

Just as heavy as it looks

YOU don't buy a range by the pound, but that's a mighty good way to judge of its soundness.

For all ranges look more or less alike, as you see them standing in a hardware store or pictured in the catalog of a mail-order house, but they don't all cook alike or wear alike by any means.

Let the scales tell the story. They'll show you quickly enough where full value lies—they'll show up the shoddy stuff that is built of cheap, thin materials, and with flimsy and faulty construction throughout.

is a real steel range; handsome, solid, substantial—built of the heaviest materials; extremely economical in operation; made to last a lifetime, and to save strength, time and money for you every day of its use.

Get one into your home, and you'll take a new delight in the duties of the kitchen; for there's no drudgery in this kind of cooking—baking becomes the best of fun.

Have a look at the Estate Steel Ranges in our store—see how strong they are, how heavy, how well made and convenient, and you won't feel satisfied until you "Own an Estate."

CO-OPERATIVE CANNERY ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED

garding the price the Webber-Bussell plant could be bought for, stated that the price had been reduced to $6,500 clear of all encumbrances and that the committee had taken an option on the plant at that price, putting up $500 to hold it until the first of March.

Ira C. Smith, of Dundee, stated that it had been reported that a good deal of the machinery had been taken out of the plant and asked for information. Mr. Chambers answered that there was no truth whatever in the rumor. That all the machinery was in place; that the plant had only been operated two weeks since it was erected and that much of the machinery had never been used.

John U. Smith asked for information regarding the probable cost of putting the plant in order for running.

The answer was given that when Mr. Paulhamus was here he went over the plant carefully and his estimate was $1,500, but W. S. Wharton, J. W. Chambers and others stated that to be safe they thought the figure should be placed at $2,000 to $2,500.

Secretary Woodworth gave the information that 190 certificates of shares had been subscribed for at $20 each, making $3,800.

W. S. Wharton stated that the Corvallis Co-operative Canning Co. started out last season with 367 members but that before the season was over the number had been increased to 640. He stated further that the committee had first put the limit of shares to be taken by any one individual at five, but that it had since been raised to ten, as it was evident that it was going to be difficult to get enough subscribed on that basis to pay for the cannery and have anything to operate with.

Later in the day this question was again taken up by Mr. Harper, of Dundee, and others, who argued that since one person was to have but one vote in the meetings of the association, regardless of the number of certificates of stock he held, there was no reason why any limit should be placed on the number of certificates one person might purchase. After a full and free discussion of the question it was decided by a unanimous vote to cut out the proposition to limit, entirely.

In answer to the question as to what would be canned, the chairman stated that it was too early to tell, but that it was to be hoped that everything that was grown could be taken. That would all have to be worked out later.

At the afternoon session the constitution and by-laws as proposed by the committee, and which were patterned after the constitution and by-laws of the Puyallup, Washington Association, were submitted and adopted, with but few changes.

The name proposed was the "Yamhill County Co-operative Cannery." Some thought the name too long and after some discussion it was decided to refer the matter to a committee for consideration.

When the time arrived for the election of a board of nine trustees, which number had been decided on, Mr. Woodworth took the floor and stated that a sub-committee composed of himself, L. S. Otis and Mr. Baughman, had been appointed to bring forward names to be voted on to compose the board. That they had gone over the field carefully and had tried to get the sentiment of the various communities, as to the best man to represent each section.

The following names were submitted; from Dayton, O. B. Rippey; Dundee, H. E. Crowell; West Chehalem, N. P. Nelson, L. E. Arney; Springbrook, J. W. Chambers; Rex, L. S. Otis; Fernwood, Gottlieb Schaad; Newberg, S. L. Parrett, president U. S. National Bank, W. S. Wharton, president First National Bank.

The names suggested were so satisfactory that the election was made unanimous, without debate, and the nine gentlemen were made the trustees of the association for the first year.

Northwest." She said she prepared some notes and went to the meeting in the evening, not expecting many to attend, as but few had been attending the evening gatherings, but her consternation was great on finding that every seat was taken and standing room was at a premium. When she faced the eager throng she went to refer to her notes only to find that she had picked up the wrong paper on leaving her room and all she had was a formula for the prevention of sea sickness. Ever after she had discarded notes when attempting to address an audience.

In her talk in which she encouraged people to buy home produced stuff as far as possible Mrs. Weathered addressed her remarks largely to women, for she said it was estimated that women buy 90 per cent of the things that go into the home, and she said further that Wm. Lipman of the Lipman & Wolfe Co. in Portland had remarked to her that he would put it at 102 per cent. Said her work was to go about the country and endeavor to get the women to think along these lines and to realize how much it meant to patronize as far as possible the home physician, the home dentist, the home miller, the home grower and home manufacturer of articles—in fact to carry out the precepts of the golden rule when laying in the family supplies. Women send thousands of dollars away to Eastern Mail Order houses every month to be absorbed by firms that do not pay a dollar in taxes in Oregon. This should not be. Women should ask for Oregon made goods and trade at home with the local merchants as far as possible.

ORIGIN OF A NOTED PHRASE.

"I'd Never Allow the Constitution to Come Between Friends."

In one session of the legislature the New York city Democratic representatives were split into two camps, and there were two rivals for leadership. One of these was a thoroughly good hearted, happy-go-lucky person who was afterward for several years in congress. He had been a local magistrate and was called Judge. He was always willing to vote for any other member's bill himself, and he regarded it as narrow minded for any one to oppose one of his bills, especially if the opposition was upon the ground that it was unconstitutional.

On one occasion he had a bill to appropriate money with obvious impropriety for the relief of some miscreant whom he styled "one of the honest yeomanry of the state." When I explained to him that it was clearly unconstitutional he answered, "Me friend, the constitution don't touch little things like that," and then added, with an ingratiating smile, "Anyhow, I'd never allow the constitution to come between friends."

At the time I was looking over the proofs of Mr. Bryce's "American Commonwealth," and I told him the incident. He put it into the first edition of the "Commonwealth." Whether it is in the last edition or not I cannot say. —From "Theodore Roosevelt—An Autobiography."

FATHER OF PSYCHOLOGY.

Theory of Dr. David Hartley, the Famous English Philosopher.

The first attempt to explain psychological phenomena on physiological principles was made by Dr. David Hartley, the English philosopher, who was born in the year 1705. In his great work, "Observations on Man—His Frame, His Duty and His Expectations," published in 1749 after patient investigation covering sixteen years, he elaborated his epochal theory.

By the development of his law of association and chiefly by the law of transference he accounted for all the phenomena of the mental constitution. According to him, the white medullary substance of the brain, spinal marrow and the nerves proceeding from them, is the immediate instrument of sensation and motion. When a sensation has been frequently experienced it acquires a tendency to repeat itself spontaneously.

Ideas are but these repetitions or relics of sensation and in their turn recall other ideas. Thus the sight of an apple recalls an idea of its taste, and this recalls other associated ideas. In this way Hartley accounts for all human emotions.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Sermon on Conscience.

"I knows why you wakes in de night-time an' stares at de dark, an' pulls de liver over yo' head," said Brother Williams, "an' you orter know widout me tellin of you. It's on account er dat 'conscience you klicked into de corner in de airy nawwin' w'en you wuz 'ixin' ter leave fer de day. You didn't think ter ax it ter warm its haus by de fire w'en you wuz gwine ter bed, an' so it riz up an' stumblid round de room in de dark, untel it strick a light in w'ich you seen yo' own soul! Dat's now come an why—git round it ef you kin!"—Atlanta Constitution
