$1.50 Per Year in Advance

THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1915

Born, to C. C. Chapman, of Oregon booster fame, the "Oregon Voter," a weekly publication. Price, two dollars a year—and it is worth the money. What more need be said for the new fledgling?

In making mention of the recent meeting of the Willamette Valley Editorial Association meeting at Springfield the Albany Democrat says: "Col. Hofer, the well known millionaire editor from Salem, was among those present." And where did he get it.

Mr. Hutton, of the Anti-Saloon League, said in a public meeting in Portland a few days ago that he had received a letter from Congressman McArthur, in which he stated that he would not vote for national prohibition. That is where "Pat" is going to get off wrong. If he is wise he will get his ear a little closer to the ground.

William Allen White, the Bull Moose booster of Emporia, has it figured out that if prosperity returns before the presidential election in 1916 the democrats will win and if it fails to arrive before that date the republicans will be easy winners. It is now up to all the federal office holders to pull their coats and give old prosperity a big boost in order to turn the trick.

E. P. Nutting, the former owner of the Albany Democrat which was first the States Rights Democrat, has leased the plant and his name now appearing at the head of the editorial page has a familiar look to the long time newspaper men of Oregon. Mr. Nutting is not as young as he once was but this is no fault of his and he apparently is good for several years of newspaper work yet.

Lots of interesting political history is coming to light in the Barnes-Roosevelt $50,000 libel suit now on trial in New York. It seems that Platt held a pretty tight rein on Roosevelt when he was governor and did not cease to direct even after the latter became president. And that bi-partisan invisible government of the bosses which Roosevelt denounces so strenuously when he is talking for the public had him in its clutches then. For he did things for Grady, the democratic boss, at the dictation of Platt, the republican boss. The revelations of incidents in the Roosevelt career now being made are not going to promote his chances of securing the republican nomination for president next year; that much is assured. —Coquille Sentinel.

There is talk of establishing a sales day in Newberg at intervals of about once a month when those who have articles they desire to dispose of may bring them in and have them sold at public auction on commission. Quite often people have stock and other property they want to sell but do not have enough to justify holding a public sale. A sale day would make it easy for people of this class, for with a combination effected enough stuff might be brought together to attract a crowd and make a satisfactory sale. The tendency has been where this has been tried, to undertake to hold the sales too often. This must be guarded against if success is to be attained. The frequency of the sales must be governed by the amount of property that can be gotten together to form the basis of the auction.

Speaking of Jess Willard, the great "white hope," William Allen White says: "If he will stay by his Kansas training; omit whiskey and remember the wife of his youth, he may become a real gladiator—like John L. Sullivan before he began to moisten up. But if Jess is a wise boy, he will take the $100,000 gate receipts, come home, put it in land in central Kansas, and count that day lost whose low descending sun doesn't show him a new litter of pigs, or a little stranger in the cow barn."

COST OF THE WAR.

Accurate news from the front in Europe is obtained with difficulty, but some that is mathematically exact comes from the rear. Premier Asquith estimates that England is spending $10,000,000 a day for military purposes says the Globe Democrat. It is probable that the present expenditures of all the nations of Europe on their armies and navies amounts to $50,000,000 a day, or $1,000,000,000 every twenty days. So one of the problems of the conflict, if it lasts another year, is to find in the war chests nearly $20,000,000,000 to pay the bills for the next twelve months. It would take the world at the present yield nearly half a century to extract that much gold from the earth. Where is the money to come from for the gigantic struggle if long continued? The question will be pressed home by the course of events, and statesman of foresight and practical judgment will not view it as a secondary matter. The bourses have an impersonal way of impressing their views. Industrial situations present their arguments quietly, but forcibly. England, for example, is rich, but a doubling of its national debt in about one year would suggest the rakes' progress.

If the world can afford to spend $20,000,000,000 a year for war, what might it not accomplish with one-fourth the amount invested in works of peace and productive enterprises? Five billion dollars would duplicate several times the Panama Canal and Cape to Cairo railroad. But war is a compulsory visitation, as human nature now goes, while the advancement of trade, commerce and industry holds a back place, and can only wait for saner national and international relations. In many ways the war as now waged is contemptible. The daily killing of a few noncombatants with bombs, and the sinking of two or three trading or fishing vessels, is a paltry item in such a colossal outlay. Just where the present tension will break cannot be foreseen, but it is for all concerned an absurdity, a clinch in which the several combatants are wasting vast quantities of treasure without a prospect of present or future return. The money side of the contention may shortly become its main salient. Mr. Asquith has stated frankly the size of the bills England is paying, and the other combatants can mislead nobody by obscuring the size and nature of the financial puzzle in billions.

