THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1916

Little wonder that the weather was cool Tuesday, with the Wisconsin people holding their annual picnic.

From now on to the November election let the slogan be, "Vote 315 X No and kill the brewery amendment."

We again call the attention of the city council to the luxuriant growth of grass and weeds on Hancock street between Center and Meridian. Why should we go to the heavy expense of paving streets and then allow the effect to be marred by such a wilderness of growth on side streets.

It is evident that the Southern Pacific has faith in the future for railroading on the Coast. The company is planning to build in San Francisco the largest office building west of Chicago. It will be 275x209 feet, ten stories high and will cost more than one and three-quarter million dollars.

Our neighbors over in Folk county are starting a recall movement against County Judge John B. Teal and Commissioner Clyde Becktt. We think the cases are extremely rare where a recall is justified. Better put up with the official until his time is out than to arouse the ill-feeling that such a move engenders.

Our pay up call published two weeks ago is bringing in very gratifying results and we hope to hear from a number of others very shortly. A few dollars coming in from various sources when put together helps very materially in meeting the expense account, which is heavy now, with the doubling up of prices on printer's stock.

Attorney C. E. S. Wood, who is fathering the measure proposed for again opening the doors of the breweries in Oregon, makes his strongest plea for "nursing mothers." Says they need beer, and that it ought to be easily accessible for them. Well, well. Mother Wood must have had plenty of it when she was nursing kiddie, C. E. S., and evidently it went to his head.

In a ride over Hood River valley a few days ago, by the grace of A. D. Moe, editor and publisher of the Glacier, we saw many fine orchards well loaded with apples. The older orchards are not being cultivated through the summer season as they once were, as it has been found that a clover crop or some other soiling crop grown occasionally in the orchard gives better results. We noted also that crushed rock for macadamizing the roads is being passed up and gravel used instead. The Hood Riverite who don't drive an auto is now almost in the minority and they have found that rock macadam is not the thing for auto travel. Although Evangelist Billy Sunday has a summer home out in the valley, it is an up-and-down life they all lead in that county. Wherever you go it is either uphill or downhill, but they do some going, and the fellow who don't stand up "four square" and boost for Hood River is invited instant to move on, and we admire the spirit—if there is any being on earth who deserves a knocking it is the knocker, and he ought to be made to move on. But the "absent treatment" administered so effectively by Hood River is sometimes rather trying, to say the least, to the receiving stations, for the knockers won't die, decently, and consequently they must lodge somewhere. "Hood River Smith," the grand old man who did the pioneer work in putting the punch into the Hood River spirit by locating there forty years ago and beginning apple growing, still walks the streets with form erect, despite his advanced years, and delights to meet old friends and tell them of the glories of his "Beulah Land" orchard.
