$1.50 Per Year in Advance

THURSDAY, AUGUST 17, 1916

The hot air excuse of leaving the valley and going to the seashore to escape the heat is a lame one this season, with morning and evening fires adding comfort to the sitting room.

The dog-days season is at hand, but there is little in the weather conditions to indicate it. In fact with the cool mornings and occasional fog in the early hours it seems more like the late Fall season.

The skill exhibited by J. G. Eckman, editor of the Telephone Register, in pitching horse shoes at the Nebraska-Kansas picnic Tuesday, gave grounds for the suspicion that when a lad back in the Sunflower State he may have practiced in the back lot behind the barn on Sunday afternoons, when his father was away preaching to degenerate sinners.

When Kitchener said at the outbreak of the European war that the fray would probably not be over for three years it looked like a long time for such a conflict to last, with men and munitions being sacrificed with a prodigality never before heard of in the history of the world, but the second year has already passed and the end seems to be far in the distance. Kitchener has since gone the way of some millions of others and the greed of the war god is not yet appeased.

R. J. Moore, member of the Democratic State Central Committee, made the bold assertion to the Graphic a few days ago that he believed that if the presidential election could be held soon, Wilson would carry every state except Utah and Vermont, but he went to Portland Wednesday and since he had not returned up to the time of going to press there is a fear among his friends that he may have been so attracted to Mr. Hughes that he has followed him away to California.

The time was when it was thought that hardly any young fellow got too trifling to be accepted as a recruit in the regular army, and in fact few were refused admittance, except for pronounced physical disability. Apparently it is different now. A recruiting officer who was in town Monday said he was not looking for bums, and that fellows in this class would not be accepted. Efficiency seems to be the word these days all along the line, though some fellows are slow to appreciate the fact.

By invitation of O. C. Leiter, president of the Portland Press Club, the writer had the pleasure of attending the reception tendered to Charles E. Hughes, republican candidate for president, at the club rooms on Wednesday afternoon. He spoke for ten minutes in a most happy vein, and it was apparent that he made a very favorable impression on those present, irrespective of their political affiliations. Mr. Hughes has a most pleasing personality, he is easy to meet and will readily make friends wherever he is privileged to mingle with the people.

District Judge Jones is to be commended when he says that in the future a fine of $50 will be the penalty for auto speeders on the Columbia Highway who may be brought before him for sentence. The speeder on a straight stretch of road is a menace to the public, and when he turns on the gas for a run over this Highway that has many sharp curves around dangerous points, he shows that he regards not the safety and rights of others, and he deserves to pay the price when haled into court.

FOOLING MARK TWAIN.

An Autograph Joke That Was Sprung Upon the Humorist.

George W. Cable had been giving readings from his wonderful Creole stories and had visited Mark Twain in Hartford. While there he had been taken down with the mumps, and it was during his convalescence that the plan for a combined reading tour had been made. This was early in the year; the tour was to begin in the autumn. Cable, having quite recovered in the meantime, conceived a plan to repay Mark Twain's hospitality. It was to be an April fool—a great complimentary joke. A few days before the first of the month he had a "private and confidential" circular letter printed and mailed it to 150 of Mark Twain's friends and admirers in Boston, New York and elsewhere asking that they send the humorist a letter to arrive April 1 requesting his autograph.

It would seem that each one receiving this letter must have responded to it, for on the morning of April 1 an immense pile of letters was unloaded on Mark Twain's table. He did not know what to make of it, and Mrs. Clemens, who was party to the joke, stily watched results. They were the most absurd requests for autographs ever written. He was fooled and mystified at first, then, realizing the nature and magnitude of the joke, he entered into it fully—delighted, of course, for it was really a fine compliment.

Some of the letters asked for autographs by the yard, some by the pound. Some commanded him to sit down and copy a few chapters from "The Innocents Abroad." Others asked that his autograph be attached to a check. John Hay requested that he copy a hymn, a few hundred lines of Young's "Night Thoughts," etc., and added: "I want my boy to form a taste for serious and elevated poetry, and it will add considerable commercial value to have it in your handwriting."

Altogether the reading of the letters gave Mark Twain a delightful day.—Albert Blaslow Paine in St. Nicholas.

SLEEPING NEAR DEATH.

Naps That Might Have Landed Them Who Took Them in Eternity.

A short time ago a man was discovered in his lunch hour fast asleep on a plank. His arms were hanging down, one on each side of the board, which was about a foot wide. He was snoring gloriously and quite careless, whether awake or asleep, that if he turned over for greater comfort he would "tumble out of bed" 120 feet, for that plank was part of the scaffolding erected for the repair of a church spire!

A similar disregard for danger was reported lately during the erection of some electrical works. One of the men engaged on the tall chimney, mistaking his mate at the lunch hour, went up the half finished chimney to find him. He discovered him fast asleep on a narrow ledge of brick inside the shaft, a fall from which meant a drop of eighty feet.

On one occasion a circus arrived in a certain town not a hundred miles from London at an early hour after a long journey and a performance the previous night. As a consequence few of the company got any sleep. That day there was the usual procession and the afternoon performance. The lion tamer had had a very rough time because of the illness of one of his beasts.

The evening performance arrived, and this man had to pretend to go to sleep with his head on the body of a couchant lion, finishing up the performance by springing up and putting his head in another lion's mouth.

But when the jumping up time came a gentle snore was heard. The man was fast asleep with his head pillowed on a lion—London Globe.

Military Rifles Remodeled.

Nations with large armies were often loath to discard their old weapons and frequently altered existing models to bring them up to date. Thus we note that England converted her old muzzle loading Enfields in 1864 and 1866 to use the Snider action with a metallic cartridge case. In 1868 Austria adopted the Mannlicher .433 caliber with a straight pull bolt action and a box magazine, loading from a steel clip. Two years later the caliber was reduced to .315, using black powder. The sights of these rifles were regraduated in 1890 on the adoption of smokeless powder.—Onting.
