$1.50 Per Year in Advance

If there is any human being more to be detested than a scolding wife it is a grouchy, complaining husband. In either case the marriage vow is a thing of the dim past that seemingly has been entirely forgotten.

E. M. and J. B. Barnes who began the publication of a new paper, the Tribune, in Woodburn less than six months ago, have sold out to G. A. Hurley, formerly from Independence, but who has been engaged in the newspaper business at Vale for the past few years.

A colonist rate of $25 from Missouri river points and $33 from Chicago to Oregon from September 15 to October 15 is announced. This low rate will no doubt bring many new people into the state who have had their eyes turned to this great Northwest country.

Col. J. C. Cooper, of McMinnville, has gone to Texas to give illustrated lectures on walnut culture before the State Horticultural Society. Mr. Cooper has a good knowledge of walnut growing and being an enthusiastic booster for the industry, he will make the Texans set up and take notice, but pity the man who must go into the Southland as a wind jamer in the month of August.

So far as we can see the announcement made by the mayor that property owners must cut the tall grass and weeds about their premises has been given little heed. Pride for the appearance of homesurroundings ought to impel everyone to look after this, and now since the warm, dry season has set in, grass is becoming dry and if left on the ground it adds very much to the possibilities of a serious fire at any time. Grind up the old scythe and get busy.

The renomination of President Taft is now almost a foregone conclusion and the vote of Oregon will be for him, despite the frantic efforts of Bourne to lead the republicans of the state away from him. What the result of the election will be can't be foretold at this date, but it is generally admitted on all sides that he has strengthened himself greatly in the eyes of the people during the past year, and many who, a few months ago, doubted the advisability of giving him the nomination again, are now strong Taft supporters.

John D. Rockefeller attributes his success in life as a business man and financier very largely to the fact that he has always counseled with his wife in matters of business, and many times he says he has accepted her view rather than follow his own, always finding later that her judgment was best. Doubtless there are families in Newberg that would have more money at the end of the year if the wife was consulted more in the matter of making expenditures, and without doubt there are on the other hand cases where if the husband was given a freer hand in the management of family funds, results would be more satisfactory. On the whole, free, full and kindly discussion by man and wife in perplexing matters, where family expenditures must be carefully considered in order to make ends meet and have something laid by for the "rainy day" that is sure to come—this is the ideal way for the management of family finances.

As noted in the Graphic two weeks ago George E. Martin has sold the Telephone-Register. The purchasers are D. S. and W. D. Williams and the latter will be the editor and manager. Mr. Martin is to remain as foreman. The Graphic extends the glad hand and wishes for the new management abundant success in the Yamhill County field of newspaperdom.

Thirty years ago it was an exceedingly rare thing for a murder case to be recorded in Oregon, but now it seems scarcely a daily newspaper is issued that does not contain an account of a murder committed within the state. It is true that our population has increased very materially but it is a lamentable fact that murderers have multiplied in a much greater ratio. Thirty years ago Oregon had no railroad connection with the outside world and in those days the majority of the people who came in, were made up of a class who came from honest motives, but with the coming of the railroads Oregon is getting her share of the rit-raf of the world and we are paying the penalty.

PRETTY BIG STORY.

Tuesday's Oregonian contained a news note about a Sublimity, Marion County farmer, F. A. Bell, who it is stated, came from Germany twenty-four years ago with $10 in cash and filed on 160 acres near Sublimity which he has improved, and from the products of the farm alone, which have been grain and vegetables, he has laid up $50,000.

This is a pretty big story and it goes without saying that if it is true, the wife and six children Mr. Bell mentions have seen few of the luxuries of life. For there are few who will believe that a farmer can in that length of time lay up $50,000 solely from the products of a farm of 160 acres, and in the meantime raise a family of children and give them the advantages they are entitled to.

Some men accumulate wealth by making slaves of their wives and children and then boast of their success as financiers, but they are entitled to little credit. Fortunate is the man who has the ability for money making and money saving and who shows proper respect for the rights of his family and others with whom he has to do, but it is always well to remember that the real measure of a successful life is not figured in dollars and cents.

Numerous instances might be cited of early settlers of Oregon who secured full sections of the best land in the Willamette valley which they held on to as long as they lived, paying little attention to the early training and education of their children and allowing them to grow up without any well defined ideas of business and true citizenship. When the parents were gone the land was divided up and it was soon squandered by the children who were not benefitted in the least by their share of the years of hoarding by the parents, who failed to pay the debt they owed to their progeny, which was, above everything else, to teach

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The Silver Lake Leader says of a former resident of Newberg: "J. T. Rhoton, co-operative observer at Fort Rock, informs us that the rainfall there for June was 1 1/4 inches. He also says crops are the best this season that they have been since the settling of the valley. Several reapers and two binders have been brought in on the strength of the good outlook for crops there."

Stories of Success

CYRUS H. MCCORMICK

Saving, industrious, energetic, and all the time devising, thinking, experimenting, the inventor of the reaping machine lived to become the greatest benefactor the farmers of America have ever known. The spirit of invention was in his blood, and after years of toil and discouragement he reaped his name high among the world's successes. He was more than an inventor—he was a business man, and it is largely due to the reaping machine that the United States outstrips the world as a grain producer. He spent his boyhood working in the saw mill and carpenter shop on his father's Virginia farm and at all times showed the careful, saving, industrious spirit which always makes for success. Everybody should have a savings account. No matter how careful you are in the matter of expense, money is sure to slip through your fingers unless you have a place for your surplus earnings. Have a saving plan and adhere to it. 3 and 4 per cent. paid on time Certificates of Deposit and Savings Accounts.

