BITULITHIC PAVEMENT IS RECOMMENDED

Committee, after inspection of both bitulithic and Powers Macadam, recommends former, says the Kalispel (Mont.) Interlake.

The committee chosen to make an inspection of and to report on different kinds of pavement, recommended the bitulithic, such as has been laid on First avenue east. The report is in part as follows:

On examination you will find that number 4, or the bitulithic, is very hard. This sample was taken with much difficulty, as you would remove a block of cement, while the other samples were dug with a pick as you would remove macadam.

From all that your committee could learn they feel that while the court house or Powers pavement would be all right where the travel was light, for the four blocks on Main street we certainly cannot afford to experiment, and as between the kind of pavement considered we unhesitatingly recommend bitulithic such as is now on First avenue east.

Respectfully submitted,

Smiles That Came at the Wrong Time and Proved Costly.

One must be most careful how he laughs or even smiles in the presence of the great ones of the earth, as is evidenced in the following instances:

Milbanke, a clever but blunt Scot, who was an expert in colonial administration, was once summoned by William of Germany in order that his valuable advice touching eastern affairs might be obtained for German guidance. The kaiser had about decided to intrust Milbanke with a most important office in China with considerable supervision over German interests there.

It appears that during one of their conferences the kaiser offered some absurd suggestion as to oriental diplomacy, whereat the Scot laughed. Immediately the emperor wished him good day and never saw him again.

It was another Scot, Duncan McVea, who advised the amiable but sensitive King Carlos of Portugal in the government of the Cape Verde islands, at the time in a very shaky condition. It was practically decided to give McVea entire control over the islands at the handsome salary of $25,000 a year. During one of their consultations his majesty became greatly excited and made a mess of his English, which was usually excellent. McVea could not help smiling audibly, with the result that he was summarily dismissed and never permitted to come to court again.

It is related that once, when he was very weary after a long journey and consequently in no mood to be trifled with, the czar of Russia, in passing through an apartment in the palace at St. Petersburg, slipped on a mat that lay on the polished floor and nearly fell. Clutching wildly at one of his attendants, the emperor of all the Russias went through a series of gyrations extremely ludicrous to behold that nearly brought himself and his subject to the floor. Enidoff, at the time a prominent and confidential adviser to the throne, could not check a smile, a smile that the czar turned just in time to catch. The very next day Baron Enidoff lost his post, carrying a salary of $60,000 annually.—Detroit Free Press.

Snow Banners.

In the Sierra Nevada mountains, when conditions are favorable for the display, there occurs a beautiful and startling phenomenon of nature. At times when the wind drives up the mountain sides in a certain direction and with sufficient velocity there stream out upon the air snow banners from a hundred mountain peaks. They are formed by the circling wind acting upon the light snow and are thick and dark at the top of the mountain, like a flagstaff; then they float away broadly for a mile in length in waves of iridescent light. This magnificent display is rarely seen by other eyes than those of savages, but sometimes it has been the good fortune of a naturalist to witness it when among the wild beauties of the mountain fastnesses.

She Provided a Substitute.

A very pretty young woman had been asked to dinner by the mother of a young man who admired her very much. While waiting for dinner to be announced the four-year-old niece of the young man came into the room and climbed into the lap of her uncle, of whom she seemed very fond.

The young lady said coaxingly, "Come, Mary, give me a kiss." But the child hid her face on her uncle's arm. The young woman urged the child to come to her, saying again, "Won't you give me a kiss?" The little girl said, "No, I don't want to." Then she brightened up and said, "Uncle Fred, you do it." —Exchange.

After years of work and great expense the manufacturers of "Standard" plumbing fixtures have completed a book which should be seen by all property owners intending to remodel and especially by those who are going to build.

In this book are shown in great variety fixtures that would grace a mansion and others, less pretentious, but beautiful nevertheless, that are within the means of that great group of people—the wage earners of America.

This book is too expensive for general distribution but you can see a copy in our office.

For your own interest, see this book before planning your bathroom.
