WASHINGTON COMMERCIAL APPLE BOX TRIUMPHS OVER EASTERN BUSHEL BASKET

An interesting and significant incident occurred after the close of the Northwestern Land Products Show in St. Paul out of which the western apple box comes triumphant. A large measure of the success of western apple shippers in securing the best markets has been the attractive manner in which their product were placed before the consumer. The following letter was printed in the St. Paul Dispatch on December 21st, and represents the average easterner's impression regarding the capacity of the western apple box:

"To the Editor of the Dispatch: 'I was at the Land Show and saw apples and apples. I asked for the price of them. The manager said: This apple sells for 10 cents. Well, if the apple growers can find enough Creosuses, who are willing to pay them 10 cents for each apple, it certainly concerns nobody but the parties in interest. But I really did not go to the show to look at the apples, but to look for a packing case which would hold a bushel, and failed to see one.

Long years ago the East supplied us with apples, and they were mighty good apples. They came in barrels. They do today, in barrels of the same size.

When the Western apples came on the market they came in bushel boxes. Then the Western apple growers had a bright idea. Why make the boxes hold a bushel, when the same price can be got by shipping short bushel boxes? So the bushel boxes shrank until they now hold, I do not know how many pecks, but certainly not four, I know there are many people who will not buy Western apples until the growers pack their apples in bushel boxes, which hold four pecks.

E. Reiff.

North St. Paul, December 21." F. D. Culver, of the Furey-Culver Company of Carlton, Washington, whose company won the Sweepstakes Cup at the Land Show for the best ten boxes of apples grown in the American Northwest, took up the gauntlet on behalf of the apple growers of Washington and achieved a public victory, which should be of immeasurable value to every western apple grower.

He procured a sealed bushel basket from the State Commissioner of Weights and Measures, and in the presence of the Commissioner and his assistant and representatives of the Great Northern Railway, emptied a box of apples, which had been packed in a standard box under Association rules into the sealed bushel basket furnished by the Commissioner. The accompanying illustration shows the overflowing bushel that resulted.

The Poultry Yard.

Keep a little gas-tar on hand and apply it for scaly legs.

You can tell a laying hen as far as you can see her. Her comb is always bright and healthy looking.

February hatched chicks are apt to molt in the fall, and will not be worth anything for egg production in winter.

Turkeys more than any other poultry seem to require fresh air. They will roost in trees during a snow-storm and not seem to mind it a bit.

Forcing laying hens with stimulants of any kind, except those nature supplies in good food, is a dangerous and costly process in the long run.

Soak stale bread in sweet skim-milk, press out the milk as completely as possible, and feed the chicks. Also keep coarse sand before them; without it the chicks can not grind their food.

Put some oats in a box that will not leak; wet them thoroughly with warm water, cover them well, let them stand one whole day, then turn them into a box that does leak. Keep putting warm water on them morning and night till sprouts are well started. Spread them out thinly, moisten more, and keep this up till the sprouts are of the required length. Some folks let them grow a foot long. No finer feast for the birds than oat sprouts.

Hens will soon be bringing good prices, and the high price will tempt many farmers to sell their hens off too closely. It will pay the average farmer to keep a goodly number of hens the year around. When hatching time comes, if incubators and brooders are not used, it takes several hens to do the work of hatching and rearing the chicks, and we like to have enough others to keep the egg-basket filled. Eggs to sell every week means a small bill at the grocery. Can't have the eggs unless we hold on to enough hens.
