THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1917

The bone dry law is just beginning to soak in, so to speak.

The weather man appears to have lost his grip on Jupiter Pluvius. Here we are short on rainfall about a dozen inches.

Attendees at Gladstone Chautauqua who have in the past sat under the "drippings of the sanctuary" and the drippings of the leaky roof, as well, during heavy showers, will be glad to know that a new amphitheater is to be built this season at a cost of $5,000.

The Branson-Booth murder trial has been set for Monday, February 26, by Judge Belt at McMinnville, although there had been talk of a change of venue to Dallas. Since this case has been tried twice already in this county it will not be an easy matter to find a jury.

As usual at about this stage of the proceedings of the legislature there is talk of extending the session beyond the forty days, but talk will be all it will amount to. At the end of the forty days the meagre pay that is allowed the members will stop and they will all be glad to get back home.

The losing of Mrs. Alice Longworth's cigarette case in a restaurant a few days ago was so heart-rending that the incident was flashed over the country in the news dispatches. Alice, you know, is a daughter of the gentleman who spent a lot of time a few years ago telling how families should be brought up. She took Nick for better or for worse, and now she takes nicotine.

It is said that over at Vancouver a number of ministers have their shingles out on prominent streets, with a view of catching the eyes of prospective grooms who go from the Oregon side to procure marriage licenses, in order to avoid the physical examination that our state law requires. A case of pretty hard picking, we should say, and possibly it may be difficult for St. Peter to distinguish between the one who ministers and those ministered to in such instances—a question of what shall the harvest be in either case.

The editor of the Graphic was in Seattle last Saturday and consequently has only a second hand report of the growers meeting held at Odd Fellows hall. Prof. Rusek of O. A. C. was in attendance in the forenoon and made a talk on soils in this section that was instructive and greatly appreciated. There being no outside speaker for the afternoon the time was taken up in an exchange of views and experiences of growers, the range covering everything from berry growing to the extermination of moles and gophers. In this way much valuable information was imparted and so interested did the participants become that the meeting held until near four o'clock.

WHERE ARE WE DRIFTING?

"President Wilson broke another precedent today when he walked over to the treasury department from the White House to see Secretary McAdoo in his private office."

The above was put on the wires last week and carried to the people of the country through the newspapers.

It appears to us this was a very indiscreet action on the president's part.

First he should have had the archives searched to determine whether or not Jackson or Lincoln ever did such a two-block hike, and if not, he should have called a meeting of the cabinet and had the proposed excursion thoroughly discussed.

This breaking of precedents is raising the devil with our country. A president has no moral right to do a stunt like this unless some president had done it before him. He had no business to "walk over to the treasury department" unless George Washington or Grover Cleveland had gone that way before him. He should be impeached.—Benton Co. Courier.

DEER MAKES FAMILY PET

L. L. Loban, who lives in the foot hills west of McMinnville, has a tame deer as a pet, and his children are fond of the swift-footed animal for it is gentle and playful but docile.

When but a few days old, the fawn strayed from its mother, and Mr. Loban found it caught between the dead limbs of a fallen tree. He captured it and saved the fawn's life. It was so young that with comparatively little coaxing it made the family cow its foster-mother and for a time sucked the gentle bovine.

The fawn grew and waxed strong into a buck and now it is two years old, but the same gentleness prevails in its temperament as in the days of its youth. It is fond of children and likes to play. It comes to the door of the house and rattles the knob with its head that the door may be opened; it goes to the window to see if the members of the family are in. It is on friendly terms with the dogs on the ranch and the buck is much tamer than those in the city park zoo.—News Reporter.

PACIFIC COLLEGE

Last Saturday the basket ball team was defeated by the fast O. A. C. team at Corvallis. The Varsity could not get its teamwork to going and was defeated by the decisive score of 42 to 9. This gives each team one game but a third game cannot be arranged as neither team's schedule will permit.

President Pennington and E. H. Woodward were in and around Seattle last week end in the interests of the college.

With the opening of the new semester a change has been made in the schedule. This semester classes will begin at 8:15 a. m. and close at 4 p. m., with seven fifty-minute classes. There are a good many new students enrolled and several old students who have not been in school the past semester, bringing the enrollment up to 104.

Two more hard games will complete the basket ball season. Pacific University will be seen in action here on February 16, and there will be a special train to McMinnville on the night of February 23 when the Varsity plays the "Mac" quintet in their pavillion. As soon as the weather permits after the basket ball season the base ball and tennis men will begin to get into shape. Prospects are good for a winning tennis team and better than ever for a championship nine on the diamond.

There were two social affairs last week. The fourth year academy class held a party on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Hodgkin, and Miss McCracken entertained her domestic science girls that afternoon at the Woodward home.

COWARDS IN DAYLIGHT.

But the Great Eagle Owls Are Heroes Fighters by Night.

There are about 200 kinds of owls. Some are tiny owls, some are big eagle owls, twenty-eight inches in length, very fierce and strong, ready to attack a man who goes near, able to kill fawns and large game birds and to do battle with the golden eagle. The courage of one of these golden owls deserts it in the daytime, and then little birds, led by a crow, may find it and drive it into the open and tease and worry it without danger to themselves. But, when night comes and the bird can see, only a mighty eagle dare do battle with it.

The hawk owl is one of the owls which work by day. It is big and strong and savage. There are owls with great ear tufts of feathers and owls with none at all. Some are snowy white; others are mottled. Some live in holes in the ground with prairie dogs and such animals; some make burrows for themselves. But most owls live in hollow trees or in church bellies or other high towers. Among so many kinds of owls there are some, of course, that do harm, but most of them do more good for men than evil.—Exchange.

Chinese Locksmiths.

The earliest locks known to man were of Chinese make. Although it is impossible to tell the exact date of those still extant, they are wonderfully well made and as strong as any manufactured in Europe up to the middle of the eighteenth century. The Chinese locksmith of today uses exactly the same kind of tools that his forefathers had, for they are very simple and primitive. He carries all his implements in two cabinets, sitting on one and working at the other. When he has finished all the work available in one neighborhood he fastens the two cabinets to a bamboo rod and slings it over his shoulder. He tramps through the towns burdened in this way and stops when he is called, much as a scissors grinder or umbrella mender does in our country. —Wide World Magazine.
