CHEHALEM CENTER

Rev. Carey, of Springbrook, preached in the morning services Sunday at the church.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. will remember the next meeting will not occur until July 15 at the home of Mrs. A. V. Hendrickson.

Maurice Walton went to Hood River Tuesday to remain until fall.

Ed. Rity, of Adison, California, and Silas Rity, of Pendleton, Oregon, visited their brother, Ben. Rity Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Kruger and children and Mr. and Mrs. J. Ego and little son were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben. Rity.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Anderson and daughters, Hilda and Ella, Mr. and Mrs. K. L. Tangen and son Aubrey, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Christenson, of Yamhill, all ate a big chicken dinner Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grimes, of Newberg, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Hendrickson and family are planning to spend the Fourth in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Hall, the well known chicken financiers, are planning to go East. They are making a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Ralston this week before their departure.

The West Chehalis Sunday School will unite with Chehalis Center Sunday School in a picnic on the Fourth (next Saturday) at the grove on Rev. H. G. Crocker's farm. All are invited to come.

Gideon Palmer and wife, George Perry and wife and Miss Ina Ridgway all came in to the Ridgway home to remain awhile this summer. They have been down in Lake county for some time.

The baseball team from Rex came over and played ball Sunday. The game went in favor of Rex.

NURSED A HOT TEMPER.

Something Had to Give Way When William Morris Broke Loose.

Though explosive tempers may not be admirable and temperamental explosions are not always harmlessly expended, they are always preferable to soreness, sullenness, brooding resentment or cold anger. Arthur Compton-Rickett in his study of William Morris—that "jolly vivid man," as he terms him—relates several new instances of Morris' violent thunderclaps of temper and swiftly ensuing sunniness and sweetness.

Once while he was painting he was called from the room, and presently his startled model heard him furiously anathematizing some one outside whom he dismissed or ejected and then returned a moment later still boiling with wrath. He could not resume his work, but made wild dashes about the room, growling and muttering, until at last in a culminating access of rage he took a flying kick at the door and with a vast crashing and splintering smashed in a panel. It was too much for his model's nerves, and he started to flee, but at that moment Morris, with his ire entirely gone now that the explosion was over, turned with a beaming smile, and assured him genially:

"It's all right, it's all right, but something had to give way!"

FLAVOR OF FOOD.

It is an Important Factor in Digestion and Good Health.

If it were not for flavor we should not digest our food properly. Epicureanism in eating is the handmaid of good health. Flavor has been called the soul of food. The viands that are most agreeable to our sense of taste, those we enjoy most, are those we are most likely to digest well and from which we are most likely to derive the maximum of nourishment.

A book was devoted to this subject by Henry T. Finck of New York. He called it "Food and Flavor." In a review of it the Scientific American says: "The psychic factor of desire must precede ingestion or results will be unpropitious. To each cent spent for nutriment we add five more for flavor. Flavor, in short, has an appetizing value, a health value, a commercial value."

"The evolution of a discriminating appetite and the education of the cook must go hand in hand. But your glutton is never an epicure. Rational mastication must accompany the highest enjoyment of food, and in this enjoyment the perfect assimilation and health. It is flavor that stimulates the flow of the digestive juices; it is the digestive juices that prepare the food for the extraction of nutriment."

The Professor Was Wrong. Several decades ago a learned professor delivered a course of lectures, in one of which he proved to his own satisfaction that the Atlantic ocean could never be crossed by steam. Steam power, he had been discovered and applied on land, but he was confident it could never be applied to the ocean. Under the peculiar conditions of the heaving tides, the danger of storms, the rolling of the tide, and so forth you could never apply steam to navigation across the Atlantic. The book in which that lecture was published was on the first steamer that crossed the Atlantic. The captain took it along as a sort of curiosity. That book did not have a very large sale, but there has been quite a run of steamers ever since, and the professor ceased to argue that steam could not be utilized on the ocean.—Christian Herald.

Salting One's Smokes. The strangest way of taking his salt was probably Dr. Parr's. Telford records that he used to fill his pipe half with the finest tobacco and half with salt. After that it is not very surprising to learn that he smoked "with a philosophical calmness." On one occasion when the two met Charles Lamb's furious smoking of the strongest tobacco filled Dr. Parr with astonishment. Gently laying down his pipe, he inquired how Lamb had arrived at his power of smoking at such a rate. "I tolled after it, sir, as some men toll after virtue," was Lamb's reply.—London Graphic.

