THE CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT.

Cook Them Properly and They're Well Worth the Buying.

Butchers should endeavor to correct the impression of customers that only the high priced meats are valuable as food. On the contrary, says the National Provisioner, the cheaper cuts are often more highly flavored and fully as nutritious.

The chuck is one of the cheapest portions of the beef, but when cooked slowly in a small amount of water either with or without vegetables for seasoning is a most excellent dish.

In stewing meat if too high a temperature is used it will toughen the fiber. Another mistake is to overcook the meat until it falls to shreds. The skirt steak sells for 2 or 3 cents a pound less than the others, but if properly cooked is just as good. Lay the steak on a meat board and score it well with a chopping knife.

Then dredge with flour and put it into a smoking hot frying pan that has been greased enough to keep the meat from sticking to it. When well seared over on both sides pour over it a little boiling water and allow it to simmer slowly for two hours. Season to suit the taste. A bit of carrot or onion or bay leaf and a little vinegar to soften the fiber will add to the flavor of the meat.

All light meats are best stewed and browned just before serving. Mutton or beef is best browned first and then stewed. Cheaper cuts are best cooked in the fireless cooker. When roasting meat it should be quickly seared over to retain the juices and then cooked slowly until done. Usually fifteen minutes to the pound is required.

Hanged and Buried and Lived.

It is not given to many men to be hanged and buried and yet be able to tell the tale, but such was the experience of one John Bartendale, who was executed at York in 1634 for felony. After his body had hung for nearly an hour it was buried. A gentleman passing by the grave, which had not been filled up, thought he saw the earth move, and with the help of his servant, he disinterred the convict, who was still alive. It was the custom in those days to bury suicides and executed criminals without any coffin. The man was carefully treated and entirely recovered. He became hostler at the coaching house in York and lived a most exemplary life.

When asked what he could tell in relation to hanging, as having experienced it, he replied, "When I was turned off flashes of fire seemed to dart from my eyes, from which I fell into a state of darkness and insensibility."—Medical Journal.

Something She'd Say.

Four-year-old Jennie does not like Mrs. Gray, the good neighbor who "simply dotes on children," according to the Chicago Record-Herald. Usually a merry little girl, when Mrs. Gray is present Jennie is silent and sulky. The other day Mrs. Gray, who does not understand child nature, made the mistake of attempting to coax some expression of interest from the speechless child.

"Come, dearie," she pleaded, "say something to Aunt Gray, won't you! Isn't there anything you'd like to say to me?"

"Yessum," was Jennie's ungracious answer. "Goodby."

A Driller All Right.

An Irishman looking for work took his stand in a group at the gate of a large engineering establishment. By and by the foreman came up to the gate and asked:

"Are there any drillers here?"

"Yes," said Pat, stepping forward.

He got the job at once, but he had not been working long at the machine when it broke down. The foreman, in anything but a pleasant mood, then inquired:

"Where, man, did you learn drilling?"

"In the militia," was Pat's reply.

Quieted Them.

There is an old story of Arthur Roberts, an English actor, which illustrates how a little presence of mind may save lives. There had been an alarm of fire in the theater, and a panic seemed imminent. The actor walked to the footlights and addressed the audience. "Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "if there was any danger do you think I should be here?"

Very Precise.

"How is your mother this morning?" asked Mrs. Grey of the small boy who came with the milk.

"She's better," he answered.

"Can she sit up?" went on Mrs. Grey.

"No," answered the literal youngster; "she sits down, but she stands up."—Woman's Home Companion.