HAVE HIGH IDEALS.

Upon the Standard You Raise Depends Your Future Career.

What we make of ourselves depends upon the ideals which we habitually hold. Our lives are shaped upon our mental models. If these be high the lift is lofty; if low it grovels. Man is no better than his ideals. The stream cannot rise higher than its source. Our work can never overtop our ideal, our ambition. It is a great thing to keep the constant suggestion of high ideals, of things that are grand and noble in human achievement, in the mind. It tends to make us love the right and hate the wrong.

There is one thing we ought to hold in such sacredness that no consideration could induce us to dilute it, and that is the quality of the life, the quality of our ideals. Whatever else we are careless about, we cannot afford to carry through life low ideals, second class personalities or demoralizing mentalities. However humble our homes or ordinary our environment, we should keep the quality of the life, the personality, at the highest possible standard. We should allow nothing to deteriorate it.

Yet most people are careless and indifferent regarding the quality of their lives. There is a slovenliness in their living, a slovenliness in their mentality, which tend to deteriorate the quality of the life and make it cheap and commonplace.

Whatever your career, guard your ideal as the apple of your eye, the pearl of great price, for everything depends upon the direction in which that points. If it points downward no amount of money or influence can redeem you from mediocrity or even save you from a degraded life. Man is so made that he must follow his ideal. He cannot go up if his ideal points down.—Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

Mario Kept His Beard.

It was Czar Nicholas I. whom Mario defied on a memorable occasion. The singer was in St. Petersburg in 1853, when he received a command from the czar to sing in a little play which would have lasted about twenty minutes. He was to take the part of a young officer of the time of Louis XV., and Mario, who was very proud of his mustache and short curly beard, demurred. Finally he was sent for by the Empress Marie Feodorovna, who was always very friendly to him. He obeyed the command at once. The empress greeted him the moment he entered her boudoir with, "Dear M. Mario, do for my sake shave and sing in this play." "Your majesty," said Mario, kneeling and kissing the outstretched hand, "I would give you my life, but my beard—impossible!" Finally the czar ordered Mario either to shave or go. Mario instantly returned his salary and left Russia.—"Romance of a Great Singer."

The Almanac Was Guilty.

Compilers of almanacs in France are legally responsible for the accuracy of their publications. This point was determined by a case tried in the days of Louis Philippe. Ouvrard, a well known army contractor, fell into difficulties and was severely pressed by his creditors. According to French law, debtors cannot be arrested between sunset and sunrise. One evening Ouvrard sallied forth in quest of fresh air and was seized by a bailiff as he stepped out of his house. He protested and produced an almanac showing that it was three minutes past sunset. The bailiff produced another almanac showing that the sun did not set for another nine minutes. On his release from prison Ouvrard sued the publisher of the almanac which had misled and obtained damages.

Albino Animals in Japan.

It is noteworthy that albino animals are regarded by the Japanese in a superstitious light. The appearance of one is considered a good omen for the reigning mikado and occasionally signals a reign. For example, one reign is called "hakuchi nenkan," or period of the white pheasant; another the "hakuhoo nenkan," or period of the white phoenix.—London Globe.

Not Serious, but Curious.

"And I can't lie on either side," wailed a legal patient, continuing symptoms of illness. "Great heavens!" exclaimed the doctor. "Is it very serious, doctor?" asked the legal patient anxiously. "Oh, no, not very, but it is the first time I ever met a lawyer who could not lie on either side."—Brooklyn Eagle.

An Inopportune Remark.

All is not paradise aboard ship, first, because nobody is armor plate proof against seasickness. Old sea captains have been known to succumb to a cross sea in Saginaw bay. There is a malicious story of a captain who brought home a parrot as a gift to a lady friend, who complained that the bird knew nothing but the phrases of the fore-castle. The captain promised to bring on his next voyage a bird which had never been allowed to go outside his own cabin. Polly, however, proved very reserved and never said a word until one day when the lady was giving a lunch party, and the soup was served, there descended from the cage of the bird the agonized remark, "Steward, bring me a basin!"—Boston Transcript.

A Yankee Commission.

Since the golden age of the New England trading skipper Yankees have had a reputation for being commercial. Few of them, however, are so eager for a bargain as this one, celebrated in the Louisville Times: He was touring the south for pleasure, but could not dislodge from his mind the customs and phrases of his business life.

"Here," said a guide to him one day, "right here in this room, sir, Washington received his first commission."

The Yankee brightened up. "What per cent commission was it?" he asked.

British Military Bulls.

Some queer, quaint efforts at composition have been made by British officers. A certain major ordained this: "Reveille will be at 3:30 a. m. The brigade will parade at 4 a. m. The brigade will move at 4:15 a. m. The sun will rise at 5 a. m." It was during the guerrilla war of 1901-2, after the building of the blockhouses, that it became necessary to check the habit of the men of sleeping outside the blockhouses for the sake of coolness and comfort. A certain staff officer thereupon issued the following quaint order: "No one is permitted to sleep outside the blockhouses except the sentries." Though the intention of this order is clear, its phraseology is not. "Men on outpost duty are forbidden to strike matches on the sky line."—London Standard.
