PROPOSED EIGHT HOUR LAW

The Portland Journal, generally favorable to reform legislation, devotes a column to this proposed law and says:

"The most sweeping and drastic measure ever presented to the people of Oregon will be on the ballot at the November election. It is what is known as the 'universal eight-hour day' amendment to the constitution.

Its purpose is to write into the fundamental law of the state drastic provisions that would prohibit all persons employed at any kind of labor from working more than eight hours out of nine consecutive hours a day.

It makes it a criminal offense on the part of the employer, punishable by a fine not to exceed $1000 or imprisonment not to exceed one year, for each and every offense. The proposed amendment was filed by Mrs. Jean Bennett.

If the amendment should be drafted into the Oregon constitution a farmer could not employ men to work on his farm for longer than eight hours per day.

SI DRAFT IS STILL IN THE CITY

There's a lot more goin' on all the time in the city that us fellers out here in the country don't dream about till we get right down there and see with our own eyes. The people down on the streets in the city are just like sheep out on my farm and when I'm down here I ain't no better than the rest of the crowd. Wherever you see a bunch of fellers standing and rubberin' makes no difference whether they're lookin' at anything particular or not, everybody else and their cat and dog stop to see what's doin' and the other day there was a big crowd gathered in front of a store and I stopped too and they was having a washing machine demonstration. The fellers there would fill one washer with clothes and leave one empty, then they would bet $5.00 that any feller in the crowd couldn't put a blind fold on and walk up and tell by rumpin' these machines which was the full one and which was the empty one, and I thought to myself that's an easy way to make $5.00; but when I looked through the crowd and saw the name, "High Speed Motor Washer," I just took a second thought and remembered that was the very same machine that the boys up at Larkin-Prince was tellin' me about, and they sell them too, and I'll swan if they ain't got anything in the shape of a hand-power washer backed clean off the earth. They run easier than any other machine you ever saw, they guarantee all cast parts on them for 5 years and they'll let you try them out for 30 days, and if you don't think they're the best machine you can buy, they'll give you your money back, and they don't cost any more money than a lot of the old style washin' machines that run like a saw mill. I tell you it's almost a safe bet that them boys at 'The Big Hdwe. Store' are offering for sale the cream of the manufacturers' products in the hardware and implements line. Now you and I and every thinking citizen knows that the John Deere line of implements is second to nobody's line, they do the work, they look good, and they last like sin and everybody that uses them likes them, and a feller can't ask for any more. It beats the band how the women chase each other around down here in town lookin' for bargains and I'm tellin' you right, I see more real special value stuff in the hardware line up there at Larkin-Prince Hdwe. Co., on their 10-cent counter and in their special bargain window than I've seen all the time I've been in Portland. I've come to the conclusion that Larkin-Prince are wise to the game and are giving their friends and customers just as much for their money on the whole line straight through as can be bought any place, saying nothing about the little specials that they are shoving out through that "Bargain Window" and over the 10-cent special counter. It will pay the women who are doing the buying for the home to make 'The Big Hdwe. Store' their headquarters as the boys carry the best lines of ranges, aluminum ware and all new aluminum specialties as well as a complete line of silver ware, enamel ware, etc., and the regular customers that trade there all the time get the bargains that are offered as specials. I was down to the depot yesterday afternoon and I see a big bunch of barrels and kegs and I went over and looked at them and I see that they was marked Larkin-Prince Hdwe. Co., Newberg. I guess the boys must be figuring on a big pickle crop. They'll have some few barrels and kegs for sale anyway. They are nice to put pickles, pork, sauer-kraut, etc., in and the people won't have to go around to the grocery stores lookin' for second hand kegs to take care of their produce. Leave it to the boys at 'The Big Hdwe. Store' to get the goods that you need and what's more you'll get good service and the right kind of prices.

PLANTING THE WIRES.

The Trick That Saved Morse With His First Telegraph Line.

It is not generally known that the earliest experiments in electrical communication were made with the expectation of using underground wires. In 1843 congress appropriated $30,000 to enable Professor Morse to test his newly invented telegraph on a line between Washington and Baltimore.

A Maine man interested in the plow business had taken the contract to lay the pipe containing the wires at $100 per mile, and Ezra Cornell happened to call at his office in Portland when he was trying to invent a machine to do the work. Mr. Cornell at once sketched a machine something like a plow, which would cut a deep and narrow furrow and lay the pipe in the furrow as it moved along. Professor Morse asked Mr. Cornell to build such a machine, and the contrivance proving practicable Mr. Cornell was asked to take charge of laying the pipe.

The work was begun at Baltimore in October, 1843, and went forward satisfactorily, but the discovery was presently made that imperfect insulation allowed the current to escape from one wire to another. A serious crisis was at hand. The appropriation for the experiment was nearly exhausted, and Professor Morse felt that to suspend operations at that stage would be a confession of failure.

Accordingly Professor Morse called Mr. Cornell aside and said: "Can't you contrive somehow to stop the work for a few days so that the papers will not know that it has been purposely interrupted? I want to make some experiments before any more pipe is laid."

Cornell stepped back to the machine and shouted: "Hurrah, boys, whip up your mules! We must lay another length of pipe before we quit for the night!"

The teamsters cracked their whips, the animals started at a lively pace, Mr. Cornell grasped the handles of the plow and, watching his opportunity, canted it over so as to catch into a point of rock. The machine was completely wrecked.

The experiments that Professor Morse made decided him to put the wires on poles. By the following spring the line between Washington and Baltimore was in operation.—Youth's Companion.

The White Breasted Nuthatch.

The white breasted nuthatch is often mistaken for a small woodpecker. Its name was suggested by the habit of wedging nuts, especially beechnuts, in the crevices of bark and breaking them open by blows from his sharp, strong bill. Insects and spiders constitute about 50 per cent of its food; the largest items being beetles, moths, caterpillars, ants and wasps. More than half of the vegetable food eaten consists of mast, acorns and other nuts and large seeds. Only one-tenth of its food is grain. The bird does no injury, as far as known, and much good.

A Famous Milestone.

One of the oldest milestones is to be seen in the museum at Leicester, England. It is a cylindrical block of sandstone roughly inscribed with an abbreviated statement to the effect that it was erected during the emperorship of Caesar Hadrian, son of Trajan, conqueror of Parthia. It also says, "To Leicester, Two Miles." The Hadrian milestone was discovered over a century ago beside the ancient Fosse way and narrowly escaped being converted into a lawn roller by the unromantic and practical finder.

Nest Made From a Leaf.

The tailor bird of India, a tiny yellow creature, makes a most curious nest. To escape snakes and monkeys this bird takes a dead leaf, flies up into a tree and with a fiber for a thread and its bill for a needle sews the leaf to a green one hanging from the tree. The sides are sewed up, an opening to the nest thus formed being left at the top. The leaf, apparently hanging from a twig, would never be taken for a nest.

Putting it in English.

A Hindoo baker's assistant in Bombay setting up in business for himself and desiring to cater for the English community had the following notification painted over his doorway: "Ram Bux solicits respectful patronage. He is a first class British loafer." — Christian Life.

Three Dinner Rules.

John Bulwer, a rather quaint writer of the seventeenth century, recommends the following three dinner rules: Stridor dentium, alitum silentium, rumor gentium. These have been humorously translated thus: "Work for the jaws, a silent pause and frequent habaw."
