TO THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF CHEHALEM VALLEY

Last year Newberg was very well represented in the juvenile department at the state fair and her youngsters carried off some good prizes. I hope they will win much more this year. They made a very good showing at McMinnville also, but they did not make as good an exhibit in proportion to the size of the town and population of the community as some other places. I trust you are making much greater preparations for exhibiting this year, first at McMinnville and later at Salem. I have not worked in your county in the interests of the fair because my services seemed to be needed worse in other counties where they have not had as much experience in fair work, and have not acquired the habit as you have in Yamhill. County Superintendent Duncan is so enthusiastic and devotes so much energy to this line of work that it seems to be well cared for without much assistance from the state department. Newberg being my home town, however, I am especially interested in seeing a representative exhibit there. This is doubly important this year on account of the fact that there are prizes at the State Fair for collective county and district exhibits. Superintendent Duncan is going to take the best of the exhibits from McMinnville to Salem, and has his stakes set to win first prize in the county contest. Every boy and girl in the county should be loyal to his superintendent and help win that prize. All the young people around Newberg should work together to have the best district exhibit at McMinnville, and thus secure to Newberg the credit and honor she would covet in having a part in winning the county prize at the State Fair. I am sure you will all do your part to maintain the long time slogan "Yamhill Against the world."

NOTICE TO TEACHERS

A "Teachers' Meeting" will be held in the court house in McMinnville, August 27-28, for the benefit of inexperienced teachers. All beginners and those of short experience should attend the entire session, and also the two days session of the "Movable School" from the Agricultural College, August 29-30. In the "Teachers' Meeting," primary methods of all kinds will be discussed, as well as methods of teaching in the various subjects, and plans for school management. No tuition will be charged. Do not forget the "Movable School" in Newberg, September 1-2.

S. S. Duncan, County Sup't.
 Ida Mac Smith, Supervisor.

TO THE BOYS AND GIRLS

Last week I reminded you of the near approach of the State Fair and your Home Fair. I hope you have gotten busy with your gardens, your bird houses, your tables, your poultry, your sewing, your baking, etc. If you do not have a copy of the State Fair Prize list, call on your County School Superintendent, or write to State Superintendent J. A. Churchill, Salem, Oregon, and he will send you one. Read the prize list through carefully and see what you can do best, if you have not already done so, and select the classes you are going to compete in. Do not overlook the special prizes in the back part of the book. You will find some very attractive prizes among them, including the Shetland pony for the best livestock exhibit; a cream separator for the best two pounds of butter; Scotch collies for the best fat lamb; an incubator for the largest and best poultry exhibit, etc., etc.

If you are going to enter the pig feeding contest it is time you had your pigs on full feed. There are two valuable prizes offered in the pig feeding contest, and the boys who enter this contest will gain valuable experience, besides making good money out of their pigs. With pigs selling at $10 a hundred, you are almost in Rockefeller's class, if you own two or three pigs. There are three nice prizes for the best sow and litter of pigs, the first being a hundred dollar Jersey calf. We hope to see a large exhibit of pigs and poultry at the State Fair this year, as well as at the local fairs. In keeping account of your pig feeding, and furnishing a statement of the same as required in the rules you will get an idea of keeping accounts, and of what it costs to produce a pound of pork. This is all worth while. The pig contest is open to girls as well as to boys; so look out, boys, for some girls are good pig feeders. At some of the local school fairs in Oregon last year the girls beat the boys with their pigs. It was "tit for tat," though, for the boys sometimes won over the girls with their bread, butter and jelly.

Oregon boys and girls led every state in the Union with their school fairs last year, and we are expecting them to keep up their record this year. I am sure you are too patriotic to disappoint us.

TOO CORDIAL AN AGREEMENT

"Lovers are prone to self-depreciation," said he tenderly, as they sat looking at the stars. "I do not understand what you see in me that you love so much."

"That's what everybody says," gurgled the ingenuous maiden.

Then the silence became so deep that you could hear the stars twinkling.—Stray Stories.

India's Gaur Combines Courage and Audacity With Great Strength.

The gaur is often wrongly termed "bison." The name is not correct; the bison is the bos bonasus of Lithuania and the Caucasus. The gaur, found in Indo-China, is certainly the finest of all the wild bulls; he overawes all opponents by his courage, audacity and great strength.

He is a huge beast and sometimes measures six feet to the root of the tail. He is distinguished from all other wild cattle by the prominent hump between the two horns. The latter are massive, flat at the base, and ringed, and they describe a very wide curve from the root upward.

The coat is of an olive brown tint, shading in black, with very short, fine hair.

The gaur is found both in the forest and on the mountains. In spite of his great size, he is extremely agile, so that he can run up the mountain slopes and climb the rocks with ease.

Like the elephant, he feeds on grass and plants, and when he cannot get these he falls back on bamboo shoots and the buds and branches of trees.

The gaur feeds until about 9 o'clock in the morning; then they return to the bamboo forests and clearings to sleep. Later in the afternoon they come out to graze and drink. They are not timid, and several shots can be fired among a herd before they become alarmed.—Duke of Montpelier in Wide World Magazine.

Seacoast Defenses.

It seems rather odd, come to think about it, that all of our big coast defense rifles are only available to shoot at an enemy coming in from sea. In their rear they are without protection and would require an army to protect them against invaders who might climb over the back fence after us. These big guns have a horizontal swing of only about ten degrees astern. Wouldn't it be wise to make these big shooting irons that they could be swung clear around the circle, so that they could defend themselves, so to speak? We could then load 'em with broken up store plates, bolts, newspaper jokes, family portraits and various junk and slay everything for miles around.—Oakland (Cal.) Enquirer.

French Officers Are Ill Paid.

The poorest men in France are the army officers. In fact, they would starve to death if they had a family unless they can double their official resources by private means. A captain has an income of $820 a year. The average captain, according to statistics, has a wife and three children and cannot live on less than $1,000. No wonder the pieces of army officers go begging in France.—Boston Post.

He Dodged.

"So Burroughs owes you money? Well, I think he'll pay you back some day, but you can't make him hurry." "Don't you believe it. The mere sight of me walking along the street has made him hurry several times lately."—Philadelphia Press.

Catching Her.

She (pointing): Before we were married you often used to catch me in your arms. He: Yes, and now I catch you in my pockets.—London Telegraph.

Making Good.

"Darling," he cried, "I cannot live without you." "But," she replied, "my father is bankrupt." "In that case," he despondently replied, "I guess I'll go and shoot myself."—Chicago News.

It is indeed a desirable thing to be well descended, but the glory belongs to our ancestors.—Plutarch.
