COULD READILY BELIEVE IT

Stage Driver Quite Willing to Accept "Keeper's" Explanation as He Understood It.

The New Englander uses the word "natural" to describe one who was unfurnished at birth with the usual and indispensable quantity of brains. Prof. Burt G. Wilder, the distinguished zoologist, tells an amusing story that turns on a countryman's mistaking the unfamiliar word "naturalist" for the familiar word "natural."

A few years after his arrival in America, Agassiz was one of a small party of Harvard professors who traversed the White Mountain region in a carriage driven by the countryman. Three of them were vivacious, restless, and on the lookout for specimens. They would call a halt, leap from the vehicle before it stopped, dash over the fields, and return with prizes in their boxes, in their hands and pockets, and even pinned upon their hats. The fourth, Prof. Felton, the brother-in-law of Agassiz, sat quietly in his corner of the carriage reading a favorite Greek author.

When the bewildered driver could stand it no longer he elicited from Felton information that led him to view the behavior of the others with compassionate toleration. At the close of the day he thus conveyed his interpretation to the landkeeper:

"I drove the queerest lot you ever saw. They chattered like monkeys. They wouldn't keep still. They jumped the fences, tore about the fields, and came back with their hats covered with bugs. I asked their keeper what ailed them; he said they was natural, and, judgin' from the way they acted, I should say they was."—Youths' Companion.

MUCH DIFFERENCE IN HUMOR

Brand Highly Thought Of in One Country Is Not Always Appreciated in Others.

When Coleridge said, "No mind is thoroughly well organized that is deficient in the sense of humor," he expressed a conviction that seems common to all civilized men, and makes each nation take pride in its humor and perhaps suspect that other nations enjoy a superiority. In the Tourist, published in Tokyo, a Japanese author, for example, remarks that humor "is indeed the flower of life, and life without it would be as dreary as spring without its blossoms. To illustrate, he translates a number of Japanese anecdotes, "funny stories," as the United States might call them, but one does not smile over them. Neither, on second thought, does one smile over many of the "funny stories" in American magazines and newspapers. Humor which really amuses is everywhere rare and precious, a "flower of life," as the Japanese gentleman poetically puts it, but growing up in company with a great many weeds.—Christian Science Monitor.

The Quaker Bonnet.

I have heard that there is a much technique in the making of the bonnet of the olden pattern for the Friends as there is in the Japanese art of drinking tea. In Ohio there is a section that wears the Quaker garb with the bonnet; there is another in Iowa that still keeps to the characteristic costume; in New York it is a settlement on both sides of Lake Cayuga are Friends who follow the simple, historic fashion; and in Fairhope, Ala., a single tax settlement very largely settled by Friends, are others. Much importance is attached to what is called the "expression" of the bonnet. In the very simplicity there is quite as much room for the manifestation of a particular taste as in the more elaborate millinery of "the world's people." Even to half a hair things must be right. The finished product comes in for a close critical scrutiny at every possible angle. The true Friend places display and self-adornment, and, therefore, she does not care to have it known when a fresh bonnet is bought. That is why each must be the same as the one that preceded it.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

GRATEFUL FOR ONE THING

Soldier Might Have Seen Good in the Changes, but Not in Their Last Greeting.

The man who had volunteered his life for his country came back from the western front. His experience had completely changed him. He came within the sense of an entirely new world.

He went to Washington. He heard the speech of a senator. He saw the lobbyists consorting together. He wanted something, and he waited for it in vain.

"It is the same old crowd," he said. He met the girl he loved—with another fellow. She told him that she still loved him and that the only reason she was with the other fellow was because she was lonesome for him.

"It's the same old girl," he said. He traveled on a railroad. The guard was surly. The train was late. The food was poor. The rate was nearly double.

"It's the same old transportation—only worse," he said.

He reached his home town. He was met by a delegation and a band. Within two weeks four of his neighbors had gotten the best of him, another borrowed half his pay, and at the end of a month when he walked down Main street no one knew him because he was broke.

He went back home. There was a woman waiting for him on the doorstep.

