Mr. and Mrs. Harold Adams are here from Seattle on a visit at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Christenson. Mr. Adams is now an ensign in the Navy.

Mrs. Jane Rittenhouse, who is making her home with her daughter, Mrs. W. E. Thomas, on the farm near Junction City, came Wednesday evening for a visit with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Mills, the former an uncle of Rev. Fred E. Carter, who were on their way to Southern California, stopped over here last Saturday for a short visit with the Carter family.

The Graphic has been asked to say for the Boy Scouts that if anyone has a picture or a chair they would be willing to donate for fitting up their rooms on First street the favor will be appreciated. Anything donated may be left at the Newberg Feed Store which is next door to the rooms.

Mrs. C. H. Christenson, who was here last week visiting her sister, Mrs. Mary E. Bankson, left for her home at Frances, Washington, on Monday, expecting to stop over in Portland for a visit with her daughters. Mrs. Bankson is improving and her many friends hope she may be out again soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack Kaufman, who spent several weeks visiting their son, Riley, at Alhambra, and their daughter, Mrs. J. Huber Haworth, at Whittier, California, arrived home on Thursday evening of last week. They say they had a very pleasant trip and enjoyed what they saw thoroughly, but they are appreciating Oregon's natural greenery since their return.

Alfred Smith, who learned the harness maker's trade in Chris Held's shop where he worked for several years, stopped over here the first of the week when on his way to Pueblo, Colorado, to take a position in a shop. During the rush for war supplies when Canada first entered the fray he held a responsible position in a big shop at Calgary where he had charge of a number of men.

D. J. Gilbert and his son-in-law, Lee Blissett, have gone into partnership in the milk goat industry and for the purpose of increasing their herd have sent to a Southern California breeder for a shipment of 25 head which they expect to receive soon. They say they receive so many letters of inquiry for information regarding stock it is difficult to keep up with the correspondence.

ANNUAL MEETING OF P. E. O.

One more star was added Monday evening to Chapter "L" of the P. E. O. Sisterhood of Newberg, when Mrs. A. H. Deon was introduced as a new member.

This being the date for the annual meeting of the order the ladies were honored in having with them Miss Margaret Copeland, of Portland, state organizer for Oregon. Miss Copeland complimented Chapter "L" for the good work of the past year and the high ideals of fraternity held by the order as exemplified by the earnest work and good deeds accomplished.

At the close of the business session, the honors of the order were extended the "B. I. L. s.", they being the honorary members of the sterner sex, masculine gender, who were most pleasantly entertained with musical selections by Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Boyes, good fellowship, games and a most sumptuous repast until the "tiny little hours" suggested adjournment. As is the custom of P. E. O. to hold all meetings in the homes of members, this pleasure was conferred on Mrs. Francis A. Morris, at whose home on College street, the meeting was held.

Decorations, flowers of P. E. O. colors. Hostesses, all the ladies, than whom none could be more gracious. A B. I. L.

FORTUNES OF PRESIDENTS

The estate of $500,000 left by Theodore Roosevelt is a very moderate fortune by New York standards, but for a president one of unusual size. It ranks Mr. Roosevelt indeed as probably the country's richest chief executive since Washington, and the fact has a suggestive interest. Many a ruler of a petty republic has become a multimillionaire, but no millionaire has ever been president of the world's greatest and richest republic, and this notwithstanding the altered scale of personal wealth under which the comparative magnitude of an accumulation of $1,000,000 has decreased.

The Roosevelt fortune was different, moreover, in being mainly an inherited fortune. Its possessor may have added to it in his lifetime, but, as in the case of other presidents, most of his personal earnings in a period of 40 years of public life were absorbed in the support of his family. No other president has ever enjoyed such advantages of remunerative publicity as Mr. Roosevelt, and besides his salary from official positions his income from his books and editorial work must have been large. Yet it is a fair inference that if these had been the sole sources of his support he would have died a poor man, as Cleveland did, and also most of their predecessors in the White House.

This has been the common financial fate of presidents, and the example of Mr. Roosevelt probably merely proves the rule that the office of president is not economically productive in any logical proportion to its exalted state and onerous political qualifications.—New York World.

A SEASON OF RELIEF

"You always seem to enjoy the holidays."

"I do," answered Senator Sorghum. "During the holidays the people look to Santa Claus or to one another for their gifts instead of depending on political influence."—Washington Star.