GONE BUSTED.

Another Farmers' Friend Co-operative Company has gone busted. They were going to sell goods to members at cost plus the expense of doing business. One of the promoters was getting 50 per cent of every dollar's worth of stock sold. Hood River people were warned against one of these institutions in 1912. It lasted but six months, and it is hoped that those who got stuck informed their neighbors and saved them the loss in 1915 when a loss counts much more against the profit side than it did then. The next time a fellow wants you to buy stock, invite him to let you have your own time to work in, instead of being worked in. Buy your wife a new dress with the money, is as good advice as we can suggest for any money you may be tempted to invest in this manner.—Glacier.

SPRINGBROOK

C. E. Newhouse came home Tuesday night.

Frank Carlisle was a Portland visitor Tuesday.

Daisy Newhouse was a visitor at home over Sunday.

Mrs. C. J. Clemenson continues to improve, we are glad to note.

Vivian Hadley and Alpheus Mills were repairing the cannery platform the first of the week.

Little Russel Heater was taken worse the first of the week, a bad sore having formed on his leg.

The pupils are busy preparing for the state examinations which will be taken Thursday and Friday of this week.

Rae Langworthy has been retained as principal for another year. The primary teacher has not yet been chosen.

The frost of last Friday night will damage the black cap crop considerably. In some localities in the valley, the yield will not be more than half of what it would have been.

Vivian Hadley and Rae Langworthy attended the baseball game at Chehalis Center Saturday and watched the latter beat Fernwood in an exciting ten-inning game by the score of 6-5.

The strawberries do not come in as fast as anticipated, and Mr. Carlisle was forced to spend several hours Monday cancelling orders temporarily. Unless there is a rain soon, the strawberry yield will be far below normal.

Mrs. Joe Ego died Saturday afternoon from enlarged spleen after a long illness. She was taken suddenly worse Thursday and grew slowly weaker till the end came. The funeral was held Monday afternoon. We extend our most heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

The May Day Exercises on April 30 were a success in every way except the weather. It was necessary to postpone the program from 10 to 10:30, and hold the last part of it in the auditorium, because of rain. After the crowning of Queen Verle, there was a program consisting of several musical numbers, May-pole winding, drills, etc. The "Rainbow Drill" by seven girls deserves especial mention, as does also the May-pole winding by 14 little girls, and a vocal solo by Mrs. David. At noon a sumptuous dinner was served cafeteria by the ladies of the community. The afternoon was devoted to athletics. In a six-inning game Rex was defeated by the Springbrook school team, but Rex "came back" strong in the girls basketball game, winning by a score of 4-2. The last event was a baseball game between Springbrook and Willamette clubs, in which the former won 5-1. Garland allowed the town lads one lone hit, and fanning 19, holding them scoreless and hitless for 8 innings. Mills of W. A. A. C. pitched good enough ball to win the average game, fanning 12, and allowing 7 hits, but the hitting and fielding behind him was very poor. The game was marred by the constant "beefing" of a few of the visitors.

Lots of men have made a serious mistake when they, leaving off pushing discovered they hadn't a pull.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Vinton, of McMinnville, visited with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Wood last Sunday. In the afternoon they called on N. P. Nelson and family.

CHEHALEM CENTER

Rev. Lindley A. Wells held meeting at the church Thursday. Geo. Hodges returned home Monday after spending some time at Falls City.

The pie social and spelling contest at the school house Saturday evening was a success socially but not very successfully financially.

A large number of folks from far and near attended the funeral of Mrs. Emma Ego Monday. The sorrowing family have the sympathy of their many friends.

President Levi T. Pennington, of Pacific College, gave an address at the church Sunday evening which was highly appreciated by all. Miss Edith Minchin will deliver the sermon next Sunday morning.

The W. C. T. U. held their meeting last month at the home of Mrs. A. V. Hendrickson. A number of the ladies were present. After a very interesting business meeting was over, the hostess served delicious refreshments during the social hour. The next meeting will occur at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Meyer about May 19. There will be a carpet tacking at that meeting.

Quite a little excitement prevails in the community as a cougar or panther is roaming at will and feasting on L. W. Hall's goats and other young animals belonging to the farmers. It followed Lineas Christenson home last Sunday evening as the large cat-like tracks was plainly seen in the dust in front of his home and in front of the school house. The Athletic Club gave it chase Monday evening but gave it up when darkness came on.
