Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A. meeting of Wednesday, April 23, was a "newspaper meeting." The periodical represented was one dealing with missionary activities. Several of the girls were prepared to give short talks on such subjects as "Egypt and the Gospel," "Sky Pilot to the San Blas." These "write-ups" were very interesting but the shortness of the period did not admit of a complete perusal of the magazine.

FIRST YEAR CLASS GIVES PARTY

Friday evening, April 25, the first year class of the academy entertained the second year class. The party was held at the home of Dr. Hester. Music and many novel games entertained the company.

Horace Terrell and Gerald Pearson set the crowd laughing and carried off the prize in the game of "progressive conversation" by their discussion of pigs. A suit case race got everyone going; and showed the originality of some of the players. Fortunes were told, and jello, wafers and peanuts were served as refreshments. Before the crowd broke up a flashlight picture was secured.

WILLIS BEEDE AT COLLEGE

On Friday of last week, Willis Beede, Field Secretary of the American Friends Board of Foreign Missions, was at the college. He gave a talk during the chapel hour, and spent the rest of the day in private interviews with the students.

The substance of his talk in chapel is as follows: The re-construction work following the war is of the utmost importance, but that we re-construct the world's ideals is even more necessary. There are three ideals that we must give to the world. First, we should look toward the ideal of internationalism. The world is growing smaller; we of America have opportunities; we must place America at the disposal of the world for good. The next ideal is expressed in the beatitudes: "Blessed are the peacemakers." We must bring the world to loathe war. The third ideal is the ideal of Love. Christ lived the life of love, and today He has the allegiance of more men than anyone in history.

Mr. Beede said that we must give these ideals to the world. We can do this by living them ourselves.

FROM BEGINNING OF TIME

Origin of Atmosphere Goes Back to Events Occurring Tens of Millions of Years Ago.

If we recall the teaching of geology and astronomy, telling us how the earth was once too hot to sustain life, we shall see that the mixture of gases that covers the solid surface of the earth, and that we familiarly call air, must have had a very interesting history. According to one widely accepted theory of the earth's origin, all that we know now as the solid earth, and all the liquid matter that now fills the ocean beds was once gaseous. The gases of the atmosphere are simply composed of these particular elements which are gaseous at the present temperature of the earth's surface, which have not entered into complete combination with the solid matter of the earth's crust, and which have not been whisked away into space by centrifugal force, this being the fate that is supposed to have befallen the former atmosphere of the moon, and some of the lighter constituents of our own atmosphere. In the past when the earth's temperature was much higher, and when many other conditions were different, it is more than probable, for instance, that, long before man appeared, the proportion of carbon dioxide in the air was much higher than at present. This would account for the extreme luxuriance of vegetation, to which every lump of coal bears witness, the carbonic acid of the air being one of the most important constituents of the food of plants. Again, it is quite certain that, at a very much more remote period, which must certainly date back tens of millions of years, the temperature of the earth's surface was so hot that water could not occur in its liquid form. At that time one of the most important and abundant constituents of the earth's atmosphere was gaseous water, or water vapor.

Doing Nicely.

"I hear you have a new lady clerk."
"Yep."
"How is she doing in the office?"
"Doing very well. Half the clerks seem to be willing to do her work for her."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

LAUGHED AT OWN CARICATURE

Charles Dickens Has Been Called Vain, but This Story Seems to Prove Otherwise.

The reproduction of a very rare caricature portrait of Dickens appeared in a recent number of Dickensian. William Miller was the author of the portrait, which was advertised for sale by F. G. Kitton, more than twenty years ago, for insertion in his book, "Charles Dickens by Pen and Pencil," says Christian Science Monitor. Dickens first saw the portrait in question when walking along Piccadilly with Disraeli one day. He was vastly amused, and, entering the shop, bought several copies, one of which was sent to the Hon. Mrs. Richard Watson at Rockingham. In a letter written from Gad's Hill place he says: "I hope you may have seen a large-headed photograph with little legs representing the undersigned. It has just sprung up so abundantly in all the shops that I am ashamed to go about town looking in at the picture windows, which is my delight. It seems to be extraordinarily ludicrous and a better likeness than the portrait done in earnest. It made me laugh when I first came upon it, until I shook again, in open, sunlighted Piccadilly."

St. Brice and Football.

In November is the festival of St. Brice, who may be called the patron saint of football players, not alone because his feast day comes during the season of the gridiron game, but for quite another reason. St. Brice's day was long generally observed in England, and in the year 1002 the celebration took the form of a general massacre of the Danes. It was on that day, according to tradition, that the English game of football was invented, with the head of a Dane as the ball. St. Brice, of course, was not responsible for either the massacre or the football game, having died some six centuries before. He was a bishop of Tours and lived in the fifth century.

GRANT REFUSED TO ANSWER

When President, He Declined to Tell House Where He Had Been During Absence.

During President Grant's administration a movement was started to call Grant to account for having been absent from Washington. The house asked him by resolution to inform it what official acts he had performed while away, says an exchange. The hero of Appomattox replied:

"I freely inform the house that from the time of my entrance upon my office, I have been in the habit, as were all of my predecessors, of absenting myself at times from the seat of government, and that during such absences I did not neglect or forego the obligations or duties of my office, but continued to discharge all of the executive offices, acts and duties which were required of me as president of the United States. I am not aware that a failure occurred in any one instance of my exercising the functions and powers of my offices in every case requiring their discharge, or of my exercising all necessary executive acts in whatever part of the United States I may at the time have been."

Waxing Wooden Dishes.

If wooden dishes are to be waxed to render them impervious, they should be made of a good quality of pine or deal with an even grain, and the inside should be sandpapered quite smooth. Then, says "Camera Craft," while the dish is being made thoroughly warm, to just a little short of the scorching point, using an ordinary kitchen oven, the wax should be melted and heated in a water bath on top of the fire. With both the dish and the wax as hot as can be conveniently handled, the coating is applied with a brush that is not too stiff, as evenly as possible, working in a warm atmosphere. When the fire has gone out the dish may be put back in the oven, so that the wood will absorb more of the wax than it otherwise would, leaving it there until the next morning. With a little practice one is able to make a workmanlike job; and such dishes, particularly for large sizes, make a great saving in expense.
