THURSDAY, AUGUST 21, 1913

The fellows who were threatening to don their winter underwear a few days ago have concluded to wait a spell.

It don't pay to bank too much on dry weather throughout the month of August in the Willamette valley. Last season a great deal of hay was lost after it was baled, as a result of rainfall, when a few dollars invested in canvass to be used as a covering would have saved it. We have enough harvest seasons that go by without rain to cause farmers to grow careless and take unwarranted chances and as a consequence heavy loss is entailed when the "unusual" takes place. The best time to get hay or grain under shelter is when it is ready to be handled. Delays are dangerous.

It is reported that Uncle Joe Cannon is going to make an effort to "come back." The old political warhorse has a strong hold on the people in his district and what he may be able to do in the race can't be foretold, but if he should be elected he would find himself out of harmony with the new order of things and unable to control legislation as he did when he was the acknowledged leader of the standpatters. It would be just as well for Uncle Joe, and a good deal better for the Republican party, if he would take his place as a "has-been" and leave the congressional race for some younger man who can better harmonize himself with present day conditions.

In the days before Oregon was connected with the outside world by railroads, the steamer State of California, which was wrecked last Sunday in Alaska waters, was one of the crack steamers plying between Portland and San Francisco and carried many people now living in this section on their first trip to Oregon. Among the number were Jesse Edwards and the editor of the Graphic with their respective families. It is with a tinge of sadness akin to the emotions incident to the loss of a friend, that we read of the wrecking of the gallant ship, though some members of the party on that trip made thirty-three years ago this month, would scarcely have heaved a sigh, had they been informed that the ship and its cargo of human freight was doomed to go to the bottom of the Pacific the next moment.

AN UNDERSTANDING PROMOTES HARMONY.

The Minneapolis News has the following to say editorially of the recent action of Governor West in stopping a Sunday circus at Oregon City:

Very many of our troubles are due to our misunderstanding of one another. We are given to setting up our own standards and arbitrarily condemning our fellows who don't live up to them, when, if we thoroughly understood conditions and environment, we would find justifiable provocation, or perfect excuse for the acts we refuse to condone.

Take, for instance, the 101 Ranch show. It is a perfectly moral circus, and yet when it proposed to show at Oregon City, Or., on a Sunday, "the better element" arose to put it down, with vigor and arms. Governor West threatened martial law and went to Oregon City with a strong guard.

At this point Governor West, his guard, a body of preachers, a bevy of lawyers and the show people got together. To "the better element" it appeared like a general round-up of the devil and his forces, including the lawyers and annihilation of that circus was the mildest result expected. But there was a genuine effort to understand each other, with the result that the circus folks agreed to attend church, Sunday evening, and the governor and ministers agreed to attend the circus on Monday. Nothing was left to a possible misunderstanding.

It is a plan that might well be carried out to the promotion of peace and progress on other occasions.

Nothing will sooner change a man's attitude toward a situation than putting himself in the other fellow's place. It is the way to get to living close to the Golden Rule. It is the way to soften or eliminate prejudice and to encourage charity and the viewing of things in a broad way. Those Oregon City ministers are going to like circuses, and those circus people will, very likely, find that it is a good thing to go to church. What might have been a bigoted fight resolves itself into a matter of mutual benefit.

Such transformation is possible in most all our affairs of life. The other fellow wasn't born of parents like yours, he wasn't raised as you were and his entire life has been unlike yours. It is not wonderful that he does not view things as you do. Don't try to drive him without understanding him.

SIMPLIFIED POSTAGE STAMPS.

By the two orders recently issued by Postmaster-General Burleson the number of stamps issued by the government will be reduced by seventeen. No more of the ten-cent registry stamps will be printed. When the existing supplies of them are exhausted the use of all other than ordinary postage stamps will be discontinued except for special delivery and to savings bank purposes, says the New York World.

This simplification of the postage stamp system will be a great convenience to the public, which never took kindly to Postmaster-General Hitchcock's experiment with the distinctive stamps for the parcel post. The best reason offered for issuing them was that they would serve as an aid in the department book keeping, and in that respect they have proved unnecessary. To hasten their disappearance their use has been authorized for letters and other mail matter, domestic and foreign, and ordinary postage stamps are now accepted for registry and parcel post. This is in line with the policy of Great Britain, where the one set of stamps does duty for all purposes—for letters, parcels, registry and special delivery, as well as payment of revenue charges.

Few persons realize that the bureau of engraving and printing is the largest stamp factory in the world. For the current fiscal year it is estimated that about 12,000,000,000 ordinary postage stamps in sheets will be required, besides over a billion more for sale in booklets, vending machines and special delivery and other uses.

To the public as well as the government the uniform postage stamp system will mean a great saving in money and time.

COMING TO NEWBERG SEPTEMBER 1-2

The "O. A. C. General Welfare School" to be held in Newberg on September 1 and 2, held their first session last week in Ashland. During the six weeks tour to be made by the school, eighteen cities will be visited, two days being spent at each stop. The program is planned to be of vital interest to the citizens of our larger towns. Agriculture is barred, the lectures, demonstrations and class work being limited to such subjects as Civic Improvement, Home Decoration, Domestic Science and Art, Social Hygiene and Food Adulteration.

The instructional force consists of five members of the college faculty, leaders in the various branches together with Mr. Cummins, a representative of the Oregon Social Hygiene Society and M. J. Mickle of the Dairy and Food Commission.

Mrs. Robbins and Miss Groves will deal with the general problems of housekeeping including demonstration lectures and class work in plain and fancy cooking, and dressmaking.

Not only demonstration will be made but wherever the required equipment can be obtained actual class work will be conducted, making it possible for the ladies of the various communities to test out in practice the methods discussed.

Professor Beckwith deals in his lecture work with impure milk and water, disinfection after disease, and the general bacteriological features of home sanitation.

Professor Peck has two very instructive illustrated lectures in Landscape Gardening, one dealing with the beautifying of city streets and parks, showing views obtained in cities throughout various parts of the United States. Contrasts are made of good and poor features of the work. The second lecture is entitled "Landscape Gardening for the City Residence Grounds and the Small Suburban Home."

Mr. Daughters will make a few tests of foods and medicine purchased in the cities visited and make known the impurities thus found.

Secretary Cummins, of the Social Hygiene Society, has a series of four lectures, one for parents, one for business men, one for young men and one for boys, fifteen to eighteen years of age. The Social Hygiene exhibit which was a feature of the World Conference in Portland, is carried with the school.

Another exhibit has recently been added by the State Library Association. This consists of a model traveling library including lists of books for home and study courses.

Mr. J. D. Mickle, of the Food and Dairy Commission will deal with Food Adulteration and Inspection.
