Ancestral Worship in Korea.

"A sight on this day's journey which impressed us was the groups of people here and there by the graves of relatives going through forms of ancestral worship," reports a traveler in Korea. "This is looked upon as being more an evidence of filial piety than of spirit worship. In front of the grave a mat is laid, and upon the little Korean table is spread a variety of food of which the ancestral spirit may partake. Then the friends, with hands clasped, bow again and again their faces to the ground. How long the ceremony is continued we could not tell, as we were passing; but, looking back until we had turned and they were lost to view, there appeared no sign of its ceasing."

Following a Precedent.

Writes a friend from Cannes: "I heard a story the other night at a dinner given here which is, I believe, a true one, and as it might amuse your readers I pass it on. A little boy wished to give a Bible to his mother on her birthday, and before writing her name on the flyleaf he took down a book from her shelf to see the proper way of setting about the matter. Literally copying the first inscription that he found, he wrote, 'With the kind regards of the author.'—London Gentlewoman.

Old Time Beer Test.

In the sixteenth century testers were appointed in England whose duty it was "to test and assize the beer to see if it be fit for a man's body." One of the methods of testing ale was in spilling some of it on a wooden seat when the tester, attired in leathern breeches, sat down thereon. If he adhered to his seat the beer was adulterated with saccharine substances; if he could rise without inconvenience it was not adulterated.—London Mail.

PNEUMONIA.

Its Best Friend is a Bad Cold That Has Been Neglected.

Pneumonia is not dreaded merely for its power to seize and kill quickly, but also for its apparent power to select the most unlikely victims. Most persons have lived through the shock of hearing that some friend had suddenly died of pneumonia—a friend from whom they had parted but a few days or even hours before, leaving him at what seemed the highest notch of physical well being and perhaps protesting that he did not know what illness meant.

This disease is most dangerous to the apparently strong, robust people of heavy weight and hearty appetite, although it may attack any one, for its germs are omnipresent. The strong and full blooded individual who is at the same time something overweight is especially in danger of pneumonia and should take particular care to avoid it. If his diet is too heavy—and that may safely be assumed—it should be ruthlessly cut down, especially as to meat and the elimination of alcohol.

The weighing scale is a good friend to such a person and should be consulted regularly. The scale does not argue about that extra pound or two—it proves it—and after a weight in accordance with age and height has been determined it can be maintained in most cases by the exercise of a little self control.

There are hosts of people who indolently permit themselves to get heavy and even fat in the winter months. They are the people who should be constantly reminded, "The pneumonia germ 'll git yer if yer don't watch out!"

The condition of the man must be recognized as more important than the presence of the germ, as proved by the fact that there is less mortality among the thin and apparently delicate than among the stout and full blooded.

Some of the phrases used by the laity on this subject have, after all, more sense than nonsense in them. It is said that some one is "threatened with pneumonia" or that a "bad cold ran into pneumonia," and in a sense it is true, for every one is "threatened" with pneumonia; that is to say, the germ is always present and ready and willing to begin its work if one only gives it a chance.

The most successful way to give it a chance is to neglect a bad cold and thus break down the natural defenses of the system: If every bad cold were met with starvation, physic and fresh air it would depart in disgust, and the lurking pneumonia with it, for the large burglar cannot get in through a hole which has refused to admit the smaller one.—Youth's Companion.

Wicker Baskets.

One of the largest imports from Russia into America is willow clothesbaskets. The huge hampers so commonly in use are nearly all made in central Russia by peasants, although some come from the Danube valley, and there is considerable domestic manufacture. The importations last year exceeded a million dollars worth. Osier willow, from which they are made, has been worked by Russian peasants for centuries and was formerly the material from which they wove their houses. The method of cutting, peeling, twisting and manipulating the withes is handed down from father to son.—Chicago Record-Herald.

As She Would Have Been.

A gentleman in Paris paid a visit to a lady, in whose parlor he saw a portrait of a lovely woman of, say, five and twenty. Upon the entrance of the lady her visitor naturally asked her if the picture was a family portrait and was told that it represented her deceased daughter. "Is it long since you lost her?" asked the gentleman. "Alas, sir," replied the lady, "she died just after her birth, and I had a portrait painted to represent her as she would have appeared if she had lived until now!"

The Longest Word.

"What is the longest word in the English language?" asked Uncle Tom.

"Valetudinarianism, I suppose," replied James, who had taken a prize in spelling.

"No," spoke up Susie; "it's 'smiles,' because there is a whole mile between the first and last letters."

"I know one," said Jack, "that has over three miles between its first and last letters."

"What word is that?" asked Uncle Tom.

"Beleaguered," cried Jack triumphantly.

"I know one," said Philip, "that is longer than that. 'Transcontinental' has a whole continent between its beginning and ending."

"Interoceanic' beats them all," exclaimed Elsie, "for it contains an ocean, and an ocean is larger than any continent."—Lippincott's.
