DIDN'T LIKE THE JOB

The editor of the Amity Standard left the paper in the hands of a temporary editor who sets up this wail:

"In order to clear the skirts of the regular editor of this paper from any criticism that may be made as to this issue of this paper, we would state that Mr. DePew was suddenly called away on matters of importance, and asked us if we would help out in the local and editorial department for a few days. It was after dark when he was talking to us and we are under the impression that he mistook us for some one else; but as we thought it would be fun to run a news paper we did not reveal our identity, but quietly consented to take the burden upon our shoulders. But "Nay, Nay, Pauline" never again. Oh! what a headache, trying to find some news where there is no news, trying to think of something for editorials, trying not to write anything that will make anyone mad—the strain is something awful. We have seen notices in this paper where admiring subscribers have brought in luscious boxes of berries, beautiful bouquets of flowers, prize cakes and cookies etc., we have fondly hoped that as we sat behind the desk in the Sanctum Sanatorium that we might fall heir to some of these good things, but we have waited in vain. The only person to call on us was an old guy with whiskers like a billy goat, who wanted to know if we had any sample copies to give away. We have turned our hand to all manner of avocations in our brief career, have punched cattle on the ranges of the middle west, been a book agent, tried politics, held down a homestead against claim jumpers, wrote a little poetry and a number of other things—but this news paper work takes the bun. We are tired of it, the smell of the ink, the holler for copy, the sight of the devil and the whole works. Please, Mr. editor come home."

Infantile Paralysis Germ Found Remedy Next.

The announcement by Dr. Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute, that they have at last discovered the germ, or rather its presence—for the strongest microscope fails to reveal it—which is responsible for infantile paralysis, will bring widespread hope and joy.

Starting in Sweden and Norway 25 years ago, this insidious and easily infectious disease has traveled to many countries. Neither preventative nor remedy has thus far been found; and while not always fatal, the after-effects of crippled muscles or weakened mind have frequently made recovery more to be regretted than death.

The action of the germ is to attack the marrow of the spine and brain. Infection is imparted through nasal discharges which often last for several weeks, and after recovery is well advanced.

The infection may be carried by those in good health, who, not taking the disease themselves, may carry it to others. Now that the cause is definitely located, we are assured that it will be less difficult to find the remedy.—H. H. Windsor in the July Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Stories of Success

JAMES J. HILL

Empire builder, and unquestionably one of the foremost business men of the country, started life upon a farm, where he early learned that success was necessary to success. When he was 14, his father died, and he was thrown upon his own resources. In three years his savings enabled him to satisfy his desire and ambition for broader fields, and he started out seeking for better opportunities. In 1855 he landed in St. Paul. Having been born upon a farm, he was quick to see the great natural resources of this undeveloped country; he saw, too, that if these resources were ever to be developed that some means of transportation must be provided. With his savings he engaged in the fuel and transportation business in a small way.

The young man's chance was never better than in this day of rapid industrial growth. To be ready when the chance comes is the important thing. A dollar saved this week may be the starting point of your success. Will you make the start? The officers of this bank will be glad to help you.

CELLAR POTATOES.

Grown on a Table in the Dark in a Few Inches of Soil.

If you have at your disposal a small and quite dark cellar and an old kitchen table, how would you like to grow potatoes, excellent ones that are declared to be superior in flavor to the ordinary farm grown variety? This can be done very easily by following a method which is attracting considerable attention in France.

First of all you need the dark cellar. The absence of light is essential, for the filtration of even a few rays of light would cause the potatoes to waste their energies in putting forth sprouts in all directions instead of the buds of little potatoes. Next you need a table, over which you place a layer two or three inches thick of fine, dry and carefully sifted earth. Then you select some good two-year-old potatoes—that is to say, those of last year's gathering. Any potatoes in a good state of preservation will do, but it is best to select large tubers without defects, for the slightest trace of fungus spreads rapidly and may spoil the whole crop. Now take a slightly moistened sponge and pass it over each potato to work off the cryptogamic germs that are so injurious to vegetable tissues. If some of the potatoes have already begun to sprout the sprouts must be removed carefully without wounding the tuber.

