

DUNDEE

Dr. and Mrs. Bahelman, of Portland, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Hillsinger.

Mrs. Lillian Barbour Ellsworth, of Portland, spent Sunday at the Keyes home.

Ray Powell, of Cincinnati, O., a member of an orchestra on the Empress circuit, spent Friday with his uncle and aunt, Prof. and Mrs. J. P. Powell.

John Leslie, of Portland, was a guest part of the week at the Wm. Wilson home.

John Herring and Spence Veder each lost a valuable horse recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Spencer, of Portland, are sojourning at Glenfell, in the Red Hills.

Mrs. Wm. Reitenber is visiting her sister near McMinnville.

Mrs. Roe Robinson is visiting relatives at McMinnville.

On Sunday evening a memorial service, honoring Miss Willard, Miss Stevens and Rev. Edith Hill Booker, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., was held in the church. Special music was a feature of the service. Addresses were made by Mrs. Round, of Newberg, Mrs. Rhoda Pool and Miss Edith Minchin.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keyes entertained forty or more Red Hill and Dundee friends at a barn dance Saturday evening. Violin and orchestra furnished excellent music and all present had a jolly time. The building in which the dance was held is the new barn that Mr. Keyes has built on Lovers' Lane, near the site that has been selected for the new home.

On Friday evening Cupid sent his chariot to Dundee and whisked off two of our popular young people, Miss Ruby Poole and Lee Herring. The little love god took them to McMinnville, where he made all arrangements for a wedding. After the ceremony he took them off for a brief honeymoon, the place being kept a secret. He promises to return them in a few days to Dundee, where they will occupy the Bland Herring home until the return of the parents. The good wishes of the community are with Mr. and Mrs. Lee Herring for a long and happy life together.

"BACK TO LAND" MOVEMENT GROWS

A movement was recently started by the Producers and Consumer's Association to assist people temporarily "out of luck," in securing a start in the country. A special committee was appointed to bring land owners and laborers or farmers together, and the committee has been busy ever since. It has listed about 300 men who want to secure places on farms, either on salaries or as renters. A good many have been placed in very satisfactory places. Homes that have been idle have been turned over to some ambitious young family for the mere advantage of being kept in a good condition of cultivation. In some instances direct wages are paid and a home is provided for the renter, where he may assist in making his own living by having a garden, some fruit a cow or some pigs.

So far there has been just one impediment in the way of success and that is that farm owners are not quick enough to take advantage of the opportunity. Only about one-third enough farms have been listed to meet the demand. And yet there are thousands of idle farms in Oregon and Washington. In logging sections particularly, where the land has been bought for the slashing timber, idle houses are going to rack and acres of once well cultivated land is growing up wild. Timber men would find it advantageous to lease these buildings and clearings to farmers free, just to have some one near who might aid in protecting their holdings.

The opportunity is open. If people who have the land will notify the "Back to Land" committee, that has its headquarters at 728 Morgan Building, Portland, they will surely be rewarded by an opportunity to have it cultivated.

WAITING AND HOPING TIME

Last week it was given out that all that was needed to complete the government deal for the canal locks here was the signature of some Washington den in the pan.

Haven't heard whether he has had time enough in the past two weeks to sign his name, but the chances are if he has, the matter will have to be taken up in congress and a commission appointed to determine if the signature is genuine and to investigate whether the t's were all crossed with a uniform slant.

Three and a half years ago our people were jubilant over telegrams received from Washington that the $700,000 deal had gone through.

Now the steenth announcement that the final details are about complete does not even create interest.—Oregon City Courier.

PROGRESS IN BUSINESS.

Scientific Management and the Way It Standardizes Work.

Popularly, scientific management is characterized as a cunning device for speeding up workers. Actually, it is a scientific method of finding out the pace at which worker and machine will do the best continuous work. It does not drive; it gauges, standardizes.

Almost the first attack of the system is on the tools, chairs, benches and machines a worker uses. Are they fitted to him? Is a five foot man using a shovel suitable only for a six footer? Is a short girl sitting on a chair comfortable only for a tall one? Are heavy irons lifted when they might be shoved?

What is done for the equipment is done for the task. It is divided into parts, and each of these parts is separately studied, the object being to cut out unnecessary motions. The observations made on the worker with the stop watch, to which there has been objection, are intended to find which of two or three or more possible motions made in doing a particular thing is the quickest and easiest.

What you have as a result of this study is a task standardized—that is, the best way possible of doing it worked out. Of course the worker must be taught this standard method, it cannot be picked up or learned by watching some one else. The standard for each task—it is known as a time study—is kept in the offices of the shop, just as patterns for machines are, and whenever the task is to be performed it comes out and is given to the worker. It is equivalent to saying to him: "The operation we ask of you is no unskilled, unformulated thing. It is something to which science has been applied, as it has to the pattern of the thing you are to make. If you follow your instructions you should turn out a fixed amount in a fixed time without overfatigue. If you do this we will add to your wages such and such a premium."

This premium is usually fixed at about a third of the day's wage, or, if it is piece work, at about a third of the piece rate.—Ida M. Tarbell in American Magazine.

Lawyers and Spiders.

Day, the author of "Sandford and Merton," had decided opinions on the killing of even an insect. He was with Sir William Jones at his chambers in London one day, and a spider fell on the table. "Kill that spider," said Jones. "No," preached Day in his Sandford style, "I will not kill that spider, Jones. I do not know that I have a right to kill that spider. Suppose when you are going in your coach to Westminster a superior being, who perhaps may have as much power over you as you have over this insect, should say to his companion: 'Kill that lawyer! Kill that lawyer!' How should you like that? And I am sure to most people a lawyer is a more noxious animal than a spider."

Dumb, With Reservations.

An old gentleman stopped in front of a beggar who bore a sign reading "I Am Dumb" and dropped a generous contribution into his box.

"Poor fellow," he said compassionately, "you are dumb."

"Yes, sir," came the wholly unexpected reply.

"Sir," said the outraged old gentleman, "I thought you were dumb."

"That's all right," was the answer. "I can't say anything except 'Yes, sir.'"—New York Post.

A Synonym.

A little girl in one of the schools was cautioned by the teacher against using the same word twice in a short sentence. When she had to write a short story about some home event she said in the opening sentences:

"I will tell you a tale about my dog's narrative. It is short."

She enjoyed the laugh of the school children, but was not certain whether "short" referred to the tale or narrative.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Porcelain.

China (porcelain) is so called because it was first brought from the Celestial Kingdom. It is made principally of kaolin, and kaolin takes its name from a high hill in China, where it was first discovered. It is a fine clay, white when pure, and it is easily worked. It has since been found in various places, the United States as well as other countries.

Sad Happenings.

"A sweet and pretty young girl in our neighborhood was driven from home yesterday."

"How dreadful! What was the cause of her being driven away?"

"She wanted to try the new limousine they've just bought."—Baltimore American.
