THURSDAY, JUNE 12, 1913

It don't pay to nurse a grouch. It hurts you a good deal more than it does the other fellow.

This has been an unusually good hay growing season and the weather is ideal for curing the early clover crop which is being cut.

Give the G. A. R. veterans the glad hand next week when they come to Newberg to attend the Encampment and go out of your way if necessary to show them every courtesy.

The Graphic has supplied a number of parties with flags, and there is yet time to get in an order. If you can't get what you want elsewhere, tell your troubles at this office.

Our friend Howard Walton, of Chehalem Center, insists that his communications written for the Graphic shall be published as he sends them in, and since we have not seen fit to grant him this privilege in every particular, he orders his subscription discontinued, and says he is advised by an ex-newspaper man to take his troubles to the McMinnville papers. The world is wide and this is his privilege, though it is too bad that he is going to deprive himself of the privilege of reading the Graphic from week to week. Mr. Walton has been repeatedly informed that the columns of the Graphic are open to him or anyone else who may desire to discuss matters of interest, provided what may be said is couched in respectful language, but that we do not care to give place to personal grousches that can do nothing more than stir up bad feeling. Mr. Walton finds fault with the Graphic because we have not entered into a discussion of the contention between himself and his neighbors with the city council of Newberg over the Skelton spring. In answer we will say that we have not seen where we could do any good by entering into the controversy, and since we are alone responsible for the Graphic we must insist on using our own judgment in matters of this kind.

If you have ever had charge of an exhibit at a fair or show of products of any kind, you no doubt have felt like shying something heavier than a peanut hull at the fellow who never fails to show up on such occasions with the brilliant suggestion that he has "better taters at home" than any he sees in the exhibit. No doubt you had plead with tears in your voice for everybody in the community to bring out the best they had and help to make a respectable showing, and with the meager support you received you were not in the best of humor to receive such a suggestion from the fellow who was so lacking in public spirit that he was not willing to show what he had, at least not until he saw what others had brought to the show. On Wednesday of next week Newberg is to have a rose show and if all will take a hand and contribute to the display, a showing may be made that will be the admiration of the large crowd that is sure to be in attendance. The committee is actively at work and deserves the hearty support of all rose growers in this section. Without co-operation and support the rose show cannot be made what the occasion demands. Lend a hand and make the show the best ever held in the valley.

On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week the State Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held in Newberg, and with the beating of drums and the unfurling of flags it will be a gala week for young and old. In honor of the coming of the grizzled old veterans and their wives and daughters, a number of the pictures of the officials and past officials of the Department of Oregon appear on the first, third and last pages of the Graphic this week, along with some interesting data relative to the type of men of which the great army of the North was made up during that long four years' struggle which resulted in the overthrow of human slavery and the saving of the Union.

It is indeed an honor for Newberg to be selected for the second time in so short a period as the meeting place for the old veterans in annual session, and our people will do their best to make all who may attend feel the welcome that we cherish in our hearts toward the visiting veterans of the dark days of the sixties. Next week will be Old Soldiers' Week in Newberg, and the town will be theirs during their stay of three days with us.

THE FIRST BASEBALL RULES.

They Present a Curious Contrast to the Regulations of Today.

It will no doubt be interesting to the baseball fans of today to compare the first rules of the national game with those of the present time. When the rules were first framed about 1845 they would not fill one page of the baseball guide of today.

The Knickerbocker club of New York city was the first one organized to play the national game of baseball and was the one from which the succeeding clubs derived their rules of playing. The organization bears the date of Sept. 23, 1845, when playing rules were adopted, which are given below and present a curious contrast to those now in vogue:

First.—The bases shall be from "home" to second base, forty-two paces, from first to third base, forty-two paces, equal distance.

Second.—The game to consist of twenty-one counts or aces, but at the conclusion an equal number of hands must be played.

Third.—The ball must be pitched and not thrown for the bat.

Fourth.—A ball knocked out of the field or outside the range of the first or third base is a foul.

Fifth.—Three balls being struck at and missed and the last one caught is a hand out. If not caught is considered fair and the striker bound to run.

Sixth.—A player running the bases shall be out if the ball is in the hands of an adversary on the base, or the runner is touched with it before he makes his base, it being understood, however, that in no instance is a ball to be thrown at him.

Eighth.—A player running who shall prevent an adversary from catching or getting the ball before making his base is a hand out.

Ninth.—Three hands out, all out.

Tenth.—Players must take their strike in regular turn.

Eleventh.—All disputes and differences relative to the game to be decided by the umpire, from which there is no appeal.

Twelfth.—No ace or base can be made on a foul strike.

Thirteenth.—A runner cannot be put out in making one base when a balk is made by the pitcher.

Fourteenth.—But one base allowed when a ball bounds out of the field when struck.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Earthquake Pranks.

Hindustan has had many important geological changes effected by earthquakes. In 1762 Chittagong was violently shaken, the earth opening in many places and throwing up water and mud of sulphurous smell. Then sixty square miles of coast suddenly and permanently subsided, one of the Mug mountains entirely disappeared, and another sank so low that only the summit remained. At the same time a corresponding rise of ground took place at Ramree, an island farther along the coast. Again, at Cutch, in 1819 the fort and village of Sindree were submerged, and about five miles distant a long elevated mound was raised, measuring some fifty miles by sixteen in places, out of what had been a perfectly level plain.

A NIGHT ALARM.

It Promised Some Excitement, but the Climax Was Tame.

It happened during the Boer war. A small detachment of English infantry was stationed in a blockhouse some considerable distance outside the English lines. In order to insure themselves against a night attack the members of the little garrison had surrounded the blockhouse with a barbed wire fence at a distance of about 150 yards from the blockhouse itself. To make doubly sure that they would not be surprised the men had tied tin cans to the fence in such a position that the minute anything came in contact with the wire the cans would rattle.

It so happened that a certain nervous young private was on guard one fine moonlight night. His duty consisted in making the rounds of the blockhouse at frequent intervals. It was well along past midnight, and the garrison, with the exception of the lone Tommy Atkins on guard, was fast asleep. Fiftful breezes blew, and fleecy white clouds scurrying across the sky obscured the moon from time to time. As the guard turned a corner of the blockhouse he heard a faint tinkle. He came to a halt. There was another tinkle, this time somewhat louder than before, and the moon suddenly came out from behind the clouds. Down along the farthest corner of the fence something grayish white moved. The guard brought his gun up to his shoulder and blazed away at the disturber.

In a moment the whole garrison was astir. One after the other the men piled out to assist their comrade. Again the tinkle of cans, and once more the moon shone brightly for a second, and again the grayish white figure darted along the fence. This time a dozen rifles disturbed the still night air. Then all was quiet. The moon shone brightly once more, but there was no sign of life along the fence.

The guard was doubled, and the garrison turned in again. In the morning while the men were at mess everybody still wanted to know what everybody had been shooting at.

"It was my shirt," snapped a sergeant who had seen service in India—"my shirt what I washed and hung out to dry. And you didn't only shoot at it, but you put three holes in it," he continued. "Things 'ave come to a pretty pass when a man has to get up out of bed to shoot his own shirt off a barbed wire fence."—New York Post.
