BITULITHIC INVADES BRITISH COLUMBIA

New Westminster has taken her position in line with Vancouver and others on the Canadian side, in favor of "the best pavement available." In this case, as in fact it is in all such statements of preference, it proves to be bitulithic.

The fact that bitulithic is rapidly winning out in the northern climates as well as in southern sections is due to the fact that it adapts itself perfectly—more so than any other known pavement—to all climatic conditions, quick and extreme changes, etc.

The city government in New Westminster, British Columbia, spent a long period of time in investigating the merits of all the various forms of pavements before they finally decided in favor of bitulithic.

The initial award consists of about 50,000 yards.

POCATELLO WILL PAVE

The award recently made at Pocatello, Idaho, for bitulithic paving, was practically unanimous, as the decision was reached only after the committee appointed for the purpose, and a number of interested property owners had made a very thorough investigation of the paving in use in the more progressive cities of the Northwest. The durability of this paving, which means a low cost of maintenance, combined with its beautiful appearance, the entire absence of chuck-holes, and the fact that it has a non-slippery surface, which adds to the safety of both horse and auto drivers, has caused bitulithic paving to make a remarkable advance in public favor.

Property owners in Pocatello are enthusiastic advocates of its merits as the practical, economical pavement which will withstand all tests of traffic and climatic conditions.

DUNDEE

July thirteenth was a lucky day for the L. J. Eddens family. The stork in his flight over the Red Hills decided to leave a bouncing boy at their home. The new son has been named John Edward Eddens.

Frank Keyes and family returned Monday night from a visit to the Cherry Fair at Salem.

R. W. Swink returned Friday from a business trip to Hillsboro and Portland.

Among the Dundee residents who attended the Elks celebration were: Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gordon, Mrs. Dearborn, Miss Vedder, T. W. Spencer, and Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Greer.

Misses Anna L. Christopher and Rosa Young made a business trip to Portland on Tuesday.

Miss Helene W. Copeland and Robert Dunbar of Portland, were recent guests at Otterbrook.

Jack rabbits are becoming so plentiful that Fred Janssen killed two in one morning, running into them with his hay mower. Now is the time for every one to make persistent war on them before they get so numerous as to make it almost impossible to exterminate them.

DIAMONDS SET IN SHOES.

Golden Soles, Too, Were Worn by Dames of Ancient Rome.

The boots of Roman emperors were enriched with pearls and diamonds, and the wealthier Romans sported the like decorations. There were Roman women who ornamented their low shoes with pearls and embroideries, gold and amber. There were many whose boot soles were of massive gold.

Pliny, speaking of his own time, says: "Our ladies are not content to adorn their walking shoes alone with precious stones and jewels, but even the slippers which they wear in their private apartments are decorated. Precious stones do not suffice. They must, to be in fashion, tread on pearls and crowd their feet with ornaments like kings." Julius Caesar wore high boots worked in gold and ornamented with pearls.

Heliogabalus, who never wore a pair of boots more than once, as he never wore the same ring twice, had precious stones set in them, and even cameos, which excited the laughter of the populace because no one could see distinctly the cunning work of famous artists. But his mother, who presided over a senate of women, forbade women to wear shoes adorned with precious stones, as she prescribed the dresses that should be worn, yet she was a woman of wildly free life, in comparison with whom the Empress Messalina was a timid prude.

Alcibiades invented a boot that was named after him and became a great favorite, but we are not told whether it were luxuriously foppish. (And so boots were named after Blucher and Wellington, and there have been Americans who believed that congressmen wore congress gaiters and preferred congress water as a tipple.) What were the Sicyonian shoes that Cicero refused to wear, thinking them effeminate, although he admitted they were comfortable? Anglo-Saxon princes and dignitaries of the church wore shoes set off with gold. Charlemagne on state occasions donned shoes adorned with gems. The shoes of Henry VI. of Sicily and his queen, Constance, were of cloth of gold and jeweled, while the sole of cork were covered with cloth of gold.

Philip Stubbes in 1588 inveighed against the "corked shoes, pumnets, pantofles and slippers, some of them of black velvet, some of white, some of green and some of yellow, some of Spanish leather and some of English, stitched with silk and embroidered with gold and silver all over the foot with gewgaws innumerable."—Philip Hale in Boston Herald.

Early Risers.

Sir Edward Coke, the great English lawyer, attributed much of his success to early rising. When a young man in chambers he rose regularly at 3 o'clock and studied until the courts met at 8. Nine o'clock was his retiring hour, as he believed a man should have an equal portion of sleep before and after midnight.

The day of Immanuel Kant, the philosopher, also began early. Precisely at 4:55, winter and summer, Kant's servant entered his bedroom and announced, "Mr. Professor, the time has come," whereupon Kant invariably arose without a moment's delay.

On Epsom Downs.

A famous novelist once took a distinguished foreigner to Epsom downs to see the derby run, but the foreigner was even more interested in the wonderful crowd of people than in the horses. As the pair strolled about they passed one or two men dressed as sailors who were not, to the novelist's experienced eye, the real article, but were, he suspected, pickpockets in disguise. The foreigner pointed to them. "These are, I suppose," he said, "what you call your British tars?" "Oh, no," said the novelist, "only Epsom salts."—London Answers.

A Soft Answer.

"Tommy," exclaimed the mother, reproachfully, "you've been fighting again."
"I couldn't help it, mamma. That Bobby Jones insulted me," replied the boy.
"That was no reason for fighting," said the mother. "You should have remembered that a soft answer turneth away wrath and given him a soft answer."
"I did," replied the boy. "I hit him with a chunk of mud."

Criticizing the Critic.

"Crittick read your essay," said De Riter's friend, "and he insists that you're beyond your depth."
"Ah," replied De Riter, "I thought he would."
"You did? Then you know what he means?"
"Yes. He means simply that I am beyond his depth."—Catholic Standard and Times.