After you have done all this take the potatoes one by one and half bury them in the soil, planting them in rows spaced about four inches apart.

There is no back breaking toil with the hoe in the broiling sun and no fighting against potato bugs. The tubers should be inspected by candlelight occasionally to see that everything is progressing satisfactorily. In two or three weeks after planting it will be found that each potato is covered with tiny white points which several days later change into little potatoes that grow rapidly.

When the little potatoes are reasonably large they may be carefully removed, leaving in place the old potatoes, which continue to bear. Several weeks later another crop may be gathered and even a third. The budding continues until the parent tuber is completely exhausted and nothing remains of it but the skin.

In case sprouts push forth on the potatoes they must be cut off with scissors. Potatoes grown in this way have one very excellent quality. They have so thin a skin that it may be simply washed off. No scraping or paring is necessary. They also have an excellent flavor and are firmer than ordinary farm grown varieties, with less tendency to soften.—New York World.

An Interpreter Needed.

The following story from Harper's Magazine furnishes a rare instance of that devotion to a foreign language which has caused one to forget for the moment that he speaks his own tongue:

An Englishman, who spent his time in adapting plays from the French for the British stage, was dining once in an English hotel, when, after he had eaten, he was seized with a desire to smoke. He called the waiter and said to him: "Peut-on fumer ici?"

The man looked blank. "I don't understand a word of French, sir," he said.

The adapter was in despair. "Then for pity's sake send me some one who does!" he exclaimed.

Where the Fire Was.

Sleeping during the sermon is a poor compliment to the preacher, but it is not often that the man in the pulpit turns the occasion to such effective use as did John Wesley. The apostle of Methodism was preaching, while many of his hearers slept. Suddenly he startled them by a loud cry of "Fire! Fire!" There was a momentary panic among the congregation, and a man cried out, "Where, sir? Where?" "In hell," the preacher replied, "for those who sleep under the preaching of the word."—London Chronicle.

Power of Praise.

There is one thing which no man, however generously disposed, can give, but which every one, however poor, is bound to pay. This is praise. He cannot give it because it is not his own, since what is dependent for its very existence on something in another can never become to him a possession, nor can he justly withhold it when the presence of merit claims it as a consequence.—Washington Allston.

The Old, Old Story.

"Daughter, has the duke told you the old, old story as yet?" "Yes. He says he owes about 200,000 blunks."—Pittsburg Post.

The friends of two American celebrities, one a stutterer and the other somewhat deaf, succeeded after much maneuvering in getting them to meet, and the event aroused considerable unholy glee.

Some time thereafter the stutterer was asked how the interview passed off.

"Oh, w-we g-g-got along f-f-fine-ly," he stammered. "I c-c-couldn't t-t-t-talk, and s-s-she c-c-couldn't h-h-hear me."—Lippincott's.

Just as Advertised.

Irate Visitor—I call this a downright fraud! You advertise on your bills, "The Most Remarkable Dwarf in the World," and he turns out to be five feet five inches high.

Bland Showman—Exactly so, sir. That's just what's so remarkable about him. He's the tallest dwarf on record.

Executor's Notice of Final Settlement.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned executor of the last will and testament of Moses Hollingsworth, deceased, has filed his final account as executor of said last will and testament and estate of said decedent, in the County Court of Yamhill County, Oregon, and that said court has appointed Monday, July 17, 1911, at 11 o'clock A. ### That Deering Binder in harvest time—all the time. The successful farmer uses it and recommends it to his neighbors because he's used other makes and the DEERING beats them all. There's no doubt about the quality and the work it can do, and there's no doubt about the price being right. The question is, do you need a binder? If you do the answer is, yes, a DEERING. You can't afford to farm without it. Sold and fully warranted by
