BITULITHIC IN 1912 INCREASES

Development of Improved Paving Industry Revealed in Year's Figures.

There had been adopted in the year, 1901, only 16,400 yards of bitulithic pavement and only seven cities in the United States recommended its use at that time. In the year following that demand had shown a great increase and in 1911 there were 99 cities whose record showed laid, and under contract, over 4,000,000 yards of bitulithic pavement.

The year 1912 shows an increase of 48 per cent over the year 1911.

BITULITHIC O. K. SAYS HYLAND

George Hyland, president of the Mount Hood Railway Company, was in the city yesterday, says the Baker Democrat. Mr. Hyland was formerly in the paving business, being connected with the Rassam Pavement Company, and he was particularly enthusiastic about the pavement completed and contemplated here.

"I think a wise selection has been made in the use of bitulithic," he said. "While I was engaged in the paving business and a member of the Hassam Company, I am frank to admit that Bitulithic is a better material. So far in Portland it has been an unqualified success. Our Hassam pavement was not a success such as we hoped for, simply because it was impossible to repair a break successfully and make a good job. Being a concrete composition, the fresh material would not fuse or 'set' to that which had been exposed to the air. I consider one of the greatest recommendations for bitulithic is the fact that any break in this material can be repaired so that in a few hours, it is almost impossible to find the break. I am certain Baker has made no mistake in adopting it. Other cities as well as Portland have been very much pleased with bitulithic, and I know this from personal experience in traveling about the country when I was in the paving business myself. I have absolutely no connection with the bitulithic company and no 'ax to grind' in making this statement."

Why We Shake Hands.

In the old days, when every man who had any pretensions to being a gentleman carried a sword, it was the custom for men when they met to show that they had no intention of treachery to offer each other their weapon hands—that is, the hand that would be used to draw the sword; and to withhold the hand was usually the signal for a fight. So fixed did this habit become that long after men ceased to wear swords they still offered the weapon hand to a friend and declined to offer it to an enemy. To this day when you refuse to shake hands with a person it signifies that you are at war. Among savages, who never carried swords, the practice of shaking hands is unknown, and it affords them amusement to see the white men do it.

Why Coughing Weakens You.

A patient German scientist of a statistical turn of mind calculates that the amount of energy expended by a person who coughs once every quarter of an hour for ten hours is equivalent to 250 units of heat, or the nourishment yielded by three eggs or two glasses of milk. Coughing is thus seen to be an expensive luxury. The reason for the waste in force entailed by it, or one reason at least, lies in the fact that, while in normal respiration the air is expelled from the chest at the rate of four feet a second, in violent coughing it may attain a velocity of 300 feet.

Mme. Modjeska's Dramatic Joan.

There are some good stories told about Mme. Modjeska, the famous Polish actress. Perhaps the most amusing, however, is that which relates how she joshed a private audience that had been beseeching her to recite something in her native language. Demurring at first, the famous actress at last gave way, and the audience sat spellbound as she dramatically uttered unintelligible words. Great applause was the reward for the effort, but what the feelings of the people must have been when they learned that she had merely recited the numbers from one to a hundred in Polish it is scarcely possible to describe.—London Tit-Bits.