"My baby hero!" she said. And putting his arms around her, he replied: "Same old mother—thank God!"—Thomas I. Masson in New York Evening Post.

GOT THE WRONG IMPRESSION

Grandfather Was Convinced His Pet Had Joined the Church, and Rejoiced Accordingly.

She is a newspaper woman and her grandfather formerly was a local preacher of circuit fame. He is very much interested in her religious state and worries because she does not attend church every Sunday night.

The other evening she went to a church to write a story about the new organ, the purchase of which had been made possible by her stories in the paper. So she took grandfather with her, knowing that while he could not bear much of the services, still he would enjoy being in the church.

At the close of the sermon came a surprise for the newspaper woman. The minister announced: "Miss S., who wrote the stories which brought the money for our organ, is with us tonight and I would like for her to come up in front so that all of us may see her and shake her hand."

Grandfather saw his grandchild advance to the front of the church and also saw the people begin shaking her hand. He had not heard a word the minister had said, but still he had the memory of camp meeting days to inform him of what was happening.

They convinced him that his granddaughter had joined the church and with handshaking the people were welcoming her into the fold. So he did his part. He rose to his feet and began shouting at the top of his voice.—Indianapolis News.

Power From Ocean Tides

So far little power as has been abstracted from ocean tides has been insignificant. The rise and fall of the tides is not very great, even though it does amount to 70 feet in some places, and hence if any considerable power is to be obtained basins of large area must be used.

By damming the bay at Mont St. Michel in France, where the tide rises about 45 feet, it is estimated that enough power may be obtained to operate half of the industries of France. A French engineer with vast powers of imagination has conceived the idea of building dikes across the channel and across the Thames estuary to form two large tidal basins which may be used alternately to furnish a continuous supply of power.

Shelves Are Fireproof.

Not a stick of wood is used in two fireproof houses being built in England as an experiment, says an illustrated article in Popular Mechanics magazine. Concrete and steel are used exclusively, the floors being of jointless composition with rounded corners, while window frames, trimmings, doors, staircases, and even the cupboard shelves are of steel. The cottages are fitted with every modern improvement and are said to have excellent similar dwellings of wood or brick, both in time and cost of construction.

About the Weather.

In Fairfax county, near the old home of George Washington, a woodcutter without friends died the other day. At the funeral services there was no one to make an address. Volunteers were asked for, and when, after a few minutes, no one responded, a newcomer, who hailed from the Pacific coast, rose and said:

"Well, if nobody else has anything to say, I'd like to drop a few remarks on the remarkable health-giving properties of California weather."

Not a Handicap.

The Americans were not handicapped on the western front by their slight knowledge of the French language. As a matter of fact it was decidedly proved—the German dispatches—that the American soldiers could speak in any old language.—London Telegraph.

RECOGNIZE GOSPEL OF LABOR

Law of Nature Demands Certain Quantity of Work From All Kinds of People.

"The law of nature is that a certain quantity of work is necessary to produce a certain quantity of good, of any kind whatever. If you want knowledge, you must toil for it; and if pleasure, you must toil for it." These words of John Ruskin are especially appropriate now. Arthur Hunt Chute writes in Leslie's.

This admonition is needed not merely by the manual laborers, but also by all classes, and especially by the "poodle fakers" of so-called high society.

An afternoon trip to the most expensive hotels discloses the fact that the war has not completely purged us from the idle rich. One may encounter there a new species, formerly known as a "lounging lizard," now called a "sofa crotchet." A soldier pointed me out one of these specimens, exclaiming: "Think of our brave who have fallen, and a thing like that survives!"

"We won this war—why? Because we heeded the law of sweat. In the crucial hour our society spewed out of its mouth the idle rich and the idle poor. We tolerated only one class, the workers. Vincent Astor and Kingdon Gould had to step up and do their duty just the same as the Princeton twins from 'Little Italy.' Now that the war is won, this law of sweat should remain imperative for all classes. Every man and every woman owes a duty of work to his age, and society of the future should be so organized as to insure that that duty is paid."

