SI DRAFT SAYS

There ain't no headin'-in place these days, there's somethin' doin' on the other side of the ocean, and there's somethin' doin' here at home. If you can't find nothin' else to do to boost the war, you can be figurin' out recipes for "wheatless bread" and handin' them out to the ladies. Every feller of us has got to get down to business on this here "war proposition" and help a little wherever we can—do any old thing but "holer"—there ain't none of us over here got any holler comin'. There may be some little inconveniences we run up against occasionally but we ain't seen no real hardships at all, and every feller that's filled clear to the eyebrows with patriotic red blood, jest keeps his mouth shut and saws wood—no matter if he does have to pay a little more for substitutes than he does for wheat flour. No matter if labor is scarce. No matter if we do have to get up an hour earlier in the morning and go to bed an hour later at night—and a lot of other little things.

All these things are being regulated jest as fast as we can get to 'em, but they're really nothin' to what people in the "warzone" hev to put up with. Some day you may be wantin' to make a hog pen and you'll go in to the boys there at "The Big Hardware Store" and you'll say, "dish me up a quarter's worth of 20 penny spikes," they're jest as likely as not to say, "I'm sorry but there's nothin' doin' today, Bill, we can't get any more nails till the war is over."

Imagine a big up-to-date hardware store like that without any nails to sell—course that ain't happened yet but we'll probably hev to get along without a lot more things we're used to havin', before this thing is over that we need worse than nails. Right today the boys tell me that about one-third of the stuff they order is cancelled off their invoices, as jobbers are getting short of goods, and factories are over-run with orders, or can't get raw materials to make the goods. So you see if you really need stuff, now is the time to get it, while the gettin' is good—and talk about "war prices," they tell me we ain't really seen any such thing yet. On most lines it will not be a question of price, jest a question of gettin' the goods. Of course that kind of stuff ain't very pleasant fer a feller in bizness, but at that you don't hear the boys hollerin' any—they jest keep a smilin' and doin' their level best to get goods fer us fellers at the very best prices that conditions will permit.

A lot of the people nowadays instead of sellin' their old Fords and gettin' new ones are buyin' a little Acme Quality Auto Finish and come out with the old ones lookin' like new. It sure pays to paint up the old stuff these days and no matter what you need to paint whether it's outside or in, it will pay you to hev a little chat with the "Paint Man" at Larkin-Prince Hardware Co.—he'll sell you the right kind of dope for the job. I jest got some repairs fer my old binder. I tell you it wont pay us farmers to wait till the last minute for repairs this year, like we generally do as things are different nowadays; and binder twine—I want to be sure to get it so I told the boys I wanted 50 pounds and jest to save it for me till I need it. They guarantee the price to be right and accordin' to what Uncle Sam says about it. Them Aluminum specials they are pullin' off every week or so are worth lookin' into if you need cookin' utensils; some good special in their window all the time.

I've found out by experience that Larkin-Prince Hardware Co. know their business and can take care of my needs in their line when we ain't got war, and I'm glad to trust my business to them in war times, when prices, etc., are mighty uncertain, 'cause these are days when it pays to hev some place to trade where you can depend on the feller on the other side of the counter.

Note from Bill the Plumber

Owing to the high cost of material and the decline of the plumbing business, I can't afford to keep anyone in my shop to answer calls, but I will wait on my patrons to the best of my ability until business conditions change and I can again afford to employ help.

Usually I can be called by phone, morning, noon and night and I always wake up good natured. Don't look on plumbing as a luxury. It is a necessity for the health of your family.

Yours for Service,
Bill the Plumber.
