SWISS WINDOW FLOWERS.

Potted Plants Grace Every House in the Town of La Gruyere.

Those who think all the delights of Switzerland lie among the high Alpine peaks or in the joy of winter sports will find upon visiting it that much of its strong appeal lies in the picturesque charm of its farm and village scenes.

Famous for its chocolate and cheese works, the town of La Gruyere still clings to its ancient customs and surroundings. Many of the houses date back to the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, while the chateau of the counts of La Gruyere is of an even earlier period.

Ancient buildings, however, soon become commonplace to the European traveler, says Country Life In America, and so probably the first thing one notices in this interesting village is the prevalence of window boxes.

They are everywhere. No matter how old or tumble-down the house may be, there are always flowering plants in the windows, and they brighten up the whole town wonderfully. Gay colors are the rule, pink and red geraniums are most common, although one sees a few nasturtiums and carnations, with an occasional hydrangea.

Unlike American window boxes, which are boxes in actuality containing a considerable quantity of soil, those usually found in Switzerland are a sort of grating box, with sides much like a picket fence, in which potted plants are placed. These boxes are either set upon the broad window sill itself or just outside upon brackets secured to the wall of the house.

When there are very heavy storms which might do damage to the plants the blinds may be closed to afford protection in the former case or the pots may be taken indoors one by one in the latter.

Witches in England.

There have been "witches" in Norfolk, England, until quite recent times. A man who died in 1883 was one of three brothers who had ducked an old woman in a pond because she had a black cat and wore a black silk dress on Sundays. After a visit to a public house they roused her out of bed one night and "actually in the presence of half a dozen other people, who had gathered round the spot where her inn room was, they would have hanged her."

have been drowned but that some who were not so mad as the rest cried out that she was sinking to the bottom and must be saved." Dr. Jessopp also vouched for the fact that a man who was living and master of an elementary school in 1882 had believed himself in the sixties overlooked by a witch, whose blood must be shed to cure him. So he fell upon the woman and scratched her arms till the blood poured from them.

A Self Denying Offering.

Some young girls were giving a vaudeville performance for a local charity in an eastern city. A young man who thought himself facetious tossed upon the stage after one of the "turns" a bouquet whose chief ingredient was a head of cabbage. The girl who received this offering of appreciation read the card that accompanied it and advanced to the footlights.

"It gives me great pleasure," she said, "to know that Mr. Edward Morgan has enjoyed my performance. I hoped that the audience might like it, but I never expected for a moment that Mr. Morgan would so far lose his head as to throw it upon the stage!"

Brass and Bronze.

Brass and bronze are two alloys of copper. The first is composed of copper and zinc, the latter of copper and tin. Both historically and scientifically these two compound metals are of greater interest than almost any others. Copper was one of the first metals discovered, extracted and utilized in the earliest periods of our history, and antiquaries are accustomed to speak of a "bronze age" to express that interval of time during which this metal formed many of the implements used for industrial purposes and in warfare.

All Out.

A person calling one day on a gentleman at the west end of town, where his visits were more frequent than welcome, was told by the servant that her master had gone out.

"Oh, well, never mind! I'll speak to your mistress."

"She has also gone out, sir."

The gentleman, not willing to be denied admission, as it was a cold day, said he would step in and sit down by the fire a few minutes.

"Ah, sir, but it is gone out, too!" replied the girl. — Lemon's "Jest Book."

M. O. LOWNSDALE, NOTED ORCHARDIST, DIES

M. O. Lownsdale, who for nearly twenty years was a prominent resident of this county, died in Portland Monday after a year's illness. He was the apple king of this section of country, the Lownsdale orchard near La-Fayette, being known far near. He was master of the apple growing industry and was a scientific, practical horticulturist in every sense of the word. Versatile, energetic and aggressive to the point of being dictatorial, he was not popular in the ordinary use of the word. But like many an unpopular man, he went ahead and did things, apparently oblivious of those who were snapping at his heels. If he recognized a foe man worthy of his steel, however, it was out with a keep blade and "Lay on, Mordred!" he would cry, and the foe would be felled. In the Oregonian with Hood River enthusiasts three or four years ago, as to the relative merits of Willamette Valley and Hood River apples, is a case in point. Mr. Lownsdale has had much to do with the intelligent interest which has been aroused in apple culture in the Willamette Valley and marked the way in his own orchard for its successful prosecution.