Referring to the law of sweat, we must realize that there are two ways in which a man may fulfill his obligation, either by brain sweat or by brawn sweat. Rightly speaking, the manual workers belong just as truly among the laboring classes as the manual workers. In the truest sense both are producers.

Bird Known in Every State

Writer suggests That the Flicker Might Well Be Adopted as America's National Bird.

The alert and industrious flicker is suggested by Frank M. Chapman, writing in "Our Winter Birds," as the national bird, because it is a native of every state in the Union. He says it is also adaptive and intelligent, peaceful though brave, useful and beautiful, but he cannot sing. The bird makes up for his failure to contribute vocal notes by drumming exhibitions that any trick snare drummer would envy. When the bird gets on a tin roof, or gutter, and is feeling facetious, its work with its beak is marvelous.

"It wins its way peacefully if it can but if it is aroused it fights for all it is worth." Mr. Chapman writes, "It is a beautiful bird, known by many other names, such as crescent bird, because of the black crescent on its breast; golden-winged woodpecker, because of the yellow revealed in its wings when it flies; the cotton wump, because of the white of its back; and the parrot and yellow-bammer. No house is unpleased between Central America and Canada and its character, habits and appearance it is clearly a credit to the country."

One or the Other Imperative.

BOUND TO GET THAT HAT

Hoosier Considered Waded in Cold Water a Small Price to Pay for Recovery of Headgear.

Back at home when his hat blew off and started floating down the creek he waded right in after it. A wading now and then is nothing, but a good hat, especially a good Sunday hat, is hard to find, remarks the Indianapolis News.

He came to Indianapolis on Sunday. He wore his light-blue Sunday suit and his best Sunday hat. He had been reading about the welcome home preparations and had determined to see for himself. So when he landed at the Traction Terminal station he made a bee-line for Monument circle. It was all as he had read. The Victory arch, the Greek pillars, all white and clean, the staid old monument in the center. Would he be there on Wednesday when the boys marched past? Well, now would—!

The frisky May breeze caught his Sunday hat. It lifted it high and wafted it gently down into the Monument fountain. He looked about in dismay. The Sunday crowd grinned and stayed to see the fun. His respiration, carrying a long pole. He fished in vain from the sidewalk for his elusive headpiece. Finally, in disgust, he pulled off his tan oxfords and his heavy wool socks. He did not wear B. V. D.'s, so he rolled up the shanks of his long winter variety. Then shamelessly he waded in. Diana, in all her glory, did not exceed this honest Hoosier. The crowd laughed. What did he care! There was his Sunday hat, sailing bravely about in the Monument fountain. He plunged on. The hat was his again. He planted it firmly on his head, put on his shoes and woolen socks and strodded down the street.

Bit the Senes.

Charley, the cook, has a mania for "shooting craps." One day he missed his dice, and having always worn a smile, it was at once noted that there was something wrong, because he was all gloom and had a solemn look like one who had come to great grief. We had lunch for supper. The bugler, having a heaping mess kit full of hash, was making great progress when all of a sudden he bit into something harder to eat than hash. Charley is once more wearing his smile of contentment, being satisfied now with himself and the world.

New Splint Works Well.

The treatment of broken and otherwise injured arms has been somewhat facilitated by the invention of a new splint, which is a mechanical device ready for instant use in any case without regard to its character. It is in use where a great number of cases are to be treated as quickly as possible, that this new device will be of the greatest value. It is adjusted to the body of the patient. It can be used on either arm and may be adjusted to any position in which it may be desired to hold the injured arm. It is a combination of metal rods, with suitable joints and hinges, so that the arm is properly supported and protected at all times.

No Bites, No Wedding.

The only serious fault of the bride-to-be was that she was never known to be on time. Every place she went she was late, and it had gotten to be such an old story that even the minister, knowing of her falling attendance, to reading her as if it were a wedding rehearsal.

"You know," he said, "the wedding ceremony is at 5 o'clock sharp; you must be here on time."

She looked at the clergyman with a twinkle in her eye.

"Well, there is one thing—the wedding cannot go on very well without me, can it?"

"The clergyman had to admit that she had the best of him."
