THINKING OF FURNITURE?

Furniture that has a lot to do with your comfort, and everything to do with your pride in your home. You will certainly be judged by your furniture. Buy your furniture carefully

Here is the Best Way to buy it

IN THE FIRST PLACE—You don't want furniture that will soon go to pieces, or furniture that is ugly or that looks just like your neighbor's furniture. Therefore let us show you furniture that is well made, correct in design and exclusive.

SECOND—Select from our immense stock pieces that are comfortable and handsome in themselves and that harmonize with your rooms.

THIRD—Satisfy yourself that our prices are right (if you are in doubt) by comparing them with what others ask.

We have earned the reputation of carrying more furniture of the kind that every woman is proud to own. Naturally, you would prefer to buy this furniture if the prices are no higher than you are asked for the other kind.

All we ask is a chance to help you make a comparison.

POCATELLO IS PAVING

Commencement of paving marks a new era in the building of a greater and better Pocatello, says the Pocatello Tribune.

The work that is now actively under way is pursuant to the contract recently let by the council for the laying of bitulithic after an exhaustive investigation had been made by the people of all the various pavements in use in the Pacific Northwest, an investigation which resulted decisively in favor of bitulithic from every point of view. This it seems is the invariable result where the arbiters make a selection purely upon the basis of merit, and where they can arrive at a decision in a strictly unprejudiced way.

About seven hundred tons of bitumen will be used to complete the present paving contract in Pocatello, several hundred barrels of which are already here and unloaded near the crushing plant.

BISMARCK IN A TENDER MOOD.

A Pathetic Incident of the Franco-Prussian War.

Bismarck is always thought of as the Iron Chancellor, who cemented the German states into one empire with the blood of German soldiers shed in three great wars. But a French army surgeon, Dr. Czernicke, in a volume of reminiscences from which Forest and Stream quotes, most unexpectedly presents him as a man who felt and deplored all the horrors of war. The surgeon met the statesman at Rezonville during the Franco-Prussian war of 1870.

"You are taking part, sir, in a terrible war," began Bismarck to the young man. "What a beginning for your career! What awful sights! What suffering!

"It is not you or these poor mutilated fellows that I should like to see here," Bismarck continued, earnestly, "but your senators and deputies! They would then see what war is."

This idea that the war had been forced upon the two nations by politicians was ever with Bismarck, according to Dr. Czernicke. He referred to it again on going over the battlefield where, seated on some straw and propped up against a pillar of the church, was one of the French soldiers, a very young man.

He was terribly wounded. A shell, striking him like the lash of a whip, had carried away both his eyes and the bridge of his nose, leaving the skull bare. The wound was covered with a dressing. He lay there, calm, silent, motionless, in dumb resignation.

Bismarck stooped in front of him and asked the surgeon about the case.

"There is war for you, Messieurs the Senators and Deputies!" he said bitterly. Then, turning to one of his suit, "Please bring me some wine and a glass."

He filled the glass to the brim and took a sip. Then, gently tapping the poor fellow, "My friend, will you not drink something?"

The wounded soldier roused himself. Bending, Bismarck very tenderly and slowly gave him the wine and, rising again, almost solemnly drank what was left in the glass.

"What is your name, my boy, and where do you come from?"

"Rossignol, from Brittany."

"I am Bismarck, my comrade, and I am very proud to have drunk out of the same glass with a brave man like you."

Stretching his hand over the horribly mutilated head, Bismarck gave mute benediction and passed on.

Quite the Thing.

"I told you that if you came tomorrow morning I would give you the money for my wash. Why did you come tonight?" said Miss Philis to the daughter of her laundress.

"I know you said tomorrow mornin'," responded the girl, "but me mother she told me to come to-night, 'cause she was afraid you might be gone away by tomorrow mornin'."

"I certainly should not go without paying my laundry bill," said Miss Philis sharply. "No respectable woman would do such a thing."

"Oh, yes, ma'am, they would," replied the child knowingly. "There's lots of respectable ladies does."—New York Press.

Bacon's Mother's Advice.