Strychnine. Strychnine is one of the most powerful vegetable poisons known, but it has very odd effects. Up to about one thirty-second of a grain it is often used in medicine as a stimulant. Very little more is required to bring on that peculiar state known as "tetanus," in which the muscles lock themselves up into such hard masses that they are as rigid as bone. An overdose, however, has been known in at least one instance to cure itself.—Exchange.

How He Felt. "You act as though you thought yourself superior to the government." "Well," replied the genial egotist, "I do feel slightly superior. As a taxpayer when I owe the government anything I pay. When the government owes me anything it does as it likes about the matter."—Washington Star.

Plenty of Hopeless Ones. At the age of twenty-five a man can be forgiven for thinking he knows it all, but if he hasn't changed his mind at forty there is no hope for him.—Tulsa Blade.

Faint Heart. "Have you spoken to father yet?" "Certainly, I said 'Good evening' when I passed him in the hall."—Pennsylvania Punch Bowl.

Circumstances are beyond the control of man, but his conduct is in his own power.—Bosmont.

PARISIAN BEGGARS.

Clever Rogues Who Study the Weak Points of Their Victims.

An accomplished mendicant, like a clever salesman, studies his customers, discovers their weak points if he can and trades upon them. In this relation it is of interest to note the skillful methods whereby a certain class of Parisian beggars play upon the superstitions of their victims.

There is a common saying in France that giving alms brings good fortune, a saying that has not been overlooked by the Parisian beggar. If one visits the Sorbonne on the days of examination for the bachelor's degree he will see an interesting sight. The collegians approach, each with his dictionary under his arm, on his way to make the famous Latin version, on the success of which all his future depends. A crowd of beggars surround them.

"A son, monsieur; a morsel of bread," the beggar will say to a collegian. "It will bring you happiness."

The candidate hurries on. "You will be blackballed, monsieur," the beggar continues. This sinister prediction always takes effect. The collegian pulls out his purse, and the beggar turns away, chuckling.

A similar scene may be witnessed at the Hotel de Ville on the days of examination for certificate of ability for teaching. When there are no examinations in progress there may be races, and to them go the beggars, for gamblers and sporting men are notoriously superstitious.—Washington Star.

WIGS, HOODS AND CAPS.

Shapes, Colors and Significance of Old Egyptian Headgear.

The reliefs and paintings on the walls of the tombs and temples of the Egyptians show that that race of people wore thick and elegant head-dresses. Hats with brims were apparently unknown. Their headgear consisted of wigs, hoods and caps.

"The wigs were very likely made of hair or tow, for their great size could not have been made by dressing of a person's own hair; the caps were also very large and high and made of material which as to its kind can only be guessed at," says Charles E. Keeler in a history and development of hats and headgear.

"The largest were cupola shaped, and their use was probably confined," he further says, "to those of royal blood. They were yellow, white and red. It is supposed that the yellow ones were made of brass and were a kind of helmet, that the white was the crown of upper Egypt and the red the crown of lower Egypt. The pharaoh, a combination of the white and red, was considered as the symbol of the rule over the land. Lower flat crowned caps were worn both alone and over a hood, and sometimes with a strap under the chin to hold the headpiece in place. The wigs were probably worn upon the shaven heads, as it is supposed that the clean shaven head was as prevalent in Egypt as it is now in tropical lands."

Executor and Executrix Notice of Final Settlement.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned executor and executrix of the last Will and Testament of John C. Clemenson, deceased, have filed their final account as said executor and executrix in the County Court of Yamhill County, Oregon, and that said Court has appointed Monday, June 29th, 1914, at 11 o'clock A. The Black Imported Percheron Stallion

GLENAUR 44942

Will stand this season at

The Ranch of J. D. Gordon & Son

One mile east of Newberg

This stallion has sired some of the prize winners at our state fairs. On account of the lateness of the season in getting him, and to cut out the expense of traveling him, we are going to stand him at

TEN DOLLAR TO INSURE A FOAL

This, we figure, will give the breeders an opportunity to get the service of one of the best sires at a small fee, and we will save the ten-dollar benefit we give the farmer in expenses. This horse is known as the Morris or Deranoeau horse.
