept supplied with oil the flame will burn steadily much longer than when not. The patriarchs lived much longer than men live today, and olive oil was without exception one of their "blessings," which they daily used. Whether the comparison is merely fanciful or not it is hard to say, but there seems to be an element of truth in it.—Exchange.

Easy Enough.

The colored preacher was a higher critic and denied all miracles.

"But, Caleb, how about the Hebrews crossing the Red sea?"

"I'll explain dat. Dey crossed over on solid ice, and next day it was very warm, and de 'Gyptians just broke through de rotten ice."

"But, Caleb, ice does not form south of the equator."

"Dat objection is nuffin. In dem days there was no equator."