Bacon's mother appears to have kept a sharp eye on his behavior long after he had attained years of discretion. In 1594, when he was thirty-three years old and the leading orator in the house of commons, we find her writing to her son:

"Look well to your health. Sup not nor sit up late. Surely I think your drinking to bedwards hindereth your and your brother's digestion very much. I never knew any but sickly that used it, besides being ill for head and eyes. Observe well, yet in time."—London Chronicle.

STOPPED THE OVATION.

Richard Wagner's Peculiar Experience in Vienna.

When Wagner was at the height of his popularity he visited Vienna. Baron von Beust, then chancellor of the empire, was informed that the Prussian party intended to give Wagner an immense serenade—a serenade which would have the air of German protest against the tendency of the ministry to make the union of Hungary and Austria more intimate. The demonstration promised to arouse strong feeling.

"Your excellency is warned," said the chancellor's advisers. "It is impossible to stop this manifestation unless Wagner goes away, and he loves ovations too well. Nothing will induce him to depart."

"You think so," said Beust, with a smile.

An hour later Wagner was invited to dine with the chancellor. He was flattered by the invitation and accepted it. After dinner, at which Beust was delightfully affable and entertaining, the chancellor remarked: "Herr Wagner, are you interested in autographs? I have some very curious ones to show you." And he opened a portfolio where were letters of Palmerston, Bismarck, Napoleon III., Heine and others.

Suddenly turning to a paper dated 1848, he said: "Ah, look at this. It is very curious. What would your friend his majesty the king of Bavaria say if this paper, which would be significant in connection with the political serenade which the Germans are going to give you, should be published tomorrow in the Vienna papers?"

The composer examined the paper and recognized with surprise an old proclamation of one Richard Wagner, who, an ardent revolutionist in 1848, had proposed to the youth of that time to set fire to the palace of the king of Saxony. He saw his autograph and that it might be the means of getting him into serious trouble.

"Very curious, is it not, Herr Wagner?" said the minister.

"Very curious, your excellency," replied his guest.

The next morning Richard Wagner left Vienna, recalled to Baireuth by urgent business.—Strand Magazine.

Could Read Faces.

"Yes, sir," went on Professor X. to a gentleman to whom he had recently been introduced, "I have given some attention to the study of human nature, and I rarely fail to read a face correctly. Now, there is a lady," he continued, pointing across the room, "the lines of whose countenance are as clear to me as type. The chin shows firmness of disposition amounting to obstinacy, the sharp pointed nose a vicious temperament, the large mouth volubility, the eyes a dryness of soul, the—"

"Wonderful, professor, wonderful!"

"You know something of the lady, then?" said the professor complacently.

"Yes—a little. She's my wife."

What Breathing Amounts To.

In each respiration an average adult inhales one pint of air. A man respires sixteen to twenty times a minute and a young child about twenty-five to thirty-five times. While in a standing posture the number of respirations is greater than when lying down. A man takes only thirteen breaths of air to the minute while reclining. The superficial surface of the lungs is 200 square yards. The amount of air inspired by an adult in twenty-four hours is about 10,000 quarts. The least amount of air needed by an adult in one hour is 380 quarts. The heart sends through the lungs 5,000 gallons of blood daily.

Word Curiosities.

It is impossible to "kick" a man in French. You must give him a "blow with the foot." The Portuguese do not "wink" at one. They "close and open the eyes." In the languages of many semicivilized tribes there is no word with which to convey the idea of "stealing," perhaps because the idea of property is so vague. It is related of one of the early missionaries that in attempting to translate the Bible into Algonquin he could find no word to express "love" and was compelled to invent it.—London Tit-Bits.

Essential.

It is well known that in parts of Lancashire everybody keeps a dog. One day Jones arrived at his office looking so worried that his friend Smith asked him if anything was the matter. "Matter?" he replied. "Yes, I've had to sell my dog." "Never mind; you can get another." "But I can't afford one." "Then go without one." "Yes," said Jones, "but a man looks such a fool without a dog!"—London Mail.
