LEARN TO LIKE GOOD MUSIC

Soldiers in Paris Lose Their Fancy for Ragtime by Frequent Attendance at Opera.

It is curious to think that the government is sending American soldiers to Europe to get a musical education, according to Samuel Lelouche, lance corporal of the Three Hundred and Twenty-eighth infantry, army of France, who is in New York on sick leave, says the New York Herald.

The orchestra had just played the overture from "I Pagliacci," and the corporal had listened to it with rapt attention.

"Ah, but I love that kind of music," he said. "I never cared for it much before I left my home in West Haven, Conn., about three years ago and joined the French army, but there in France I heard nothing else. I grew to love fine music, and now I detest the other kind—ragtime and all that sort of thing. It will be so with the American soldiers in France. You see, they admit the American soldiers free to the opera there, and they soon learn to love it. I saw how it was before I left Paris. The musical taste of the boys was being improved rapidly, and the longer they stay over there the more critical they will become, so that eventually it will help music in this country when they get back to their homes, for they will insist upon having what is good."

PART OF TEMPLE OF SOLOMON

"Wall of Wailing" Revered by Pilgrim Jews Who Mourn for Departed Glories of Judah.

More than fifty years ago Col. Charles Warren, English archeologist, attempted excavations above the "Wall of Wailing," which is undoubtedly part of the original Temple of Solomon and revered by pilgrim Jews who weep and mourn there for the departed glories of Judah. He proved before he was stopped in his work that the original level of the valley just outside of that wall was at least eighty-eight feet below the present level.

Passing down this valley, relates the Chicago Examiner, are some tombs still above ground, but not thoroughly explored, which have been notable to all pilgrims. There is the so-called tomb of Absalom, executed by the Jews as they pass, and behind it is an excavated sepulchral chamber, called that of Jehosaphat. It is held by tradition that in this area are the tombs of Isaiah the Prophet, and King Hezekiah, and nearby are the tombs of the Prophet Zechariah and of King Uzziah.

FLAG HAS 432 STARS.

A service flag, 17 feet by 12 feet, having a red border and 432 blue stars on a white field, has been displayed on the wall facing the main entrance of the war department building, as a notice to the world of the number of its employees who had joined the fighting forces of the country since the declaration of war against Germany in April.

MONEY A CHEAP GIFT.

"He doesn't seem to complain about having to pay war taxes."

"No. He says he knows a young fellow who lost his arm in battle and he doesn't think he'll ever be able to give money enough to feel his equal."

OPTIMISM.

"Everything costs more."
"Yes. And the situation is not without its advantage. I can remember when it was impossible to eat all the peanuts they gave you for a nickel without making yourself sick."

POOR DIPLOMACY.

"I shall never forgive my husband for his actions last night."
"What did he do?"
"Why, he let me dance with everybody at the reception without protesting."

TERRIBLE, TERRIBLE.

"The demands for money nowadays are simply enormous."
"Terrible, terrible! Here's the government wanting $2,000,000,000, and only this morning Jones asked me to lend him a V."

MAIN RESULT.

"I heard Billy had a bad smash-up when he took his fiancée out in his automobile for a joy ride."
"Yes; even the engagement was broken."

On request of some of the interested residents of the district an inquiry concerning the nutritive value of white shorts or middlings for bread was addressed to the station chemist at the Oregon Agricultural College. After giving the chemical analysis of both patent flour and shorts, he says: "You will note that the shorts contain a little more protein (albuminous matter) and a little less carbohydrates. Their relative values are some different but not widely different," and he concludes his remarks with: "When put in a palatable form it could be used as a food and would be quite comparable to bread made from ordinary flour in nutritive value."
