$1.50 Per Year in Advance

THURSDAY, APRIL 13, 1916

Fruit trees of all kinds are blooming to the tips of the limbs, and the prospects were never better for a full crop.

The fellows who are boosting Teddy as a proposed harmony candidate, might do well to see one Wm. Barnes, of New York.

Prof. Alexander Hull, who is spending a good deal of his time writing short stories for magazines, has a story in Pearson's for May entitled, "The Counterstroke."

The announcement of C. B. Moores as a candidate for secretary of state sounds good to one who believes that the man nominated by the republican party at the primary should be a republican.

Regarding the disposition of the cannery, there is little to report this week. There are parties here making a careful canvass of the situation, and there is some hope for something definite to report in the near future.

Two newspaper publishers whom we have heard making complaint that they were not making any money, appear to have peculiar ideas as to how best to meet the financial problem. One has been cutting the price of his paper to a dollar a year and the other has advertised that he will accept subscriptions at a price as low as fifty cents a year. With the price of print paper and all other kinds of printer's stock going up by leaps and bounds, the fellows who expect to stay in the game will naturally figure on a raise in prices, rather than to adopt the suicide route of price cutting.

It is quite a common thing to hear the suggestion made that our representatives to the legislature should be men who "will do something," but according to our way of thinking, after many years' observation, about the most valuable qualifications a member of the legislature can have is a keen perception and ability to scent the colored gentleman in the wood pile, bravery enough to sound the alarm, and thus be able to prevent a lot of things being done. There is never any dearth of fellows who go to Salem fully prepared to "do things" at our legislative sessions, and it takes a wide-awake man who has rubbed up against the world and who knows the game, to get a line on their schemes and be able to block them. A few years ago a good, honest farmer of average intelligence and pretty well informed, who represented Yamhill county in the legislature, said to the writer in telling of his experiences at Salem, that he soon found himself all out of place in his new surroundings and in trying to cope with men who knew the ropes and were there to work them. By the end of the session and after it was too late, he said he began to get his eyes open to the situation, but came home fully convinced that the average man taken from the farm, no difference how honest he might be nor what his good intentions were, was but poorly fitted to meet the situation and do for his constituents what was expected of him when he was elected, and what he might fondly hope to do on leaving his quiet home and buying a ticket for the capital city.

HUGHES SENTIMENT GROWS.

The growing and spreading sentiment for the nomination of Justice Hughes for president is one of the most remarkable political phenomena in a generation says the Globe Democrat. Without one word of encouragement from him and without an organized propaganda, the Hughes sentiment waxes in every section. The Literary Digest recently conducted a poll of the publican editors of the country, which showed an overwhelming sentiment for Hughes. The Nation polled its readers in nearly all the states, with the same general result. A poll of the recent Republican State Convention of Kansas revealed that more than half of the 853 delegates were for Hughes, while only 77 were for Col. Roosevelt, long a favorite in the Sunflower State. The Boston Transcript has polled the Republican members of the Massachusetts Legislature, finding that 75 of the 140 questioned were for Hughes. It should be borne in mind that the governor and both United States senators in Massachusetts have been "mentioned" for the nomination and all three had friends. There were also some strong Roosevelt members, chosen under a fusion arrangement, but only 23 signified their preference for the colonel. In hundreds of county and many congressional conventions the mention of the name of Hughes has brought tremendous applause.

The movement is genuinely spontaneous. There have been other "spontaneous" movements that were carefully fostered by political walking delegates. But the Hughes sentiment is among the people. There are some strong political influences opposing Hughes, with more or less frankness as to motives. There are several political somnambulists and somnolists who are busy in the primaries, but it is a matter of common knowledge that if Justice Hughes signified a willingness to accept the nomination the air would be filled with the noise of the explosion of boomlets. No matter what the result of the first ballots under the weird primary laws, when the Chicago convention gets down to real business, the delegates will be found for Hughes. As for the justice himself, he should remember what John Hay said, when offered the state portfolio, when he was weary and broken in health: "I accepted it because it is an office that one can hardly refuse."

Those present were Misses Ruth Kane, Dorothy Dean, Edith Sanderman, Adelia Ackerman, Rosie Schaad, Gladys Garland, Edna Doree, Ethel Brown, Margaret Cordier and Mrs. Vera Nelson.

The April meeting of the Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. John Winters. Owing to the busy time of year, the gathering was smaller than usual, but what was lacking in numbers was made up in enthusiasm. The topic of "Discipline and Punishment" was handled in a capable manner by Mrs. A. H. Dean and Mrs. Jack Sawyer, who evidently spoke from volumes of experience. A delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Winters, assisted by her daughter Joanna. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Perry Miller's.

Word was received Monday by N. L. Wiley that his nephew, Del Winters, had accidentally shot himself while out hunting, dying almost immediately. He leaves a young wife and several children. Besides being related to Mr. Wiley he has a brother, Oscar Winters, and sister, Mrs. R. Bris-
